

Foreign Intelligence.

PARIS, September 4.

The anniversary of the 4th of September was celebrated this day in the decaying temples, and in the camp de mars. Sieyes, the president of the directory pronounced an harangue upon the occasion.

On the preceding evening the directory issued another order, the object of which was to apply the law of the 4th September to the proprietors and editors of the journals arrested yesterday. The place of their banishment is Oleron. They were allowed two months to repair thither, in conformity with the law of the 8th September, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight; and those who shall not within that time make their declaration, are to be placed on the list of emigrants.

It is Dismotte who commands at Breff in the absence of Bruix.

Macedonid is at this moment at Paris, and has already had a conference with the minister of war.

FRENCH ARMIES, &c.

Moreau after the battle of Novi, had at first determined to quit his post and to retreat to Savona; but having learned how much the enemy had suffered, he renounced his first design, and determined to cover the Genoese territory. We shall remain in that part on the defensive, at least, until the arrival of Championnet, who will bring with him a reinforcement of 30,000 men to join him, from his army of the Alps.

The minister of war has particularly enjoined the commander in chief of the army of England to keep a vigilant eye upon the department of the Marine and Loire. He at the same time instructed him to form a column of two or three thousand men, with a train of light artillery, to be ready to act as occasion may require—to keep that body of men in continual activity, and to direct it against every point where the brigands may attempt to assemble, in order to crush them effectually.

September 7.

Massena's army is now augmented to one hundred thousand men; and will not long remain idle.

Our army of the Rhine advances into Germany without meeting with any obstacles. It is exacting contributions. It has been encamped before Mannheim, with the advanced post in the valley of Neckar. Head quarters is at Heilbrunn. The army is 30,000 strong. It will attack Philippsburgh; but its great object is to divide the army of the Archduke, and oblige him to weaken his position in front of Massena.

GENERAL SUCRET.

To the Minister of War.

"The enemy's loss at Novi exceeded ours.—It was upwards of 8000. Thus after 14 hours obstinate fighting, the French army would have remained masters of the field, if the minds of the officers and soldiers had been affected by the loss of their brave commander.

"The successes obtained by gen. Kleinau, have raised the courage of our troops, and the greatest part of them now desire to engage the Russians, whom they have had an opportunity of knowing and conquering during the whole of the battle of Novi.

[Signed,] SUCRET.
[Counter signed,] BERNADOTTE.

Head Quarters at Cornigliano, August 24.

"Since the unfortunate day of the 15th August, the enemy, to our great astonishment have made no preparations to follow us; and we have resumed our positions in the mountains of Liguria. The citadel of Tortona, having lost hopes of succour, capitulated yesterday. The enemy left but a very few troops between Alessandria and Tortona. They marched with the main body towards Asti, which shewed their design to besiege Coni, the only strong place of which we are in possession in Piedmont.

They have also detached a corps of 20,000 men against Genoa, who has come down with part of the army of the Alps, into the environs of Suza.

"We cannot long maintain ourselves in the position which we now occupy. In the first place, our army is not sufficiently numerous, and run the risk of being entirely destroyed; on the other hand, the mountains of Liguria are very barren, and the cavalry and the artillery horses perish daily, owing to bad food. The hay is very bad, and for three months past oats have altogether failed us. Genoa can no longer afford us any assistance. The government of that place is alarmed at the approach of the Austrians. One of the Directory has attempted to take flight; another has given in his resignation. The workmen and sailors are all patriots, and will see our departure with grief; but the merchants whose commerce has been on the decline for three years past, are anxiously desirous of the arrival of the English, from whom they hope to obtain a free trade. These considerations are not those which are most powerful. Our army is in want of every thing, and the Treasury is empty. A sum of 300,000 livres, which was on its way from France, and which was expected with the greatest impatience, was stopped at Savona by gen. St. Cyr, in order to discharge the pay of his army, which was four months in arrears. This gen. was compelled to this measure by the discontent which the 2d divisions which he commanded have loudly testified. The contractors who are not paid, and who are daily cheated by the bills which are given them on the Treasury of Paris, will no longer do their duty. Drafts have lately been given them which have not been paid; and several soldiers have been obliged also to receive them. It appears as if every thing conspired against this army."

The army of Italy still remains in the Genoese territory, on the defensive. Championnet is moving towards it with 30,000 men. He has provisioned Coni, and marched a detachment to Fenestrelles.

LONDON, September 16.

The 1st and 2d divisions, containing a bout 10,000 troops, sailed yesterday from Deal, for the Texel. A fleet with cavalry, remain here.

THE DUTCH FLEET.

Of 12 sail of the line, arrived yesterday at Ozeley Bay, from the Texel. Such of the Dutch sailors who declared for the Stadholder, were drafted out of the respective ships before the fleet sailed.

THE SPANISH SQUADRONS.

From Rochefort has escaped into L'Orient, Ad. Warren was in fight of it, but too far to leeward to come up with it.

September 17.

Private letters mention the marching of the Russian and British troops, for the neighbourhood of Alkmaar, where the army is strongly entrenched. Alkmaar has been summoned, and will be assaulted. The Prince of Orange has 5000 Dutch volunteers with him. A flotilla is ordered to bombard Amsterdam, while 900 volunteer seamen attack the Dutch forts.

The French threaten, and are making preparations for a general inundation of the country;—but the Dutch will oppose the measure.

Great numbers of Dutch troops join the Prince's flag.

As soon as the Russian and other reinforcements arrive, the army pushes forward. Three reinforcements reached the army on Monday last.

September 19.

The Archduke has quitted Switzerland with a large part of his army, and marched to Donauwelling, to oppose the French who have lately passed the Rhine, into Suabia, in which, so say Frankfurt accounts, he has been successful. General Hotze, commands the Austrian army in Switzerland, to act on the defensive; waiting the reinforcements which are marching from Italy, under General Kray.

The most important article by the Hamburg mail, is, of the French having crossed the Rhine, into Suabia. An article from Dieburg mentions, that they have been completely defeated by the Austrians six leagues from Heidelberg; but by forcing the Archduke to march into Suabia, they expect Massena will succeed in obliging the Austrians to evacuate Switzerland.

In the electorate of Mentz, the people have risen on mass and driven the French back to Offenback, and threaten the city of Mentz, which as well as Cassel, is declared in a state of siege.

In the palace of Tippoo Saib, in Seringapatam, was found a treaty, he concluded with the French, which is sent home by the governor general. In this is a stipulation, that Tippoo should divide with the enemy the English ships that should be captured, and also the different sea ports on the coasts of Malabar and Coromandel.

September 20.

On Tuesday evening his Majesty's sloop L'Espeigle arrived in Yarmouth roads, with dispatches from the British army in Holland. L'Espeigle left the Texel on Sunday last.

Eleven thousand troops, British and Russians, were to move forward on Monday from the Helder, to join the main army, and 5000 more were preparing to disembark. The whole were in the highest health and spirits.

All the letters yet come to hand express the most sanguine hopes of Amsterdam being very speedily in our possession, if the French in their retreat, did not inundate the country, for which, by accounts received from the head-quarters of the British army, it was apprehended they were making preparations.

It is natural to suppose, however, that this is a measure which the great majority of the Dutch would rise up to oppose; and it is a measure of all others calculated to unite that people against the common enemy of civilized society; for the people of Holland must be convinced, that by adopting so desperate a measure as that of a general inundation, the French did not consider not only the future welfare, but the present existence of a great proportion of the inhabitants of Holland.

We know nothing more calculated to open the eyes of what the French call the Batavian people, than this measure of destruction, which they meditated against them. The idea of such a measure being in contemplation, however, was accelerating the landing and march of our troops, for it was conceived possible that we might press upon the French so fast, that they might not be able to accomplish their murderous and diabolical designs.

The Juno frigate, commanded by Captain Dundas, had been lightened, for the purpose of her sailing up as near as possible to Amsterdam, and she was to be accompanied by all the gun and other vessels of force that could be adapted to the navigation of the Zuyder Zee. Vice Admiral Mitchell, whose judgment and spirit are equal to every emergency, was himself to command this armament, with his flag displayed on board the Juno.

By accounts daily received by those who flock to range themselves under the flag of the Hereditary Prince of Orange, there is every reason to suppose that the main body of the Dutch troops at Amsterdam and Rotterdam will, at the approach of the combined force, join the Orange flag.

Our army had remained quiet in their position till Sunday morning last. When the reinforcements reached them, which would be on Monday last, they were expected to advance.

September 21.

Major Dalton arrived yesterday from Holland. No action since the 10th has taken place. The French have begun to cut through the dykes, to retard the operations of our army. But Amsterdam is to be attacked by sea.

From the Duke of York, to Mr. Dundas. Helder, Sept. 24, 1799.

SIR,

I have to acquaint you with my arrival at this place yesterday evening, having sailed from D. Al on board the Amethyst frigate on Monday morning the 9th inst.

Upon coming on shore, I had great satisfaction in witnessing the disembarkation of eight battalions of Russian auxiliary troops consisting of 7000 men under the command of Lieut. Gen. D'Hermann, which had arrived from Revel in the course of the preceding day and yesterday morning. I afterwards saw these troops upon their march towards the position occupied by the British near Schagen; and I have great pleasure in assuring you that, from their appearance in every respect the most happy consequences may be expected from their co-operation with his Majesty's arms in this country; Lieutenant General D'Hermann seems to enter most heartily into our views, and I form very sanguine hopes of receiving essential assistance from his zeal and experience.

"I understand that Sir Ralph Abercromby has made you acquainted with his having repulsed the enemy in an attack made upon him on Tuesday last. I proceed to join him at his quarters at Schagen immediately.

"I have had the pleasure to meet the Hereditary Prince of Orange here. His Serene Highness is occupied in arranging into corps a large body of deserters from the Batavian army, and volunteers from the Dutch ships of war which have proceeded to England. Every assistance shall be given to his Serene Highness to render these corps an efficient addition to our force.

"I am, Sir, yours, FREDERICK."
