

Foreign Intelligence.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Downing Street, October 29, 1799.

A dispatch, of which the following is a copy, has been received from Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Clinton, by the right Hon. Lord Grenville, his Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Foreign Department.

Cairo, October 9, 1799.

My Lord,

When I sent your Lordship my last dispatch on the 2d inst. From Glaris, the report from General Rosenberg, whose division composed that rear guard, had not reached head-quarters. I have now the honour to inform your Lordship that the enemy, having received a considerable reinforcement from Zug, renewed on the 1st inst. their attack near the village of Muttens, where in consequence of the fatigue the troops had undergone the preceding day, they had been obliged to halt. A strong column of the enemy advanced by the road in the center of the valley, while two others, skirting the foot of the mountains on each side, endeavored to get in the rear of the Russians. The division of General Rosenberg consisted of eight weak battalions and two regiments of Cossacks. Discovering the intention of the enemy he left five battalions as a reserve, and with three, (the breadth of the valley not admitting of a greater front) supported by the Cossacks, he attacked the center of the enemy; their heavy guns for a moment gave them an advantage; but nothing could withstand the headlong attack of the Russian infantry. In the hurry of their retreat an ammunition wagon was overlet, which choked the only road by which the cannon could move; three pieces which immediately taken possession of by the Russians. The flank columns, seeing their center pierced fled. General Rosenberg profited of the confusion of the enemy and pursued them beyond Schwitz. In killed and wounded they lost above 500 men and 13 officers, and 1020 men were taken prisoners. The Russians had in this affair about 300 men killed and wounded. It was the 4th in the evening before the sick and wounded could be transported to Glaris; the road not admitting of the passage of artillery, the guns were destroyed; on the 5th the army marched by the valley of Semli to Elm; the difficulty of the roads made it impossible to remove the wounded. The enemy followed the rear guard, and gained some trifling advantages over it during the first three or four miles of the march; upon a well-timed attack, however, of the Russians, they defeated from any further attempt. On the 6th the army passed the Dixen Mountain, which the snow that had fallen during the last week had rendered dangerous, and several mules and baggage horses were lost on the march. The army is now assembled at this place, and after two days of repose it will march with the army of General Koriakoff.

Have the honor to be, &c.

H. CLINTON.

LONDON, October 10.

NAPPER TANDY, &c.

The following are the particulars respecting the embarkation and arrival of Napper Tandy and his three fellow prisoners, Col Blackwell, c. pt. Montmorency, alias Morris, and George Peters: On the 1st inst. they were conveyed on board the Zenophon frigate at Hambrogh, and immediately set sail for Cuxhaven, at which place they were detained by contrary winds till the 9th, when they put to sea; but the weather continuing extremely bad, the vessel was not able to make the North till Monday morning last; notice of which being soon after received at the admiralty by the Telegraph, Mr. Rose, the messenger, accompanied by Edwards, Dowsett and Perry, (Bow street officers) and other assistants, were sent off express, in two post coaches, and four, to Sheerness, where they arrived at four o'clock on Tuesday morning, and about seven went off in the port admiral's yacht, attended by a six oared barge for the Noie, and got on board the Zenophon at eight, when the prisoners were confined to their charge.

A party of capt. Burgess's Sheppy yeomanry attended at the water side to escort them to Sittingbourne. Here they were delivered to a party of Sir Edward Knatchbull's yeomanry, who escorted them to Rochester, where they were received by Lord Darnley's troop of Cobham yeomanry cavalry, who conducted them into town; and yesterday, at a quarter before one, they passed over Blackfriars bridge, proceeded up Ludgate Hill and the Old Bailey, and between one and two o'clock they arrived at Newgate and were transferred to the custody of Mr. Kirby the keeper, who had prepared two very commodious rooms for their reception, in the centre of the prison, over the chapel. The prisoners conducted themselves with the greatest propriety throughout the whole of their journey to London, and also on board the Zenophon, where it was thought prudent to confine them in separate births, with a sentinel placed at the door of each; but they were, however supplied with every comfort that the ship could afford. Napper Tandy, either from drinking a quantity of Brandy, or taking some medicine just before they sailed, slept from Hambrogh to Cuxhaven, and was for some time very sick and ill. Had Buonaparte and his staff been sent here by Sir Sidney Smith, they could not have excited more curiosity. A vast concourse of people was assembled at the landing place who attended the prisoners and their escort to the garrison gates, where a new concourse was assembled, and so from stage to stage to the end of the journey, every body, old and young, male and female, was anxious to get a peep at this wonderful man, now become, from the happy performance of his misdeeds, a new bone of contention among the powers of Europe.

Every thing relating to personages of such high importance must be interesting to the public; and therefore we subjoin the following description:

Napper Tandy is a large big-boned muscular man, but much broken and emaciated. His hair is quite white from age, cut close behind into his neck, and he appears much enervated. This is indeed very natural, if it be considered that he is near seventy years of age, and has just suffered a long and rigorous confinement, his mind the constant prey of the most painful suspense. He wore a large friar's, a long silk black grey coat, and military boots, which had a very outre effect.

Blackwell and Morris seem to be about five and thirty. They are two tall handsome looking men, wore military dresses, and have a very soldier-like appearance. The former is a man of a very interesting genius, about the middle size, apparently not more than four or five and twenty, and has much the look of a foreigner.

Colonel Blackwell had the command of the French troops that landed in the North of Ireland; the commissions that he and Montmorency bear are in the French army. Napper Tandy was also in that expedition. They are all natives of Ireland, to which country, it is said, they will be transmitted, for trial, after undergoing a previous examination here before the privy council.

Copy of a declaration made by his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, to the Members of the Germanic Empire.

His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, ever animated with zeal for the cause of sovereignty, and wishing to put a stop to the ravages and disorders which have been spread by the impious Government under which France groans, to the remotest countries being fully determined to dispatch his sea and land forces for the support of the sufferers, and to restore Royalty in France without, however, admitting any partition of that country; to re-establish the ancient forms of Government in the United Netherlands, and in the Swiss Cantons; to maintain the integrity of the German Empire; and to look for his reward in the happiness and tranquility of Europe: Providence has blessed his arms, and hitherto the Russian troops have triumphed over the enemies of thrones, religion and social order.

His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias having thus declared his views, and the motives by which he is guided, addresses this declaration to all the members of the German Empire, inviting them to unite forces with his to restore to Europe its ruins permanent tranquility for themselves and their posterity.

Should his Imperial Majesty of all the Russias perceive that they support his views, and rally around him, he will, instead of relaxing his zeal, redouble his exertion, and not sheath his sword before he has seen the downfall of the Monster which threatens to crush all legal authorities. But, should he be left to himself, he will be forced to recall his forces to his states, and to give up a cause so badly supported by those who ought to have the greatest share in its triumph.

Lieut. Col. Montague has been tried by a Court Martial, and displaced from the first Wiltshire regt. for slandering the characters of captains Awdry and Haulton, and by endeavoring to form a party in the regiment.

Capt John Aycough on the 1st of Nov. was tried by a naval court martial, on board the ship Expedition in Sheerness, for the loss of the Blanche, and was honorably acquitted. She was run on shore, it appears, by the carelessness of the pilot.

PLYMOUTH, November 7. This morning arrived a large fleet of transports from the Hellder, with upwards of 7000 Russian troops on board, who are to be landed at Guernsey. Arrived in the South the Fower cutter, of 14 guns, lieutenant Darby, from a cruise off Brest. Five sail of the line that left Brest, and anchored in Cameron Bay, were seen to return to Brest before the Fower left; it is also saw a fleet of merchant vessels, under convoy of two brigs and a lugger, enter that harbor.

BREGENZ, October 16. The French pretend to have forced Suwarrow to quit Mount St. Gothard and Glams; but since the loss of Zurich, it was contrary to his plan to maintain those positions any longer. Generals Jellachich, Petrasch, Aussenburg, and Linken, will defend the Grison country.

BUUSSELS, October 16. The English officer who had been sent with a flag of truce and a dispatch to the commandant of Helvoetsluys from the admiral, cruising at the mouth of the Menes, has been re-conducted on board the cutter that brought him, with the answer of the Batavian officer. As the garrison of Helvoetsluys is not very numerous, and an attack was feared from the enemy, two companies of the German regiment of Saxo-Gotha, which were at Rotterdam, have set out to reinforce it. There are at present before Helvoetsluys only one English cutter and two Luggers. Four other English vessels are cruising before the Ball. It appears to be the design of the English to cut off all the trade of the port of Rotterdam.

STUTGARD, October 18.

The greatest part of Suwarrow's army is arrived at Lindau and Buchoro, where it has joined the corps of General Korsakow, which together amount to 40,000 men. This army will be reviewed on the 24th by the archduke Charles and Prince Suwarrow near Ravensburg. The Prince informed the Archduke by way of compliment, that he intended to serve under his Royal Highness. It is, however, said, that during the ensuing winter the Russian army will act on the defensive; and the Archduke return to the Neckar, to drive the French again from Mannheim.

SUARIA, October 20.

Even the accounts from Bern allow that Prince Suwarrow, when he entered the smaller cantons, was by no means defeated, but on the contrary obtained considerable advantages in successive engagements, and only changed his plan of operations in consequence of the battle of the 26th and 27th. Some accounts state, that Massena is preparing to advance across the Rhine, while others maintain that Suwarrow will be beforehand with him, by advancing into Switzerland.

FRANKFORT, October 22.

During the last two days, the commandant of Mentz has not suffered the passage vessel to fail between that fortress and our city; no passports are granted to travellers, and it is supposed that there are scarcely any troops here. Nine hundred pipes of Rheinish wine, which had been ordered for the use of the garrison, will be sold by public auction.

Accounts were received here yesterday from Darmstadt and its neighbourhood that a heavy cannonade had been heard. It is said that the French attacked the armed peasants and the troops of Mentz, but were defeated.
