

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, November 1.

The injury the Commercial world has sustained by the numerous and extensive failures at Hamburg; the imminency of dead capital through this country, and the loss that would result not only to the Merchant but the funded Capitalist from taking to market an extraordinary quantity of stock, has, we learn from highly respectable authority, induced the Bank to digest a plan, some months since submitted by Mr. Popp to the Minister, to throw a considerable sum into circulation by the nominal loan of at least two millions.

The plan, which is an improvement on Commercial Exchange Bills, proposes that not less than two millions sterling shall be invested in a committee, which shall be empowered to accept from the Merchant a transfer of stock, upon the amount of which he shall be permitted to draw on the Committee at the rate of 40 per cent. on the 3 per cent. on the 4s., and 60 on the 5 per cent. which draft (bearing an interest of 3 1/2 per cent. per day) on being accepted, to pass as National Paper in all departments of the revenue, &c.—The first idea was not only to confine the accommodation to two millions, but the date of the notes to two months, in which case a circulating medium of twelve millions annually would be afforded to the public; but as the benefit would be proportioned to the sum advanced (at least within that sum several times multiplied,) and as there not only would not be a particle of risk, but the stamp revenue would receive a material augmentation, we learn that it is in contemplation to considerably extend the sum and the time.

November 2.

All the accounts brought by the Mail from Switzerland are confused and contradictory. It appears, however, that Suwarrow has removed his head quarters from Core to Feldkirch, and that the whole of the Russian force is now in the Grisons and the Vorarlberg, where their heavy artillery has arrived. There are, it is said, to march to the lake of Constance, through the Grisons. The Russians, Bavarians and Conde's corps are to be concentrated into one army, under the command of Suwarrow. Hotze's and Naudendorfs corps, with the contingents of the Empire, are to be under the Archduke. It is said that the general attack is to be made on Massena; but the season is, perhaps, too far advanced to admit of any very active operations against him. It is probable that the allies will content themselves with occupying strong positions, where they may receive reinforcements. The following is said to be their plan:

The Russians to occupy the districts from the lake of Como to the Vorarlberg, to cover the Gison country, and an Imperial corps of reserve is to protect the celebrated pass near Martins bridge and Naunders. The important position from Lucien Steig to Bergen is to be occupied by General Jellachich, for the protection of Tyrol, and another corps of reserve is to be cantoned from Foeslen to Kempten, in which new position great reinforcements of infantry are expected.—The plains round the lake of Constance are chosen for the center posts of the cavalry, and the head quarters of the Archduke are to be at Stokach. General Szaray will occupy the Black Forest. General Meerfeld is to command the corps of observation against Kehl. The Russian troops will be concentrated on one point, with the Bavarian auxiliary corps, and the army of Conde, under the chief command of Suwarrow. They are estimated at 50,000 men.

November 7.

The intelligence from Egypt published in the last French papers, contains several curious details, among which the following are not the least interesting.

At the beginning of the naval action of Aboukir, admiral Brueys was wounded in the hand, and soon after received a severe wound in the head, but would not quit the deck. A minute after he received a ball which only left him the power of squeezing the hand of rear admiral Gentaume, who wished to conduct him below. He died uttering the following expression: "No! a French admiral ought to die at his post."

Captain Dupetit Thouars, after having an arm and two legs carried away, called for a pipe, and having smoked a few moments, expired, saying—"Crew of the Torment, never strike to the enemy."

General Buonaparte arrived this morning (October 16) at 6 o'clock, with general Berthier and citizens Monge and Bertholet. The other Frenchmen from Egypt arrived in the course of the day.

Some Journals have stated that Buonaparte was induced to return to France in consequence of his hearing of Jourdan's disasters; while others have asserted that his return was hastened by the news of Scherer's defeat. For our part, we maintain that his return was occasioned by the misfortune of both.

SUWARROW.

Frontiers of Swabia, October 3.

Yesterday morning the Russian Generals received the following order from Field-Marshal Suwarrow.

GENTLEMEN,
You will be answerable with your heads for every inch of ground that you shall give up to the enemy. I have advanced by way of Schwitz, and am ready to repair your errors; therefore a courage and resolution which nothing can subdue."

SWABIA, October 3.

The following Brigade Orders have been published, concerning the victory obtained by the Imperial Russian General Rosenberg: "Head-Quarters, Gengenack, Oct. 9.

"The troops are previously informed, that the Imperial Russian General Rosenberg has attacked the enemy near Schwitz, and defeated him, with the loss of several thousand men and a General; the General of Division, LeCourbe was made prisoner, and seven pieces of cannon were taken."

VIENNA, October 9.

Account from Constantinople state, that the Grand Signior has given to Sir Sydney Smith the title of the Brave, and has made him a present of thirty purles in ducaats. The Grand Vizir's army is not expected to arrive in Egypt before November. One half of the deputies from Zante, Cephalonia, &c. who have arrived at Constantinople, have proceeded from thence for St. Petersburg.

The Cardinals assembled at Venice have had several meetings relating to the Conclave, which will be held in the island of St. Giorgio (one of the islands of which Venice consists) in the Convent of the Benedictines, for the election of a Pope. Signor Gonzani has been appointed Secretary to the Holy College.

His Imperial Majesty has appointed the Archduke John to the rank of Major Gen.

NANTES, October 19.

This morning at 4 o'clock, 2000 Chouans from the environs of Segre and Angurs, entered this city without striking a blow, although our population amounts to 70,000 souls. They remained in possession of the place during two hours, opened all the prisons, and put to death several excellent republicans. An action at length took place between them and the few troops in the town, supported by some patriots. The Chouans were forced to retreat, and were pursued near half a mile beyond the walls of Nantes. How unexpected this event! What idea can we form at present of the vigilance and energy of the civil and military authorities, and of the patriotism of the most considerable town of the West? Gen. Griney had six days before marched out for the purpose of reconnoitring, and had advanced as far as Conde with a body of 600 men. The Chouans fired in the night of the 16th on the advanced posts of that small town. The next morning a very warm attack took place, and several on both sides were killed and wounded. On the 18th they determined on the invasion of Nantes, and effected it with shouts of "long live the King and Religion!"

N. B. The Chouans did not enter the arsenal, or take away any arms. They marched towards Rennes, and are said have paid a visit to the Receiver General of Taxes.

DARMSTADT, October 21.

The accounts received on the 19th of the entry of the French into Heidelberg and Mannheim are confirmed. As early as on the 15th and 16th, skirmishes began to take place between the advanced posts at Weinheim and Lorsch, in which the Austrians, not being in sufficient force, were obliged to retreat and the French crossed the Rhine near Worms and Frankenthal. On the 17th the general division, Lorget, the same who repulsed the armed peasants on the 5th, advanced close to the bridge of the Neckar, at Heidelberg, but was not able to destroy it, being of masonry. The Imperialists lined it with batteries, and on the neighboring mountains they had planted small field-pieces which commanded the bridge. The French attacked it by storm, but were three times repulsed, with the loss of six hundred men. The Prince of Schwarzenberg expected that the two squadrons of heavy cavalry, which were advancing to his assistance by way of Heilbronn, would arrive in time, but, finding afterwards that this was impossible, he evacuated Heidelberg on the morning of the 18th, and sent orders to Mannheim for the evacuation of that city. A division of his small corps marched towards Heilbronn, and the remainder towards Bruchsal and Philippsburg. An hour afterwards, the French entered Heidelberg, and demanded a contribution of 100,000 livres. They also entered Mannheim on the 18th, in the best order, but demanded a contribution of 4500 florins. On the following day they quitted that city, to march against Heilbronn and Philippsburg. It is just a month since the Archduke Charles drove the French from Mannheim by storm. Against some of the inhabitants, who at that time had appeared to side with the Austrians, they threatened to proceed with the utmost severity, but many of them had fled to Carlruhe.

The Prince of Schwarzenberg has taken his position on the road leading to Heilbronn.

At Sinsheim and Furldeben are still some Imperial troops. General Lorget attacked them on the 20th, but was repulsed, and is said to have lost 800 men. Yesterday a heavy cannonade was heard from the neighborhood of the Neckar. The French still occupied Heidelberg on the 21st.

October 23, in the evening.

It is this morning reported that general Szaray had advanced against Heidelberg, and succeeded in driving the French from that place, but no particulars are yet known. Travellers state that the Prince of Schwarzenberg had been slightly wounded, and that an Imperial Colonel had been taken prisoner by the French.

A division of French Chateaus were advancing into the Odenwald, but were driven back by the peasants.

The French declared on their entering Mannheim that they would consider the Palatinate as a hostile country. For the expense of the head quarters they imposed a daily contribution of 3500 florins on the city. From Altschäffenberg many families had fled to Hanau and other places, but tranquillity is restored there. In Franconia the peasants are rising in a mass. There are now only 2300 French troops at Mentz.
