

Evening Telegraph
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1864.
MR. DAVIS' MESSAGE.

Mr. Davis' Message.
The President's message to Congress, delivered on the 8th inst., is a long and important document, containing a full and frank statement of the condition of the country, and of the progress of the war.

Review of the Year.
The year 1864 has been a year of great trial and tribulation for our country. It has been a year of great sacrifice and heroism, and of great triumph and glory.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

General Sherman's Report.
General Sherman's report on the operations of the Army of the Tennessee, during the campaign of 1864, is a masterpiece of military strategy and tactics.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

A Bill for the Relief of the Confederates.
The House of Representatives has passed a bill for the relief of the Confederates. This bill is a controversial one, and has caused much discussion.

Exchange of Prisoners of War.
The exchange of prisoners of war is a subject of great interest. It is necessary to provide for the humane treatment of those who are captured.

Improvement of Slaves.
The improvement of slaves is a subject of great importance. It is necessary to provide for the education and training of those who are in bondage.

The Foreign Debt.
The foreign debt of the United States is a subject of great importance. It is necessary to provide for the payment of this debt.

The Soldiers' Bonus.
The question of the soldiers' bonus is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who have served in the army.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

Negotiations for Peace.
The negotiations for peace are progressing slowly. It is necessary to have a strong and independent position.

Union Majority Twenty-Five Thousand.
The Union has a majority of twenty-five thousand in the House of Representatives. This is a significant victory for the Union.

General Sherman's Report.
General Sherman's report on the operations of the Army of the Tennessee, during the campaign of 1864, is a masterpiece of military strategy and tactics.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

Depreciation of Confederate Money.
The depreciation of Confederate money has been a serious problem for the South. It has led to a general decline in the value of property, and to a loss of confidence in the government.

Foreign Relations.
The relations between the United States and the other nations of the world are becoming more and more important. It is necessary for us to maintain a strong and independent position.

Four Pay of Public Officers.
The question of the pay of public officers is one of great importance. It is necessary to provide a fair and adequate compensation for those who serve the public.

Universal Conscription.
The question of universal conscription is one of the most important questions of the day. It is necessary to have a strong and efficient military force.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.

On the 11th of November, 1864, the President delivered a message to Congress, in which he reviewed the progress of the war, and the condition of the country.