SATURDAY EVENING, JANUARY 4.

TO THE PUBLIC.

The Comptroller General of Pennsylvania, Mr. John Donaldson, having very fortunately arrived in Philadelphia on Tuesday last, I presented to him the Libel which was published against me in Fenno's Gazette of the 18th inst. and the accounts, vouchers, and correspondence, in relation to my agency on the Western Expedition of 1794.—I requested Mr. Donaldson, with the candor of a Gentleman, as well as with the strictness of a Public Officer, to point out any objectionable part of my conduct; and after his examination of the papers, I proposed the questions, and received the answers, which I now deem it my duty to subjoin for the satisfaction of the public.
Having pursued this course, I am confident it will not be expected, that I should descend any further to notice, thro' the medium of the press, the malice, ignorance and impertinence of anonymous scribblers.
A. J. DALLAS.
Philad. 30th Dec. 1799.

QUESTIONS
Proposed to Mr. Donaldson, as the basis of this statement of facts, arising from an examination of Mr. Dallas's papers.
1. Did I ever draw any money out of the Treasury as a private man, or on my private account; and could such a draft, in any case be admitted?
2. Were not my accounts and vouchers for the bounty and contingent expences of the expedition of 1794, exhibited in February 1796, to the Register General—Were they not examined by him, and were not the charges vouched, by receipts, to amount of 48,151 dollars, 61-100?

3. Were not my accounts and vouchers for the pay of the Militia on the Western Expedition, rendered on the 6th of June, 1795?
4. Was I not employed and empowered to collect and settle the Forage and Ration Accounts of the Militia on the Western Expedition?—Was I not diligent in my endeavour to accomplish such settlement?—And was the fund for that object retained by me, without sufficient cause?
5. Was not the state of the fund referred by me, from time to time, communicated to you, to the Register General, and to the Committee of Ways and Means?
6. What is the amount paid by me into the Treasury and what sum appears from the vouchers to be remaining in my hands, to be accounted for by payment, or by claims filed?

A. J. DALLAS.
ANSWERS
Given by Mr. Donaldson to the preceding questions.
1. No money could be drawn from the Treasury, by any individual, for any private purpose. A day or two before the act of appropriation passed, and while it was depending, in order to facilitate the operations of the government, some advances were made to pay the bounty to the troops, at the particular solicitation of the members of the Legislature.
2. The accounts for bounty, &c. which particularly respected Pennsylvania were exhibited in 1796. Sometime before June, 1796, I saw them at the Register's Office. He consulted with me on the business, and in consequence thereof a communication was made to Mr. Dallas. It appeared that 48,157, 61-000 dollars, had been disbursed by Mr. Dallas, as per receipts exhibited.—The account was returned, in order that a complete and final settlement might be made, as a principal part of the settlement depended upon producing the pay rolls, which had been delivered to Col. Neville, or certified copies, from the proper officers of the United States.

3. The Accounts and Vouchers for Pay Rolls were rendered to Col. Neville, for 138,556 82-100 dollars, as appears by his receipt dated 6th June, 1795.
4. The forage and ration Account was referred for settlement to the Paymaster general of the Pennsylvania militia. Repeated applications were made to the paymasters of regiments and companies, without accom-

* Although this account was not exhibited till 1796, it is proper to remark, that almost all the disbursements contained in it, were made in 1799. It will be well recollected, that the bounty was paid either before, or on the march of the troops.
† It may be proper to explain the nature and operation of the funds intrusted to me for the Western Expedition. The Legislature of Pennsylvania granted 120,000 dollars, of which I received, at different times, 92,000 dollars. A considerable sum was immediately absorbed in bounty and contingencies for the march of the troops. A still larger sum was made up at the Bank in notes of a small denomination, and carried by Mr. Brown and myself throughout the march, for the purpose of making advances wherever they were properly required. In this manner the state fund was nearly, if not entirely exhausted, before any pecuniary assistance was obtained from the Treasury of the United States; so that the situation of my cash, at every subsequent period, fluctuated according, on the one hand, to the sums, which were occasionally paid to me by Col. Neville, and, on the other, to the progressive settlement of pay rolls.

publishing the object. Such reports and documents as were received by Mr. Dallas were furnished to the Accountant's Office.—I have examined the correspondence between Mr. Dallas and the Department of War, in which he was employed and required to settle these accounts: I have also, examined his correspondence with the officers, with whom this settlement was to be made, and I observe that every method was diligently pursued by him, to bring about the object, but without success. When he found that he could not succeed, and being called on by the Department of Accounts, with their advice, he paid 17,541 9-100 dollars in the Treasury, (the estimated balance of his account) leaving 5,000 dollars in his hands for claims filed.
5. I was generally acquainted with the state of the fund in the Paymaster's hands for the purpose of discharging the claims for forage and rations; and I was, also, acquainted with the difficulties, that attended the final settlement of the account at the War-Office, where the receipt of each individual on the pay-rolls were required to be produced from the Regimental and Company Paymaster; which circumstances were communicated to the Committee of Ways and Means.
6. The balance in Mr. Dallas's hands, in the close of the year 1796, was 22,541 9-100 dollars on a statement exhibited by him, of which sum he paid 17,541 9-100 dollars in the Treasury, leaving, as a balance mentioned, a balance of 5,000 dollars in his hands. In April 1799, however, a further sum of 2,500 dollars were paid into the Treasury, leaving as above-mentioned, a balance of 500 dollars in his hands. In April, 1799, however, a further sum of 2,500 dollars were paid into the Treasury leaving the balance in his hands for sums stated to have been disbursed or claimed.

JOHN DONALDSON.
No. 1.
From Mr. Dallas to Col. Gurney.

Dear Sir,
Permit me again to request the favour of your attention to the ration and forage account. I am called upon every day; but as I have received no answer, nor instructions from the War-Office, I cannot proceed in the settlement. You are regarded from your rank on the expedition, as, in some degree, bound to see that justice is done to the Pennsylvania line; and I know the activity of your disposition on occasions of a public and benevolent nature. If, indeed, I do not hear definitively from the War-Office before the meeting of the Legislature, I shall think it incumbent on me to settle my accounts with the state, without attending to this branch of them, and pay over the balance then in my hands. It is probable however, that on your application at the War-Office, some immediate and effectual arrangement will be made.
I am, &c.

No. II.
Col. Guernsey to Mr. Dallas.
Philadelphia, October 17, 1796
Dear Sir,
I have this moment received your obliging note of Saturday, on a subject I have certainly very much at heart, and feel all that obligation to see this business properly adjusted, which you are pleased to suggest. And though I have ceased to petition you, I have not been silent with the War-Office. When last there, I was informed that a box of papers had been lodged, supposed to contain all the accounts, directed to Col. Neville, (I think it was laid from you) and Neville was expected in town soon, when that every attention would be given on the part of the Office. This gave it such a complexion, that I have not been there for several weeks past, waiting for the Colonel's arrival. If you should be of opinion, there is any further means, by which I can be instrumental in accomplishing a final close of this business, you have only to command me.
I am &c.
(Signed,) FRANCIS GURNEY.
No. III.
Mr. Dallas to Colonel Guerney.
November 30, 1796.

Dear Sir,
Permit me to remind you, that consistently with my own judgment, I cannot delay settling with the State, longer than Saturday next, in expectation of final instructions for paying the forage and ration account. If the money is once paid into the Treasury, you will readily conceive the difficulty of obtaining it for the present object.
I am, &c.
A. J. DALLAS.
Remarks on the above.
In the above publication no fact is stated and no inference drawn which Mr. Dallas had not affirmed in his first self-condemning defence. Too crafty not to perceive the advantage to be gained by adding the sanction of Mr. Donaldson's name to his own lucubrations, he has been careless whether the facts which this gentleman could assert were relevant or not. Satisfied with having once been enabled to procure so reputable a compurgator, he is resolved no longer to notice the impertinence of anonymous scribblers.
† That my solicitude upon the subject of the forage and ration account may be made more apparent, I have selected for publication the following letters from the mass of my correspondence.
