A POEM, Sacred to the memory of GENERAL WASHINGTON.

By RICHARD ALSOP.

Among the excellent Eulogies on the character of this illustrious man, we presume it will be highly gratifying to the people of the United States to learn, that the task has been undertaken in verse, by a Poet of such distinguished genius as Mr. Alsop.

Why on this day, when erst in smiles array'd, Each cheerful mien the signs of joy display'd, Why sounds yon passing knell in accents slow, And fringes each heart in union of woe...

The above Poetical Eulogy will be for sale, on Saturday the 22d of this month, at the Bookstore of William Young, corner of Chestnut and Second Streets, Philadelphia.

WATER-OFFICE. Centre Square, February 5, 1800.

IN compliance with the instructions of the Committee for watering the city, and with my own inclinations, every possible admittance and information has been given to those citizens who have visited the Works during their progress. The Engines are now arrived, and are immediately to be put up, and it is hoped that it will be thought reasonable and just, both to the Public, and to the Contractor for the Engines, that the workmen should not be interrupted. As a very few months will fully gratify the curiosity of the citizens, by shewing them the Engines in full operation, a temporary exclusion of all visitors from the Engine houses cannot appear improper.

FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE EYES.

Church's celebrated Eye Salve.

For several years universally acknowledged as a certain and infallible cure for inflammations, dimness, dryness, blights, itchings, and films in the eyes, proceeding from natural weakness, or from accidents, such as blows, dust, lime, or any thing else being thrown into the eyes. It is admirable in natural weakness of sight, in defluencies of rheum, and for all ailments in the eyes after the small pox, measles and fevers; it is singularly efficacious in carrying off all watery and gross humours; and in strengthening the sight. In short, there is no disease to which the eye is subject, but this salve is not a sovereign remedy: many hundreds have experienced its efficacy when in the greatest danger of losing their sight. [Price 75 cents.]

Prepared only by the inventor and sole proprietor, Dr. James Church, at his dispensary, 137 Front Street, near the Fly market, New York; and sold by Messrs. H. and P. Rice, 16 South Second Street, Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 25.

COMMUNICATION.

THE United States frigate Lancaster, commanded by —, has experienced a most violent insurrection in the wardroom.—The commander and his aids have been at variance some time. It is reported that the commander has taken into keeping a vixen of the name of old Nantz, to whom he daily and hourly resorts for consolation; the is of French extraction, and her cordiality has been the distraction of thousands, and will be the bane of every one who has too close a connexion with her: It appears in this wardroom, a very considerable difference exists among the officers, respecting the principles, &c. of the commander; and as during a debate one of the officers was holding forth, on sobriety and good order, the commanding party called for an adjournment; one demon of this party accosted the officer who was last speaking, and told him that he was happy the meeting was broken up, being tired at hearing any thing on the subject of decency. Words ensued. Nota bene: this democrat was some time ago in France and received lessons on politeness, &c. from his ex-friend the bishop of Autun; of course in the levelling democratic style of his friend, he told the other he was a damned liar; before I proceed to the conclusion, this same Demon became acquainted in Paris with X. Y. and Z. and the lady, and it is presumed with other ladies; when the lie was given, he received in exchange a true American blow from a fist never enervated by foreign influence, that broke the bridge of his nose; the nose is a delicate point, and is in general the first affected by the French disease, and is often broke without a blow.

Mr. Printer, I assure you our wardroom is in great confusion, and I am fearful our frigate will become a disgrace to the United States, unless old Nantz, by her cordiality, should destroy the commander. It is understood among the crew, that Talleyrand's friend, by the influence of Dr. Certificates, is about soliciting a patent for the art he has acquired in creating riot and confusion.—Several black eyes and bloody noses happened in the wardroom of the Lancaster. I conclude, Mr. Printer, with the transposition of an old German Bishop's Epitaph. Est est est, in drinking too much est. Our commander, I hope, may die like a beast.

The following is an Extract from the Manuscript copy of Major Jackson's Oration.

AT the approach of peace an occasion arose, in which the best faculties of his superior mind were summoned to their utmost exertion—and in which the feelings of his heart were to meet in strong collision with the dictates of his judgment, and a paramount sentiment of public duty.

That army, by whose unshaken fidelity and invincible fortitude, the glory and fortunes of America had been upheld in all the vicissitudes of the war, was on the eve of dispersion. Those faithful comrades in honor and misfortune were to separate for ever, under the most afflicting circumstances of individual adversity. To their country they had secured the blessings of peace, and the boon of independence; and to every class of their fellow-citizens a full participation in those blessings, enhanced by the enjoyment of that property, which, in their protected avocations, they had been enabled to preserve or to acquire. To the disbanded veteran, in the decline of life, was opened the cheerful prospect of extreme penury, aggravated in many instances, by wounds and inability to labor. His honor and his arms, the instruments of his glory, were all that he possessed. Maimed, and disfigured by honorable scars, he was become a stranger in the place of his nativity—and he was no longer remembered by the companions of his early years. His long-left home was in the occupancy of another, and his future abode was only certain to be wretched. While oppressed by these sensations, and assailed by the angry passions, which their situation excited, the army were invited, by every consideration, which the most seductive persuasion could suggest, to redress their wrongs and resent the alleged ingratitude of their country.

Argument and eloquence were exhausted to effect the adoption of this fatal advice. To counteract the dangerous measure—to preserve inviolate the honor of his troops, and the safety of his country, the wisdom and firmness of the virtuous Washington were immediately interposed.

With his heart wrong by the sufferings of the army; with his mind deeply affected by the counsel, which had been offered to remedy their grievances; conscious of their merits, and no less sensible to the inability of the country to fulfill its stipulations, he convened his officers, and presenting himself as mediator between the distressed of the troops, and the public incapacity, at that time, to relieve them. He addressed himself to their judgment, their honor, and their patriotism.

His opinions, framed on the irresistible conclusions of truth, and urged with all the force of reason and sentiment, were instantly adopted, and the sublime spectacle was exhibited of an army, victorious over its enemy, victorious over itself.

As Mr. Frothing seems to have a passion for protecting those truly civic virtues, robbery, piracy and murder, it seems incumbent upon him to take measures for appeasing the manes of some two or three hundreds, lately executed by Commodore Trux-

ton. He ought, on his own principles, immediately to impeach that officer; for it is no palliation of his uncivic conduct, that he performed this exploit with a vast inferiority of force.

Edward proceed; to gain the meed of fame, One height remains thy patriot grasp to claim. Applauding murder shouts thee for her friend, Let worth and valor to thy hatred bend."

BULLETIN OF HEALTH.

On the twenty-first of this month, as was predicted, perished with three successive shocks of Apoplexy, the foulest harpy that ever polluted the earth. This monster has passed at different times under various names: sometimes an infuriated, outrageous whig,—sometimes a tory, and again a whig; now a constitutionalist, now the partizan of hereditary right, now a federalist, now an antifederalist, and last of all, a fettered, black and malicious French Jacobin; but at all times, and under whatever name distinguished, uniformly a cool, premeditated, deliberate villain.

Some fellows have indeed the impudence to tell us, contrary to what we believe and know to be not only inconsistent with the peace and welfare of society, but to the most positive and infallible prediction, that he is still alive. I shall answer these insolents, by deying him or them to prove the premises.

Legislature of Pennsylvania.

In SENATE Friday February 7th. A message from the Governor by Mr. Trimble, the deputy secretary of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Speaker, In obedience to the directions of the Governor, I have the honor to present a message from him to the Senate, together with the documents mentioned in the message.

Mr. Trimble accordingly presented the same.

The message from the Governor was read as follows, to wit:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Gentlemen,

The attorney-general has informed me that he has been served with a copy of a process in a suit by the Rev. Dr. John Ewing, plaintiff, against the Commonwealth, defendant, in the Supreme Court of this State; a similar copy has been left at the house of the Governor, by the sheriff of the county of Lancaster. As these proceedings have occurred while the legislature is in full session I have deemed it advisable to submit to you, whether the attorney-general should appear for the Commonwealth, and defend the action, or except to the jurisdiction of the court.

By the 11th section of the 9th article of our constitution, it is declared that "Suits may be brought against the Commonwealth, in such manner, in such courts, and in such cases, as the Legislature may by law direct."

As no provision has yet been made by the legislature to enable the citizens to have the advantage of this part of the constitution, and as it is against the principles of natural justice for any body of men to be judges in their own cause, it appears to me highly necessary and expedient that this subject should be speedily taken into consideration, and measures adopted for affording a full, fair and impartial trial, and determination of such controversies.

A petition to both Houses, from the American Philosophical Society, for promoting useful knowledge, has been inclosed to me, copies whereof will be herewith delivered.—This application from so useful and distinguished a corporation, can require no recommendation to the liberality of the legislature of Pennsylvania.

At the same time I deem it proper to lay before you a copy of a petition from the Trustees of Northumberland Academy, directed to me. A few thousand dollars timely expended in promoting learning and moral instruction, will be the means of saving millions in terrors and in punishments, in insurrections and in wars; besides conferring inestimable advantages on society in other respects. It is education forms the human mind. Although we have neglected to profit what we might by the genius and labors of a Rittenhouse, yet I trust we shall not lose the disinterested services of the learned and benevolent Priestly, whom a kind Providence has placed near this institution.

THOMAS M'KEAN. Lancaster, February 5, 1800.

On motion, and by special order, the said message was read the second time.

Whereupon, on motion of Mr. Maclay, seconded by Mr. Mewhorter,

Resolved, That the message be referred to a committee to consider and report thereon, and ordered that Mr. Guiney, Mr. Findley, Mr. Smith, Mr. Barton, and Mr. Maclay be a committee for the said purpose.

On Saturday, the 15th inst. the House of Representatives of this State had under consideration, the report of a committee on Public Roads, contemplating that the roads hereafter mentioned, should be declared State Roads, and should be placed under the care of the several counties through which the said roads may pass, to be supported at the joint expence of this Commonwealth and of the said counties; and that the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas shall have power to appoint an inspector, if they think it necessary, to examine and report to them when the road, or any part of it, be properly made; and upon report of such inspector, the said Judges shall have power to draw upon the State Treasury for one half of the said expence of making and keeping in repair such road, the care of making and
