DIALOGUE OF THE DEAD.

[Translated from the Almanech des Honnêtes Gens.] MIRABEAU. Ah, what! is it you, monsieur le ci-devant Duke ?-

LAROCHEFOUCAULD. Ah! do I fee you there, Monsieur le ei-devant Count ?

Mir. You arrive in good time, for you had not yet become decrepit.

Laroch. You have arrived here in sill better feafor than myfelf.

Mir. Oh! my dear ei-devant Duke, they arrive here at all hours, at every age.

Leroeb. Do not aftonish yourself then,

As for me, I followed pleasure as a business: railing, disputing, foribbling one half the day, drunk the other half; a libertine to excess, such courses of life have advanced my journey many years. But you,—you were a little Cato; you purfued a conduct which promifed you a lengthened old Laroch. And is that any reason for ar-riving late in this country? Cate of whom you speak, did not be arrive here before, his time ? and Seneca --- ?

Mir. Ah! it is not then your natural death that brings you among it us?

Laroob, My natural death? oh! a most willain-like death. I had my throat cut, I was affaifinated, carved up by raggamuffins. And do you think that, truly, a natural death for a Duke, for a man of my name, for a gentleman decorated with the cordon rouge, for a legislator, for a president of depart-

Mir. You frighten me, and although I am incapable of fuffering, I feel re-kindled within me the boilings of choler against him who has cut your throat, affaffinated you, cut you in pieces by means of raggamuffins, Who is this fame monfler? Laroch. YOU.

Mir. Me! I who am here, have been above for the purpose of decollating you ! Come, my dear ci-devant Duke, you have not got your head well fent back yet.

Laroch. Oh! I know that you are not eredulous: but believe in your ears and your eyes. Do you fee on the opposite borders of the Styx, that innumerable crowd which presses to pass to our side? Do you hear the answer which all those people make to the heart of flint, who is assouished at fuch a concourse?

Mir. I fee....... ah! just heaven! it is she herself! I fee a princess of Savoy.......... oh! how is she disfigured! What a numerous and strange crowd follows her! Messieurs of the Clergy of France, magistrates, men of letters, ministers, administrators, municipal officers, justices of the peace. Ah! day of God, this will never have an end! but tell me, then, my dear ci-devant Duke, that poor France is then d populated!

Laroeb. Liften, liften to the answer which they give to Charon who afks them: who is the monster who has murdered you

Mir. Ah! yes, I learn with wonder! they all answer: it is Mirabeau: but by the holy declaration of rights, I do not re-visit the earth; those dead are all fools. I swear by all the infernal powers, that in my whole life I never killed any body, faill less should I, being all the while a poor shade, return to occupy myself in the passime of killing those alive. I must, in order to that, revisit that villainous land which they inha-bit, and I have not, I assure you, any penchant that way. Perhaps you, who are versed in history, are acquainted with that of Orpheus; you know that men never quit the regions which I inhabit.

Larach. Yes, Yes, but in coming to inhabit them, you left in those which you quitted, your poignards. It is those poignards which are plunged into the breasts of the

Mir. Of what poignards do you tell me? in the name of the Gods, give me the explication of this enigma! Hold, my dear ci-devant Duke, if you tell me that it is the aristocrats who have dispatched all those new-comers, I should understand that the aristocrats have had the upper hand, and that they have taken their revenge; but as I see amongst these dead, still more of aristorats than of conflitutionalifis, I can comorehend nothing but nothing at all, as to what I fee, or as to what I hear.

Laroch. You will understand by and by; all those dead there, are about to develope to you, very clearly, how, with your foolithness, your atrocities your declaration of rights, your pelliferous theories, your impure doctrine concerning the government of nations, you have left men of fubiliance without force, and have subjected them to the direction of villains. I have not time to unveil to you all of this, I am haltening to betake myleif to that quarter of the Elyhan fields where dwell Bayle, Epicurus, D. Abenbert, Diderot, Voltaire, J. J. Rouffeau; it would retard me from going to forget in the pleasure of their tocicty, all the differences of my other life. Where are they? shew me their dwelling.

Mir. Where are they? You must not think to find them here, my dear ci-devant

Duke, they are and petites-maisons.*

Laroche. And petites-maisons!

Mir. Yes, indeed! They have them in Mir. Yes, indeed! They have them in this world as well as in the other. If they had been left with the other shadows, they would have made pretty business for us here. Pluto knew it long since, and it is not for nothing that he holds a sceptre of iren. He puts in probation all men of that description who come amongst us; if they prove the many petitesincorrigible, he disputches them aux petites-maisons; he swore to me the other day, make menry amidit all; but the end will that without this precaution, his empire Laroch. But why are not you then in those petites-maisons?

Mir. I also wished, on arriving here, to regale the dead with my common place topics of independence, equality, &c: one day, in the midft of one of my harangues, the huffars of Proferpine came to feize me: I was put in the place of Ixion, and condemned to roll the rock of Silyphus; when Irlaxed in my toil, Cerberus gave me a bite with his teeth. You may conceive that I found this this exercise most impleasant. At the end of three days, I asked pardon, and obtained it; and fince, have never been seized with a phantaly to recommence my harangues.

Laroch. Behold, here, the heft producy which strikes my eyes on ar wing smoness the dead: I here find Mirabean wife.

Mir. - A truce to jeffing, Months in President de departement ; we do not luis that here between men who have the fant wrongs to reproach each other with. As now in my turn, I will put a question to real.

In what state have you left the king of the Frenck, his spoule, whom I have to much calumniated, her interesting later, her annable daughter, and the little prince-royal of such statering hopes.....?

Mir. What is it you tell me? Those ariffocrats, then, have quickly regained the ground they loft by my means!

Laroch. Ah! no; ariflectacy had nothing to do with all that; but fee those Messicurs who are advancing, you will be able to gather from them all that you wish to know. Tell me, before we part, who are then the fages of this new world, and where must I go to find them?

Mir. Take to the right, traverse those neads enamelled with flowers, and which you perceive to be sprinkled with little filver rivulats; at the end of these you will find an enchanted country, which combines all the delights of the empire of the gods. It is there are the dwellings of Fenelon, of Bossuer, of Turenne, of the great Condé, of Louis XI, of Louis XIV, of Racine, Boileau, of Bourdaloue, of Pompignan, of Greffet, and of all those who resemble them. I council you to fojourn there ; you will find it well to do fo. Adieu.

Laroch, How were we in error above! d wherefore have I, like Mirabeau, waited till dead to be wife?

Not being adept in the French language, I am at a loss for a meaning to this term. If it is meant, that each of those at theirical arcificers of ruin, inhabits a separate templum Cloaciax, it must be consessed that they are appositely disposed of. A sew philosophers of the same stock anight be spared from America. It is said of the rightwous, that they rest from their labors, and their works sollow them: What, then, more satural, than that the sate of the prosane should be, to rest from their labors, and sellow their works?

POFFICI IL. IN PRIVY COUNCIL.

Saturday, 5th October, 1799. His honor the lieutenant-governor laid before the Board a Circular Letter from his Grace the Dake of Portland, one of his Majety's Principal Secretaries of State, flating, that in confequence of opening the Ports in his Majety's West-India islands, to foreign vessels, for the importation of provisions, Muscovado Sugar had been permitted in several of the Islands, to be exported in American bottoms, in return for the provisions brought in those vessels which is not only contrary to the laws of Navigation but very detrimental to the comnercee, navigation and revenue of Great-Britain, especially as sugar now pays no duty on such exportation; and submitted to the board, the propriety of amending their resolution of 28th August, 1798, in regard to such return cargoes:

The Board having taken the same into their most serious consideration:

Refolved, That his honor the lieutsnantgovernor be advised, to recommend to the everal offices of his Majesty's custom's, at the leveral ports of this illand, to permit the first day of March next, and un il six months notice should be given to the contrary; upon the like terms, charges and conditions, and subject to the same rules, regulations, visitations and searches, as are observed with respect to vessels importing provisions to this island.

Resolved, That from and after the first day of January next, all neutral vessels importing the foregoing articles, under the authority of the above resolution, be permitted to export, from any port or ports, place or places, of this island, such articles (sugar, cocoa-nuts, cossee, ginger and pimento excepted) as may be exported to foreign parts; upon the like terms, stipulations, charges and conditions, as are observed with respect to British vessels, in the like

They leverally confolled the horr d facts with which french, his spoule, whom calumniated, her interesting ther hand ble daughter, and the little printer-royal of such flattering hopes......?

Laroch. Ah! in mercy, proceed no farther; lead me to the river of Lethe, that I may go quickly to drink if it a large cap, to enable me to forget that unfortunate family: if I were to think of them, I should find an hell even in the Elysian fields.

Mir. And my glory! Do they still throng continually to the Pantheon, to strew coronets upon my tomb?

Laroch. Yourglory passes with no greater currency amongs the laving than that of Cartouche and of Raratillac: at this flour that I am speaking to you, your assessment the second of the confederates, gave him a mortal blow with the handspike. board the schooner. They will receive their trials the next sta-ted sessions, to be held the 11th April one thousand eight-hundred.

From the New York Gazette,

SIR, " Greenleaf's New Daily Advertiser" of this morning contains a publication entitled, "Extract of a letter from Philadelphia, dated September 20th" which charges me with being at the "bottom" of an " Effort recently made to suppress the Aurora" (a news-paper of that city) by pecuniary means.

It is well known, that I have long been the object of the most malignant calumnies of the faction opposed to our government through the medium of the papers devoted to their views—Hitherto I have forborne to refort to the laws for the punishment of the authors or abettors; and were I to confult personal confiderations alone, I should continue in this course, repaying hatred with contempt. But public motives now compel me to a different conduct. The defigns of that faction to overturn our government, and with it the great Pillars of focial fecurity and happiners, in this country, become every day more manifest, and have of late acquired a degree of fystem, which render them formidable. One principal Engine for effecting the scheme, is by audacious false-hoods to destroy the confidence of the people in all those, who are in any degree conspicu-ous among the supporters of the govern-ment;—An Engine which has been employed in time past with too much success, and which, unless counteracted, in seture, is likely to be attended with very fatal confequences-To counteract it is therefore a duty to the community.

Among the specimens of this contrivance, that which is the subject of the present Letter, demands peculiar attention. A bolder ter, demands peculiar attention. A bolder calumny; one more abfolutely defirme of foundation was never propagated. And its dangerous tendency needs no comment; being calculated to inspire the beinef, that the Independence and Liberty of the Prefs are endangered by the intrigues of ambitious Citizens, aided by Foreign Gold.

In fo flagrant a case, the force of the laws much be tried.

must be tried. I therefore request that you will take simmediate measures towards the profesution of the persons who conduct the ncluded paper.
