WATER-OFFICE.

Centre Square, February 5, 1800.

IN compliance with the instructions of the Committee for watering the city, and with my own inclinations, every possible admittance and information has been given to those citizens who have visited the Works during their progress. The Engines are now arrived, and are immediately to be put up, and it is hoped that it will be thought reasonable and just, both to the Public, and to the Contractor for the Engines, that the workmen should not be interrupted. As a very few months will fully gratify the curiosity of the citizens, by showing them the Engines in full operation, a temporary exclusion of all visitors from the Engine house cannot appear improper.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 20.

No paper will be issued from this office, on Saturday;—on account of the Public Ceremonies in honor of Gen. Washington.

Through the kindness of an obliging friend in Europe, we have received by the Comet, at Baltimore, and an arrival at Charleston, from St. Sebastian's, files of Paris Journals for the month of November. The following articles are translated from them.

PARIS, November 28.

The Barbets continue their ravages in the department of the maritime Alps; they are protected by the Royalists, and massacre the republicans.

In the sitting of the "Legislative Commission of the Council of Ancients," on the 24th November, the central administrations of Yonne and Charente, the judges of the civil tribunal of Sienne and Oise, the citizens of the commune of Laon, felicitated the commission on the triumph of Buonaparte.

The commission approved the resolution of yesterday, which opens to the minister of the interior a credit of eight millions.

It is a mistake that General Champlainet is already on his return to Paris. We had yesterday news from him still dated in Italy. It is not indeed as favorable as we might have expected from the conqueror of the kingdom of Naples; and it appears that in quitting the army of Italy, he will have some reverses to be repaired.

Champlainet is succeeded in the command of the army of Italy by St. Cyr.

By order of the Consuls, all theatrical pieces relative to the affair of St. Cloud, (the triumph of Buonaparte) have been forbidden. There runs a report, that the Archduke has set out suddenly for Vienna. It is added, that in passing by Augbourg, he did not see Suwarow.

Grocaffand Dorimon, one of the excluded deputies, imprisoned in the Temple, has been set at liberty.

Every one builds a constitution after his own fashion, every one gives us his dreams for realities: some preserve the three consuls, others establish a President and Vice-President; now they divide France into twenty-five confederate states, and now into fifty departments; this scheme re-establishes the intendants and the sub-delegates, that one suppresses the central and municipal administrations; such an one announces a Grand Elector who shall have no other function than to appoint to all offices without the right of destitution: he is to hold what they call the folio of benefices. Such another converts the Legislative Body into two chambers; the one composed of two hundred representatives shall discuss the laws, of which the Executive Power shall have the origination; the other, composed of one hundred Senators, shall approve or reject these laws without discussion, only by yes or no.

They speak also of a constitutional jury which shall pronounce in a supreme manner upon all disputes relating to the Constitution; they still speak of counsellors of state, of the introduction of ministers into the Legislative body, of the necessity of having a certain revenue to be eligible to either chamber, or even to be entitled to the privilege of voting; they speak of causing the constitution to be received by the people without presenting it to the Legislative Body; they speak also of dissolving the present councils in order to establish councils conformable to the new constitution. We give this merely as the tenor of private conversations, for we are still ignorant of the basis of the social contract they are preparing for us: the legislative committees have decreed nothing as yet in regard to that object; it is probable in the mean time that we shall know ere fifteen days to what to attach ourselves, and without doubt we shall have some details upon the principal dispositions of our political regeneration.

[L'Ami des Lois.]

An ignorant and incompetent man having assumed upon himself to write a Life of General Washington, we are happy in having it in our power to state that a work of this nature is likely soon to be undertaken by a Gentleman of talents and learning adequate to so important and interesting a task; and who will also possess the advantage of a recourse to the official papers of the departed Hero.

We are authorized in making this statement, by a Letter from the Legatee of the papers of General Washington, wherein that Gentleman mentions several circumstances which will probably forbid him from attempting it; but trusts that the selection of a fit character may be in his power, which he shall endeavor to make immediately.

Mr. A. Diekens, an enterprising young man, is about re-publishing Two Sermons preached by Doctor Ogden of Newark, on the Death of General Washington. These Sermons are particularly valuable, as they record many interesting circumstances in the life of that illustrious man, which, we believe, will be new to the mass of readers. As a Book-eller, studious of publishing good Books, Mr. Diekens merits countenance and applause.

A stated meeting of the American Philosophical Society, will be held at their Hall, to-morrow evening, at 6 o'clock. Samuel H. Smith, Sec'y.

Feb. 20. Married, on Saturday evening last, by the Rev. Dr. Linn, Captain JOHN B. SWARDS to Miss ANN CATHERINE DURN, daughter of Mrs. Durn, of this city.

THEATRE.

Last evening, was performed to a very fashionable audience, another new thing from the fabulous pen of the old Illuminatus. As the Play Bills told us that the production had been revised, and adapted to the American stage, we expected to have found it pruned at least of many highly exceptionable parts which nevertheless were all repeated. Indeed, it is difficult to discern any appearance of what we hope must yet be deemed an adaptation to the American stage. A feasting of the French Revolution is, indeed, introduced, in that scene where a rabble of foreign citizens is assembled, for the purpose of murdering the Governor, and a little Child, and where their orators arrange them from the head of an hoghead. If it is meant that this part of the business should be considered as adapted to the American stage and of course held up for an example, then, I think they had better given us the play as it came from the hands of Kotzebue, without insulting us with this adaptation. The piece is crowded with invective against Priests, with the crimes of nobility, and common place declamation against War; and is as highly fraught with the tenets of the School of Weisbraut as any production that has heretofore invaded us from this vile source.

TALEYRAND.

Citizen Talleyrand has lately displayed at Paris, trait of duplicity and fausse. On the 23d, there appeared in a journal, under the immediate direction of Talleyrand, the following paragraph and letter:

"Citizen Talleyrand, sincerely afflicted at finding the name of citizen Jorry included in the list of those who were affected by the decree of the 26th Brumaire, has just written to the minister of the police a letter which breathes the purest and most delicate sentiment."

LETTER

Of Citizen Talleyrand, to the Minister of the Police.

"I have read, Citizen Minister, with much anxiety, the name of Jorry in the list of those sentenced to banishment. Jorry is a very young man, whose errors are more entitled to indulgence, than deserving of rigorous treatment. He is now in the service of the republic in the army of Italy. Perhaps even at this moment, when the operation of the law extends to him, it is anticipated by the blow of the enemy. Perhaps his name is honoured by the wounds he may have received, or by a patriotic death.

"It is incumbent on me to add, that Jorry having, as far as I know, offended none but myself, I think I have peculiar right to offer these observations to your notice; and, I confess, that feeling the utmost desire to have the offence forgotten by all the world, as it is by me, I shall receive as a personal favour the exception which I now solicit, and which I entreat you to request of the Consuls of the republic.

This letter, which bears every mark of candour, was written when Talleyrand was acquainted with the death of Jorry!!!

NEW-YORK, February 19.

Capt. Fitch of the brig Two Sisters, from Savannah, came up to town last evening in a pilot boat. He informs that the ship Shepherdess, Rogers, from that port is below; also the brig Appollo, Burnham, and brig Eliza, Swain, from Savannah, are below, within the Hook, and the brig John, Henderson, from Cork, in 60 days.

Savannah, Feb. 4.

A gentleman direct from Fort Wilkinson, mentions that col. Hawkins left there on the 24th ult. for the Creek nation.

Extract of a letter from col. Hawkins, agent of the United States for Indian Affairs, to Governor Jackson, dated Cowetah Tallahassee, 20th Dec. 1799.

"I have not till the present had an opportunity to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's favor of the 15th November, which was delivered me on the road to Tuckabatchee, and I cannot reply to the whole as I could. The documents herewith inclosed will exhibit to you some interesting proceedings in this quarter, and are an apology for the omission.

The National Council was convened at Tuckabatchee on the 24 Nov. the meeting has been a very interesting one: I had much conversation with the chiefs, and felt that as an agent, I possessed their confidence in a high degree. The Chiefs have agreed that all mischief makers and thieves of any country of white people, shall be under the government of the agent for Indian affairs.

Mr. Bowles is near the mouth of this river, from whence he continues to pour forth his threat against the officers of the United States in this department; and I continue my arrangements to punish all thieves and mischief makers. We have punished in an exemplary manner the leader of the banditti, who insulted the commissioners of Spain and the United States, on the 17th of Sept.—he was cropped, whipped, and his property destroyed, and three of his associates whipped. We have had one white man whipped for negro stealing, and one negro shot thro' the arm and in the thigh, for resisting those who were sent to apprehend him, and attempting to fire on a white man.

I have sent down one negro belonging to Mr. Winn, and have in my possession one belonging to Mrs. McIntosh, one to Capt. Marcus, and one to Charles Ingram; this fellow is the one who is wounded. These negroes will be delivered to the order of their owners, or be sent down by the first conveyance.

I find it an arduous undertaking with a few assistants to make the impressions I wish on the minds of my red charge, who are scattered over a wild country of at least 200 miles square. Bowles and other mischief makers, are by every opportunity poisoning the minds of the Indians with their abominable lies and misrepresentations. In the present conjuncture I receive and reciprocate with peculiar pleasure, the assurance of future co-operation on the part of your excellency, to promote harmony and to preserve peace. The period may be eventually a very interesting one for your frontiers."

BALTIMORE, February 18.

FIRE

Was yesterday morning, about sun-rise, discovered bursting from the cabin of the ship Mohawk, of Philadelphia, lying at Baker's wharf, Fell's Point. The fire originated from the stove, which being placed in the ceiling, it is supposed a spark communicated to the waincoat panels. Happily it gained no considerable height before it was discovered and extinguished; had the fire but touched the rigging of the vessel, a dreadful conflagration must have been the consequence, for the Mohawk is surrounded by a great number of vessels, all of which are ice-bound.
