WINTER IS COMING.
 BY ELIZA COOK.

Winter is coming! who cares! who cares!
 Not the wealthy and proud, I trow;
 "Let it come," they cry, "what matters to us
 How chilly the blast may blow?"
 "We'll feast and carouse in our lordly halls,
 The goblet of wine we'll drain,
 We'll mock at the wind with shouts of mirth,
 And music's echoing strain."
 "Little care we for the biting frost,
 While the fire gives forth its blaze;
 And what to us is the dreary night,
 While we dance with the waltz-light's rays!"
 'Tis thus the rich of the land will talk;
 But think! oh, ye pompous great,
 That the harrowing storm ex laugh at within
 Falls bleak on the roof at the gate.
 They have blood in their veins, ay, pure as thine,
 But naught to quicken its flow;
 They have limbs that feel the whistling gale,
 And shrank from the driving snow.
 Winter is coming—oh! think ye great,
 On the roofless, naked, and old;
 Deal with them kindly, as man with man,
 And spare them a tith of your gold!

Wit and Humor.

JONES' LAST.—Jones says that the other day he was in a steamboat above St. Louis, and there was a raw Hoosier on board. At night when the folks went to bed, Mr. Hoosier lay down with his boots on. The steward, seeing this, walks up and politely says:
 "Sir, you have lain down with your boots on."
 Mr. Hoosier calmly raises his head, and looking down at his boots, innocently replies,
 "It won't hurt 'em; they are not the best pair."
COMIC GRAMMAR.—"Class in grammar may come from the floor. Now, John, commence—All the world in debt.—Parse world."
 "World is a general noun, common metre, objective case, but governed by Miller."
 "Very well. Sam, parse debt."
 "Debt is a common noun, impressive mood, and dreadful case."
 "That'll do. You learn mighty fast."
 "Here, you little rascal, walk up and account for yourself—where have you been?"
 "After the gals, dad?"
 "Don't you know better than that?—Did you ever know me to do so when I was a boy?"

The Farmer.

The Farmer's Winter Song.
 There is a time the wise men saith,
 For all things to be done;
 To plough, to sow, to reap—as roll
 Successive seasons on.
 For pleasure, too, in flowery spring,
 In fragrant summer's vales,
 In fruitful autumn's yellow fields,
 In winter's evening tales.
 And though the fields are bleak and drear,
 The forest's verdure gone—
 And all is withered, cold, and sere,
 In garden, field and lawn;
 There's something left and much to cheer,
 And charm the Farmer's heart;
 For wintry winds to harvest hope,
 Great influence impart.
 And while he views the drifting snow,
 And treads the frozen earth—
 He has a home his garner full
 And social blazing hearth!
 And thus he sings what'er pervade
 The earth or sky at morn;
 Of Winter's winds and summer's suns,
 The Farmer's hope is born!

Take Care that your Stock is not Exposed.
 Leibig, the distinguished German Chemist, asserts that "Our clothing is to be considered nearly in the light of an equivalent for a certain amount of food," in all situations where the body is kept warm and comfortable by the protection of suitable garments, the demand for food, in order to sustain the natural functions of the system, will be less than where the protection is scanty or but ill adapted to serve the purpose for which it is designed.—Now this observation applies with no less force to the management of domestic animals than the management of ourselves, and our children. A cow, forced to stand exposed to the weather in inclement seasons, to repose on the cold ground, or in a barn or hovel where the piercing night blasts have free access, necessarily requires a far larger amount of food than one carefully sheltered and provided with a comfortable stall and bed. The difference in the amount of food consumed by animals treated in the different styles above indicated, has been demonstrated by actual and repeated experiments, to be from 25 to 100 per cent. in favor of the latter! But this is not all. Exposure torpifies and emaculates the system, paralyzes the stomach, and opens a door for the introduction of many a fearful disease. An animal, habitually exposed to cold, usually falls away. If a cow, "she shrinks her milk," if an ox he will experience a loss of vivacity and become stupid and inert, and but feebly prepared to answer the too often exorbitant draft made upon his muscular powers under the yoke.—Maine Cultivator.

CHARCOAL FOR DISEASED LUNGS IN HOGS.

Mr. Editor:—As the rearing and fattening of hogs has become a business of great importance to the west, and especially to our own corn-growing state; and as new and terrible diseases have made their appearance within the last few years, among that class of our domestic animals, I, as a common sufferer with my brother farmers, have been trying to ascertain the cause of, and remedy for the one which I have suffered the most by, and which I shall call your attention more particularly to. It is admitted I believe by pathologists, that diseases may, and do change their type in the same latitude, and become more & more malignant as the population becomes more dense and the country becomes older; thus our own intermittent has degenerated into the more deadly typhus fever; thus that which we once called quincy or swelling of the throat in swine, has now assumed a more malignant type, and requires a different treatment; the cause is the same, but the effect is not always instantaneous or accompanied by the same symptoms or results. I think it may be safely assumed that most of the diseases, if not all, that hogs are liable to are produced by sudden transitions from heat to cold; and as do not, like most other animals, perspire through the pores of the skin over the whole surface of the body, but through small orifices on the legs and throat, which are constantly liable to obstruction, and especially in the winter season, when the animals in large numbers bed together, producing great heat and free perspiration for a short time; but from the restiveness of their nature they are often changing the position first assumed all tending to afford the mediums of respiration and thus lay the foundation of disease and death by alternating between heat and cold through the winter. Ordinarily the weak of the herd are the first to die. This may be chargeable to their inability to change positions, subjecting them to the crushing weight of the whole number in the bed; or their long subjection to the great heat engendered by the common mass, until they are called to partake of the morning food. This, we have stated, formerly produced enlargement of the glands of the animals neck, which often ended in inflammation and death. Now, the same cause produces a very different effect, and although it is still strangulation yet the inflammation falls with its whole weight upon the lungs and if both tubes of the organ are affected, death instantly ensues; if only one, the animal may live a long time, but never recovers unless the remedy that I shall presently suggest or one equally potent be applied. The symptoms where the attack is violent, are a seeming sense of suffocation, great indisposition to move, a crimson color, approaching to purple, all over the body and if forced to move a few paces, the animal will pant as if worried by dogs in hot weather. If the attack is less violent they will take much more exercise with seemingly less pain, will trot in the flanks in much the same way that a horse will when exhausted by fatigue and hard usage are generally inattentive to their company, are inclined to earth rather than their accustomed food; such generally live a long time but never recover. I proceed to point out the way to prevent the disease and to cure if taken in time. Do not suffer your hogs to herd together in large lots in cold weather; never suffer them to sleep in hollow trees; if you have sheds for them to sleep under, let them be set so low that they cannot in great numbers heap together; in dry, hard freezing weather let them have some succulent food, such as apples, potatoes or turnips, but especially let them have plenty of salt and charcoal; this last is a cure for the disease above described if administered before they entirely refuse to eat. It is known to almost every one, that charcoal is a powerful antiseptic and absorbent, and that hogs will search for and eat it with eagerness, and especially in banks of leached ashes, and so they will unassociated with ashes, if at first you will break it up into small lumps and pour a little salt and water over it. I have tried the various means in common use, such as tar, antimony, sulphur, &c., and never had one to recover its health until I tried the charcoal, and I have every confidence that it will succeed with others as it has with me, and if it does, I shall be well paid for this communication, feeling as I do, that no man ought to live for himself alone. HOTEL FOR INVALIDS AT PITTSBURGH.

Drs. Speer and Kuhn. THE object of this establishment is to supply a want greatly felt by respectable travellers on our western highways—by residents, without family, taken sick—and by patients from the surrounding towns and country who resort to this place for relief from surgical and other diseases. Such have often suffered from the want of the various comforts and attentions so necessary and agreeable to the sick, and from careless and unfaithful nurses; and been subjected to heavy and unreasonable charges. Invalids will here be provided with constant, faithful and comfortable attendance, and at a rate much below the usual charges. While the care of both physicians will be extended to every variety of disease, it is intended by Dr. Speer, to give special attention to ALL SURGICAL DISEASES, PARTICULARLY TO DISEASES OF THE EYE. To these branches of his profession he has given a large share of his attention for the last twenty-five years, and he will continue to devote to them the experience acquired by a constant practice during that time. The Hotel for Invalids is not an experiment. Its establishment is suggested not only as necessary to supply an evident want in this city, in the entire absence of any special provision for the sick, but is warranted also by the success of similar institutions at Cincinnati and New Orleans—the former under the care of Drs. Talciferro, Marshall and Strader—the latter under that of Dr. Stone. The building selected for the purpose is situated at the corner of Federal and Robinson streets, in Allegheny city, adjoining the city of Pittsburgh. It is commodious and roomy, and furnished with all accommodations necessary for the sick. Applications for admission to be made to the subscribers, at their office on Penn street, Pittsburgh, or at the establishment. No contagious diseases will be admitted. J. R. SPEER, M. D. J. S. KUHN, M. D. February 25, 1845.

DR. DUNCAN'S EXPECTORANT REMEDY, FOR CONSUMPTION,

Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Asthma, Pain in the Side, Breast and Chest, Whooping Cough, Croup, and All Diseases of the Liver and Lungs.

BWARE OF CONSUMPTION! We behold many who unfortunately are the object of disease, borne down by its pain and distress, without a medicine to strengthen and soothe the enfeebled frame; relieve the poisoned mind; kind Providence has caused Nature to produce a HEALING BALM for all living creatures, particularly the afflicted. Healers, whose talents have been so successful in discovering the Medical Agent for the removal and cure of a disease which seems for ages to have defied the power of the healing art, should be regarded in the light of a public benefactor. The proprietor of Dr. Duncan's EXPECTORANT REMEDY claims this, substantiated by thousands who are living monuments restored from the bed of sickness to the enjoyment of their dearest friends, and again rendered an ornament to society. Those who suffer with the premonitory symptoms of CONSUMPTION, should not neglect themselves from time to time, until the disease becomes seated, and rendered beyond the control of medicine, but immediately procure Dr. Duncan's Expectorant Remedy, a medicine that is certain to remove all the first evil seeds of Consumption, when used in due season. Just received 4 doz. of the above medicine and for sale by Parker & Ankeny, the only authorized agent for Somerset county. Dec. 24, 1844.
