From the Albany Cultivator, Turning Stock to Grass.

f Unless compelled by scarcity of winter food, we should not generally turn stock to pasture till the grass has started to as to afford what farmers call "a good bite." If animals only get a little grass, and that of a watery and innutritious nature, as the first growth generally is, it takes away the appetite for other food, without giving much nourishment in its place. Besides, grass-lands, while in a soft or unsettled state, are injured by being trodden or poached by stock. This is, perhaps, the greatest objection to turning out early, or before the soil gets firm; though sheep from their comparative lightness, do much less injury than heavy stock.

Clover and timothy are generally much injured by early feeding. Red-top and blue grass are more hardy, and from their habits tends to unite the soil and make a firm sod. On this account, soils set in these grasses may be pastured, if dry, at almost any season, without much injury.

To check the too laxative tendency which young grass sometimes has, it is best to give stock a foddering of hay at night, for a while after they are turned out; the benefit of shelter.

after. Bury them in a manure heap, add some lime to quicken decay, and charcoal dust or plaster to absorb the gases, and much will be gained to the good appearance of the farm, the quality of the manure. and the quantity of the crops grown; and much to the purse of the farmer. If your neighbor is so improvident as to waste a dead animal, beg it of him. that it may not be detrimental to health and useless to vegetation. Laws should be passed to compel the saving and use of this most powerful of fertilizers, when common sense and decency fail to do it.

Whenever it is desirable to hasten decay, and rapidly turn animal matter into manure, sulphuric acid may be used .---This would be too expensive,-although the acid is cheap-for farm purposes, but may be employed for the garden, where expense is not so important. It is frequently desirable to have a rich manure in a garden, and it is not at hand .---Animal matter put into sulphuric acid will in a few hours finish it. Every house will supply much refuse and animal matter: To this, rats, moles, feathers, hair, boncs, horns, &c., may be added. If the should be. All these will soon be redulbs. of animal matter .- Am. Agriculturist.

Curing Hay.

In this county most farmers are at this time engaged in securing their hay crops, and we would therefore beg leave to suggest to them the policy of salting their hay when putting it up in the mow or upon stack. Four quarts of salt to a ton will and in case of storms, they should have not only preserve it better, but will cause New and Cheap monthly

He certainly gets a good prodnet. In 1843, he took from 130 acres, 285 of well cured hay, and not more than ten acres, as he states, was manured at all excepting from the sheep as they grazed over it. We have known several similar ins'ances.

It is best not to turn working oxen to work." They will perform labor much better when fed on good, bright, soft hay, with two or three quarts of meal from Indian corn, barley, or oats and peas, with a few potatoes, carrots, and other succulent vegetables, than when fed on young grass. It takes some time for the animal system to accommodate itself to the change from dry to green food, or from hay to grass, and the first growth of grass, likely to weaken animals by its cathartic action.

DEAD ANIMALS.

At all seasons of the year, dead animals are seen to be hung up on the trees; and especially is this the case in the spring. On every farm where sheep are kept, dead lambs are suspended in the beautiful blooming and fruit bearing or- grain. cheris-how shocking!-to annoy the sight and smell, and waste the farmer's means. Dogs and cats, too are frequently hoisted into view in the same annoying and disgusting manner. If horses, cattle, sheep, or hogs die, they are drawn venting the rot in potatoes. Would it not out of sight, but not out of smell, and are still sources of disgust. Why is all this? If the farmer be so unfortunate or so negligent as the lose an animal, should he be crop! so wasteful as to permit the carcase to decay uselessly in the open air, to the great annovance of his family and every passer by? Does he not know that animal matter is the best and richest of manure?-Animal matter contains every element that is necessary to grow every plant known. In it are phosphate and carbonate of lime, ammonia, carbon, in short, in the best form, all the essentials of vegetable and if added to the compost heap, has- ed to the parts, it is said will remove all tens fermentation, and adds greatly to its warts, corns, and other excrescences on richness. Whenever a cat, dog, fowl, sheep, pig, horse, or cow dies, let the carcase be cut up and the bones broken. and the whole added to the manure heap. The carcase of a single horse will turn a load of useless muck or peat into mandung. Why then suffer it to decay uselessly and annoyingly? It is true it is not lost, for the gases that taint the air are appropriated by plants; but the farmer who bran. owned the animal, gets but a small por- edy. tion of what should be all his own. Why, then, will he waste the dead energies of the horse, when he has lost the living ones!
