The following remarks of the "North Amerinan" on the intelligence by the Cambria, are worthy of serious consider-

"The revolution in England-for the radical change of the foreign and domestic policy of the Government is a revolution more important than any mere substitution of one set of rulers for anothermust be attended wilh results pregnant of good or ill to this country. Indeed, it must strike the most casual observer that the thread of our destinies has, by some mysterious agency, been woven into the woof of English policy, and that changes there are supposed to be the twin of changes of a like character here. How this union of decrepit age with vigorous youth, this espousal of January and May, has been effected, remains to be explained; but, atrange ss it may seem, the inheritors of the independence of seventy-six have again been taught to read their fate in the decrees of an English Minister."

"Those who, for many months, have inveighed against the solfishness and avarice of England, lay the settled and prosperous policy of the country at her feet. They will now declaim of mutual confidence, esteem, and happiness; as if England ever yielded except to acquire ten-

Sir Robert Peel brings the two subjects, as kindred points of policy, before Parliament .-Lord John Russell not only sustains the peaceful policy of the Administration, but assails Mr, Pakenham for having rejected the proposed compromise; and Mr. Peel, in responding, while he compliments her Majesty's Minister at Washington, admits that he erred in this respect.

"Thus these two leaders, who but a short time since agreed in pointing all their thunders against this country, and insisted that national honor and dignity demanded that England's claim to Oregon should be maintained, if necessary, by all the force of the empire, suddenly smooth the wrinkled front of war, and smile you as willing and winning an assent as ever was breathed by an enamored maiden to The latest accounts from Mexico state her wooer. Now, all this must mean ed also that these developments in Engmen have been at a loss to conjecture what the Administration really intended. Its policy was bristling and warlike, its tone blustering and rash; yet no measures of preparation were recommended. Its course led apparently to the cannon's mouth; yet those in the secrets assured us that there was no danger of war.

"It was thought that the administration must be insanely reckless thus to rush upon assured diraster, for no one dared to presume that, beneath this display of enraged patriotism, the Administration was secretly bargaining with England for Oregon, and sacrificing the independence of American industry to the very power which, through its organ, is daily vitu-Mr. J. came up on second reading. Mr. Edgington offered a substitute for the bill, which was read, when the hour for the recess arrived.

EVENING SESSION. The House resumed the consideration of the bill relative to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. Lee offered a substitute for the substitute of Mr. Edgington, which he sustained, and Mr. Parriott opposed .-The substitute of Mr. Lee proposed to give the company the unrestricted right strued by those who opposed it as a renewal of the question of the "right of way" to Parkersburg or anywhere between Wheeling and that point which the company may select. That this was to be done by dipping as far as possible his losses. southwardly and then striking towards Wheeling, and by making a branch at some future day from the Southernmost point of the road, direct to the Ohio.

Mr. Edgington's substitute simply gave further time to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to construct the road according to the charter previously

Mr. Strother opposed the substitute of Mr. Lee, as raising a question, decided already by a full House, when 30 members had left the House.

The argument was concluded by Mr. Lee in favor and by Mr. Parriott against the substitute offered by Mr. Lee, after which it was rejected without a division.

Mr. West moved to amend the substitute of Mr. Edgington by adding a section providing that the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company shall have till the 1st of December, to accept the terms of the act-which amendment was rejected by the House. Mr. Carson moved to strike out that part of Mr. Edgington's substitute which within forty days their quota of men for land are in singular consonance with oc- land are in singular consonance with oc- nies agree, the Baltimore and Ohio rail- cd to sale by way of public outery, at road company shall purchase of the Winchester and Potomac railroad company, their road on the terms prescribed in the bill of last year-and insert a clause in lieu thereof, requiring the Baltimore company to purchase the Winchester! road on the terms of the tormer bill whenever the Winchester company shall con- situate in the Borough of Berlin, Somsent to such purchase, and to give the Baltimore company one year to accept the provisions of the bill.

On inquiry, we find this project is seriously entertained by our enterprizing citizens, and that it meets with general favor. At the meeting of the Councils, on Monday evening, a series of resolutions in favor of the object passed both Councils, in one body unanimously, and in the other with only two dissenting voices .-This is an indication of the general feeling of the public. There doubtless will be some individdal interests affected by it, should it succeed, and there will on that next, there to answer William Fear of cline to the belief that the mass of the population will view the project with avor when it is rightly understood.
