POETRY.

THE MANEAC MAID.

BY J. CLEMENT.

Her face is fair, her form erect,

Her motions full of grace,

Within her eye we trace.

But not a gleam of reasons's light

The gay green carth around,

Wake every pleasant sound.

In all that God has made,

So full of heavenly light,

To her it is but a dark morass,

And myriad voices sweetly tuned,

And yet to her there's nothing fair,

And not a harp could thrill her soul,

Though by an angel played.

The beauteous world of mind, to us

Where reigns primeval night.

The glow of love concealed,

And all the woman in her heart,

Is like a fount congealed.

A ray of his own light,

The smile on friendshsp's face is dim,

It here seems strange that God should hide

But Heaven will yet illume the page,

THE MOON.

And all will there be bright.

In doing so, it necessarily arouses an opposition that would otherwise slumber. On the opposite side, also there are several Journals equally injudicious, which permit their zeal against a certaio policy to approximate towards an opposition to what is now the necessary action of the nation

Both are seriously, dangerously in error. Public men may not urge a country into a crisis, and expect that the very consummation of the wrong is to sanction all that preceded and follows it. The duties of all parties were admirably set forth at the recent town meeting of all parties. It is an absurdity, almost a guilty one, to regard war as expedient or just, MERELY BECAUSE IT EXISTS. We cannot thus wipe out with the blood spunge of war, the principles which God and reason have written upon our consciences. A free and just people should and will think for themselves on such a subject. Their duty is to the country-not a party; they are bound to maintain the nation in any exigency; but not to sanction or advicate wrong: they are invoked by patriotism to ens destruction to the home of their birth and blessings; but not to kiss the hand or consecrate the torch that fired it.

We oppose any faction, if any such there be which would oppose the country; and will follow the unfurled flag of the nation wherever it leads. Our allegiance is to the country, at all times and under any councils; and we condemn those who seek to obstruct, in a national crisis, the adopted action of the Government; but we equally rebuke those who An interesting paper on the appearance suppose that a war proclamation must of the surface of the Moon, was read be- fall like a curtain before the eyes and infore the Convention of Geologis s and Na- tellects of the country, that it must make furalists, in session at New York, recent- folly wisdom, and wrong right. ly, by the author, sames D.
