WATER-OFFICE.

Centre Square, February 5, 1800.

IN compliance with the instructions of the Committee for watering the city, and with my own inclinations, every possible admittance and information has been given to those citizens who have visited the Works during their progress. The Engines are now arrived, and are immediately to be put up, and it is hoped that it will be thought reasonable and just, both to the Public, and to the Contractor for the Engines, that the workmen should not be interrupted. As a very few months will fully gratify the curiosity of the citizens, by showing them the Engines in full operation, a temporary exclusion of all visitors from the Engine houses cannot appear improper.

QUESTIONS
To Merchants, Store keepers, and Tradesmen in general, &c.

1st. PRAY Gentlemen, is a perfect standard of discount, or interest, calculated on every dollar (without exception) from 1 to 2000, from one day to sixty-four days inclusive, of any value, whether used as a standard, or as a check upon the enquirers' own calculations?
2d. Is it of any importance to know the best methods of computing the exchanges, between this country and the principal maritime trading place in Russia, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Prussia, Poland, Germany, Holland, Flanders, Spain, Portugal, Italy, in several of the Windward and Leeward West India Islands, and many ports in the East Indies?

3d. Is a table of all the coins and monies of account in the places aforesaid, of any use?
4th. Are the coins and monies of account in the aforesaid places, when reduced to dollars and cents, of any service?
5th. Is a table of compound interest of any utility?
6th. Is the table by which the banks determine the value of gold, desirable?
7th. Is the amount of Interest, accurately calculated for each month from one to twelve months, and on every dollar (without exception) from 1 to 2000, of any value?
8th. Is a table of all the post towns in the United States, and rates of postage therewith, of any use?
9th. Will not all these together make a book, as generally useful and convenient as ever entered a counting house or store?

10th. Will not the whole, when comprised in a quarto volume of from 200 to 225 pages, be worth two dollars?
And lastly, Is the person, who at the expence of FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS undertakes to perform upwards of one hundred and sixty thousand calculations of Interest, and of giving all the preceding information to the public in the most complete manner, deserving of your Encouragement and Support?

If the answer is in the affirmative, you are individually and respectfully invited to subscribe in one of the specimen books, exhibited at the City Tavern, Hardy's Hotel, Francis's Hotel, the Indian Queen, Duuwoody's Tavern, the Franklin Head, and at the George.

It is proper to state, that the work will not be executed unless fifteen hundred subscribers are obtained: for four thousand dollars is too much to hazard.

NOTHING IS TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE, neither will it be expected of subscribers to take the work when published, if it is not delivered rigorously conformable to my agreements with the public, expressed in the conditions affixed to the specimen books, each of which consists of six detached pages of the work.

I am, with respect,
Gentlemen,
Your humble servant,
JOHN ROWLETT,
Accountant, Bank of North America.

POSTSCRIPT.
The work is dedicated, by permission, to the President and Directors of the Bank of North America, and has already received the patronage of JOHN ADAMS, President of the United States; of THOMAS JEFFERSON, Vice-President of the United States; and President of the Senate; of a large number of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives of the United States; and of the Presidents and Directors of the different Banks unanimously. The Specimen Book in the Bank of North America, is filling very fast with subscriptions; some for 2 copies, some for 3 copies, and some for 5 copies, and I take this opportunity of gratefully acknowledging all favours.

††† Gentlemen having business at either of the Banks may subscribe there as well as at the Taverns, &c. already mentioned.

WHEREAS,

An attachment was lately issued out of the inferior court of common pleas of the county of Essex, in the State of New Jersey, directed to the sheriff of the said county, against the rights, credits, estates and effects, goods and chattels, lands and tenements of John Cleves Synnes, at the suit of William Wells, in a plea of trespass on the case to his damage three thousand dollars.—

And whereas, the said sheriff did, at the term of June last past, return to the said court that he had attached the defendant by a certain bond given by Matthias Denman and Samuel Mecker to the said defendant, to the amount of near two thousand dollars, and also by sixty land warrants;—

Now therefore, unless the said John Cleves Synnes shall appear, give special bail, and receive a declaration at the suit of the plaintiff, judgment will be entered against him, and his property herein attached, will be sold agreeably to the statute in such case made and provided.

THE MORAL DISPENSARY.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends, and the public in general, that he has this day opened, in the city of Philadelphia, a MORAL and LITERARY DISPENSARY, designed for the benefit of all those of the good people of these United States, whose manners, language, passions, taste or judgment may have become corrupted, distorted, debilitated, or, in any other manner, so disordered as to require the fostering hand of art to produce or restore the proper tones and functions to the several parts of the moral system.

I have, with much labor and industry, collected a very extensive and valuable assortment of medicines, adapted to the different ages, sexes and constitutions of the people of this country, and calculated both to expand and fortify the intellectual and moral faculties; to purg away the foibles and levities of the fancy; to rectify the acrimonious and corrosive humors of passion; and, in the words of Shakespeare, to minister comfort —“to a mind diseased;

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
And, with a sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the fuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart.”

These medicines, in the all-persuasive language of medical advertisement, are so perfectly mild and innocent that they cannot endanger the most delicate lady, or the tenderest infant. They will be furnished, gratis, to all such as shall make application at the DISPENSARY, either in person or by a note directed to the subscriber, stating the nature of the complaint, and the habits of the person for whom they are designed.

In addition to this, I propose, occasionally, to publish in this Gazette, on Tuesdays, an account of such disorders as may appear prevalent in any part of our country, and to accompany these notices with such advice as may tend to alluage the disorders and prevent them from becoming epidemic. This I am the more especially induced to undertake, from a consideration, that almost all the disorders of the mind are, in their nature, highly contagious; and that, when once originated, they uniformly increase in virulence and malignancy, in proportion as they become more generally extensive.

For want of such reasonable counsel, many indispositions, slight, at first, and unalarming, by taking root in youthful minds, “grow with their growth and strength with their strength” till they attain to the nature of the most deadly and inevitable maladies.

Sensible that the reputation of a physician is usually measured by his good nature, rather than his learning; and, that his success is ordinarily proportionate to his skill in accompanying his medical advice with a well told story, and gilding his bitter pill with a merry jest; and, convinced likewise, that a large proportion of the complaints of people are more effectually remedied by these means, than by the most liberal application of caustic, mercury or bleeding; I shall aim, in my occasional prescriptions, not only to apply nutritive instruction to the understandings of the young and unlearned; but likewise to administer a chaste and innocent amusement to the fancies of all. With a single eye to the discouragement of vice and folly, and to the encouragement of good manners and pure morality, I shall endeavor to administer the savory medicine of honest counsel and wholesome censure; to augment the stock of rational enjoyment; “to convert melancholy into mirth, increase good humor, entertain the ignorant, amuse the learned, escape the contempt of the grave, and, if possible, to merit the approbation of persons of ingenuity and taste.”

SOLOMON SIMPLE, P. M. D.
Philadelphia, March 5, 1800.

MR. FERRO,

I observed in your paper of Saturday evening, that notice was taken of Dr. Leib's having signed a recommendation to the Governor, for the pardon of Langford Herring, convicted a few days since of larceny. You are correct in stating, that Dr. Leib signed the recommendation; but otherwise the piece is very incorrect.

Langford Herring was indicted for committing four larcenies: Upon one bill he was acquitted; upon the others he was found guilty, upon one or the other charge, stated in the indictment. His imprisonment is not to be for four but three years. You will therefore observe the incorrectness of the statement.

But, Sir, I would ask you, why such a contemptible fellow as Dr. Leib signing a recommendation should astonish you? Is not Dr. Leib a Patriot? Is not the Governor a Patriot? Was not Langford Herring some short time since, indicted for sedition? And who more fit, under all circumstances, than the Dr. to sign a certificate for such a person? I confess the certificate was signed previous to sentence being passed; but it was not before the verdict of the jury. The Dr. knew sentence would be passed by the court, and it was from pure principles of patriotism and humanity, he gave the recommendation as early as he did. It would be a heinous crime, in the eyes of all good modern democrats, to know of a patriot being imprisoned, and not attempt his relief. The Dr. then, according to sound logic, is proved not blameable in signing the recommendation. If you are not satisfied, Sir, with the proof I have before given of the Dr's. innocence, I will put the matter beyond a doubt, by informing you further, that a justice of the peace, a co-patriot of the Dr's, in the Northern Liberties, whose name is Wolbert, also signed the recommendation; and both signatures were affixed, previous to the petition being signed by Herring. Now, Sir, if you are not now convinced, that the Dr's. signature was affixed, from motives of humanity and patriotism, for the purpose of obliging Herring (as he did not, or could not know the petition was drawn at Herring's request) or setting a vote at the next election, “you have no more brains than an oyster.”

Give the Devil his due.

From a London Paper of November 28.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES

In commemoration of his Holiness, the late Pope Pius the Sixth.
This solemn ceremony was celebrated on Saturday last night, at St. Patrick's Chapel in Sutton Street, Soho-square, with all the pomp and magnificence of the Roman Catholic worship, that could be expected in a country where it is not the established religion.

DECORATIONS.

The chapel, which is the most elegant and capacious structure of the kind in London, was decorated in a style suited to the solemnity of the occasion.

At all the entrances were placed mutes, habited in mourning robes, with flares in their hands.

The whole interior of the building was hung with black cloth, extending to the ceiling. To these, hanging on the walls, were affixed numerous lights, with plated reflectors behind them, and in the intervals between, at equal distances, were tablets containing two golden keys, crossed, representing the keys of St. Peter, on a blue ground in the middle, on a frame of black, and edged with gold. The capitals of the columns which support the galleries, were also connected with a black drapery in festoons, on which were suspended lights, and escutcheons with suitable emblems, such as the keys of St. Peter, the shepherd's crook, denoting the holy pastor, &c. forming a contrast with the sable, which produced a tout ensemble at once awful and splendid. The pulpit, the floor of the altar, and the body of the chapel, were also in sable livery; and in the middle was erected a sarcophagus or tomb, representing the Mausoleum supposed to contain the remains of the holy pontiff. It consisted of a platform, to which there was an ascent of five or six steps from the ground, and the sides parallel to those of the chapel. On this was laid an oblong tomb, the ends of which were richly ornamented with pontifical escutcheons, such as have been already described, and armorial bearings, and on a tablet on each side were inscribed the nativity, age and death of his holiness. Upon the tomb was laid a velvet cushion, superbly embroidered with gold, supporting a splendid model of the papal or triple crown. Over all these was a black canopy, elevated about twenty feet, and forming an obtuse angle at top, upon which were placed nine very large white plumes of feathers, beginning at the lowest part of the roof, and rising pyramidically. The canopy was supported by four columns, connected at top by festoons of black drapery, and the steps at their bases were brilliantly lighted up with burning waxen flambeaux, supported in mafly caudabras, and intermixed with large plumes of white feathers.

ASSEMBLAGE.

The sanctuary, enclosing the altar, was reserved exclusively for the bishops and clergy, who celebrated high mass, the pope's nuncio, and the archbishops and bishops, among whom were the archbishop of Narbonne, the bishop of Laçar, and fifteen others.

The tribune on the right of the altar was appropriated to the accommodation of the foreign ambassadors, and people of distinction, with whom it was filled. The galleries also presented a very splendid shew of beauty and fashion, the whole comprising many of the nobility of both sexes, among whom, the Dukes of Devonshire, was an attentive spectator of the passing scene.

The uniformly elegant assemblage was finely contrasted by the motley group that filled the body of the Chapel. There is not a class in society, of which there was not here a member, of every age, sex and description, forming a most variegated and heterogeneous mixture, compacted into one solid mass. Some of the delicate fainted, the short in stature were in danger of suffocation; and it was only when an effort was made for their relief, that there was any symptom of motion; but then it extended itself of course to the whole aggregate, and the pressure was increased. Great numbers finding the situation intolerable, went away—but as a considerable degree of vigilance was exercised at the door, in preventing indiscriminate admission, the crowd gradually diminished.

BIRGE.

A little after 10 o'clock the funeral dirge for the repose of the soul of this venerable pontiff commenced. It was solemn, grand and impressive. The sounds, sometimes plaintive, sometimes sublime, diffused a tender air of melancholy and pious devotion over the audience, and excited in every breast a deeper interest in the sorrows of the poor old man, and a stronger detestation of those who had refused to his remains the
