Editorial Opinions of the Leading Journals Upon the Most Important Topics of the Hour.

COMFILED EVERY DAY FOR EVENING TELEGRAPH.

Prolonging Sectional Bitterness. From the Times.

Of course very few of our readers have oppor tunity to see the journals published in the Southern States, and whatever they learn of the temper of these papers is gathered from partial and stinted extracts. When the great Rebellion ended by the surrender of Lee and Johnston, we all hoped that the experience of four years would have had some appreciable effect upon the socalled exponents of public opinion in the South; we fancied that the stereotyped expressions of hate against the North would at least be modified. if not silenced. We could not expect an exuberance of love; but we did think that ordinary courtesy was not too much to look for, that we might no more hear the coarse vituperation with which the Southern tar-and-feather writers before the war assailed everything that came from the North.

As regards a large number of the newly revived papers in the South, we are sorry to say that we are disappointed. They are quite as truculent and as vindictive as in the most prosperous era of pilde and hate. Nearly every issue from the great cotton section turnishes some evidence of this undying mattee. Northern, and especially Eastern men, are crucified in rhetoric as extravagant and with spite as malignant as in the palmiest days of women-whipping glory. What is to be gained? The North-we speak advisedly-has treated the weaker party with a courtesy as unusual as it is magnanimous. convices as unusual as it is magnanimous. Saving here and there an exception, which might have been expected (for the affliction is very confirmedly chrone), the Northern press has been respectful, kind, and (not meaning offense) we may say lorgiving. There has been no howing for blood, no raving for confiscation, no classoring for that punishment which, in an earlier age, would have been deemed the inevita-ble cotollary of victory. ble cotollary of victory. We do not claim special merit for this; but we consider that after the bloody terrors of the grand conflict there is no intemperance of opinion here to compare with the utterances of Southern fire-eating editors. These foolish instructors argue, as of yore, from the mouth of the pistol and the point of the bowie-knife; we resist with cool argument. They brand with opprobrious epithets, and threaten with personal violence; we reply with others of pardon, and facilities to return to the Union. They elect the most bitter enemies to the Government to office; we simply ask these enemies to promise ordinary fealty. They hunt Federal officers, assassinate Federal soldiers, and make the presence of Federal civil agents most uncomfortable, if not dangerous. To all this our rejoinder is:-"Come back, give your word to be truly loyal, and all shall be for-

In ordinary cases the press is supposed to reflect the tone of the people; but in this in-stance we are willing to believe that the reverse is the lact. For if the tone of certain leading ournals in the Southern States may be taken to be a reflex of the popular sentiment, completed reconciliation is not so near as we had hoped for. There is a vein of ill-will apparently running through these journals which does not betoken good for the Union; the covert sneer is giving place to open definice, and the names of some of our best men are used in a way calculated to estrange and alienate rather than to assimilate and rounite.

Certainly this is to be regratted. The results of the war are positive, the conclusions are defi-nite, the changes thereby effected are complete and final; there can be no possible gain in cursing, while much may be achieved by mode-ration. We do not ask the conductors of Southern journals to admire a public man who may have been their bete new in former years; but one hitle fact they cannot shut from their visionthese men are or the victorious side; they may say and do much that is offensive to the losing party, but nothing can be gained by making faces or calling names. Let them be met by sound argument, by compact logic, by sincere patriotism, and there will be, at least, a chance for the right. No cause ever advanced, no cause ever failed to lose, by vituperation. The mover may be ever so offensive, his conduct ever so outrageous, his motives ever so base; but the opposer who calls names gives up the contest and sinks below the level of respect.

nently controlling those tendencies, and of building up in place of them a solid and genuine democracy. The article proceeds to show in a forcible way that the romedy, if it is ever to be efficacious, must be applied at once. Delay it, permit this aristocracy to resume its power, and it will never lay it down till another war compels another surrender.

The News from the Rio Grande. From the World.

The exciting occurrences on the Rio Grande are of little practical consequence, for nothing important is likely to follow from them. The night surprise and capture of the Imperial garrison of Bagdad by an armed party from the Texan side; the repeated demands for the surrender of the Imperial gunboat Antonio, and her repeated broadsides in response; the moving up the French fleet from the harbor of Matamoras, which, at daylight, opened fire upon the filibusters in Bagdad; and the marching orders given to the soldiers stationed at Matamoras, show enough of the teeth of war to quicken the blood in Southwestern veins; but there is no probability that these occurrences will embroil us with France.

The men who 'crossed over from Texas were mere filibusters, and their motive, doubless, was plunder and robbery. The report represents them to have been negroes, which is improbable. It is more likely that they were negroes for the nonce-whites who had disguised themselves by blackening their faces. Their selection of the night time for their exploit was perhaps to shield themselves, under the cover of darkness, against the vigilance of our troops, as well as to take the Imperial sentinels unawares, and surprise the garrison.

These men have violated our laws; as much so as did the famous Lopez expedition in 1850 against which the President of the United States issued his proclamation, but which, nevertheess, eluded our authorities and stole out of New Orleans on its ill-fated errand. It will be recollected that General Quitman, then Governor of Mississippi, was indicted for abetting that ex-pedition, and resigned his Governorship to meet the arrest. The same laws are in force now as then; and this is an occurrence of a similar nature. As it has taken place without the privity of our Government, and in spite of its efforts to preserve the peace on the Rio Grande, it can lead to nothing beyond a demand for explanations; probably not even to that. For, if our Government were to be held so far responsible as to subject it to such a demand, by whom would it be made ? If a traspass, it is a respace against Mexico, whose territory has been invaded in time of peace. The only Gov-crnment which we recognize in Mexico is not likely to complain, and that of Maximilian cannot, for want of any chaunel of communication. Will France complain? She would seem to have precluded herself by the recently published reply of the French Minuster of Foreign Affairs to Mr. Bigelow. We were therein told that France is not responsible for things done in Mexico; that if we had any grievances against that country we must go for redress to its Gov-ernment. Logically the converse of this rule must hold equally good. It France declines to listen to our complaints against Maximilian, on the ground that his is an independent Goverament, capable of answering for it clr, she must equally decline to listen to his complaints gainst us, for the same reason. The fact that all channels of complaint are thus closed should even make us more scrupulous in the observance of our appropriate duties. The time may come when we shall feel comcilled to go to war to expel the Austrian prince. But that war, if it becomes necessary, must be the deliberate act of our Government, at a time selected by itself; not precipitated by a band of desperadoes and robbers, proceeding in viola-tion of our laws. If these men can be detected and identified, they ought to be made an exam-ple of, for the vindication of the national digity. But their disguise as negroes may render dentification impossible, and balle the efforts of Such being the legal and international aspects of this affair, one word may be added as to its political significance. Such marauding expeditions, undertaken against pretended authorities whose presence in Mexico is as irregular and criminal as theirs, will feel little of the infamy which usually attaches to guilt. They will sanctity their designs of plunder by the universal repugnance felt by this whole nation towards the execution of the law will, there fore, be sheer force, unsupported by moral influ-ence. The violators of the law will secretly glory in their exploits. The thirst for booty will be reinforced by the passion for adventure, and by the expected sympathy of large classes at home. The Emperor of the French ought to see in such attempts fresh proofs of the impossibility of sustaining the Mexican empire, and to arrange his plans for an early withdrawal. The recurrence of such expeditions will excite the passions and feed the hopes of the Liberal party in Mexico, and prevent tranquility so long as Maximilian remains Since the accession of President Johnson our Government is pursuing a judicious course to-wards the bastard empire. It has unequivocally signified its intention never to recognize it; but is at the same time reluctant to assume an air of menace until Napoleon has had a reasonable time for the withdrawal of his troops. Considering the connivance and countenance he received from the preceeding administration, he is fairly entitled to this degree of forbearance. Mr. Sew-ard, by deteating the Mexican loan, by his affected blindness to the designs of France when they were patent to the whole world, by his violation of neutrality in her favor and against the Mexicans, and in various other ways, gave Napoleon good reasons for supposing that we should acquiesce. Alter such encouragement given by our Government, President Johnson acts on a sense of fairness in his willingness to smooth the way for an easy and apparently unconstrained retreat.

Sherman's Tribute to the Lamented General Lyon.

At a meeting of the Nathaniel Lyon Monument Association, held at Jefferson City, Missouri, on Monday last, General W. T. Sherman made the following speech :--

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen :- After the full and most excellent address of your Senator, it would be in bad taste for me to consume much of your time, but as a fellow-soldier and companion of the dead hero, I can but simply offer the soldier's commendation, and assure you that many a loving heart and many a brave far away will bound with new pleasure when they read that your Senator has come from his seat in Washing ton, that your Governor has presided at this meeting, and that the assembled representatives of the State of Missouri have laid aside their daily labor to do honor to one who shed his blood that you and I and those who come his blood that you and I and those who come after us may enjoy a government of law, of liberty, and perpetuity. It was my fortune to know well the subject that has brought us toge-ther to-night.- Nathaniel Lyon; he came to West Point in 1837, when I was there. He was a fair-haired, blue-eyed boy, little looking like the bold, courageous leader he atterwards turned out to be. But any one observant of human nature could in his quick eye observe a determi-pation even in his bowlood days, to grasp firmly whatever he undertook. Again in Florida, amid the everglades I met him, when mathood had siven strength and form to his body and mind, and then his courage and his vindicated earnestness led many of us to say that he out-stripped his discretion. Again in California. I happened there also

Again in California. I happened there also when he came, after he had been crowned with success at Contreras, leading a gallant charge. I saw him in California, also when was com-mitted to him the charge, with two small com-panies, to cover an exposed frontier, and many who are living now remember how he toiled whore boats had never been seen, to the rich where boats had never been seen, to the rich Indian h dung-p aces, amid the lakes of Clear Lake valley. Nor did he tarry there, but on through mountain passes to the old Red river country. It may be there are some old Cali-forniaus here who will remember the character fornians here who will remember the character of that country. He struck a blow to those In dians that they remember to tols day. Nor did he cease then, but with characteristic energy, which marks his while life, he moved on to Sacramento to avenge the death of one we all loved, though you may not remember him— Capitain Warner—who was killed by those In-dians. Those of us who were familiar with those in her avenue and the same states of the s those incidents in his career will ever remember those incidents in his career will ever remember Lyon. Thus, long, long before you had heard of him, this man, so famous with you, had been schooled in a school which simply brought forth the natural characteristics of his mind and body; and when he came to Kansas, and atterwards to Missouri, he was qualified and capable of seeing deeper and further into the purposes of men than many who make it then study. I met him for the last time, as friend and companion, at the arsenal-at that time I a citizen, he a soldier, still a captain-captain of the 2d Regiment of Infantry. I saw at a glance, by his movement and manner, putting a little redoubt here and posting a gun, not uttering a word, evecting a scalidding in one place, and purching a hole through a stone wall in another place, that the men plotting to destroy this Government and seize that arsenal would meet more than they bargained for if they attempted it. Then, for the first time, when arsenal after arsenal had fallen, and fort after fort yielded on the more demand of a mob of men, they met their match then, and they came no further ; nor did Lyon, as stated, nor could he, brook delay. He did not wait till the meanes and trammels which were being plotted for him were periected. Probably in this very town of Jailerson City he took the initiative. The first man in this country that seized the whole inestion, and took ithe initiative and de-termined to strike a blow, and not wait for the blow to be struck. I remember him well during that time, and his argumentations and reason ing were close and pointed. No lawyer could have argued a case, or statesman broached with broader and better views. Heidid strike, and you know he took Camp Jackson, and followed it up to this point, thence to Boonville, and so on to Springfield. Up to that point no one can question either the wislom or energy with which ANDREW G. CURTIN, Governor of Pennsylvania. he conducted his post. Some, it is said, can tioned him to delay, others to withdraw-simply because he could not obtain a force adequate to the end in view-to meet the concentrated forces of Price and McCulloch. But Lyon was right. He struck the blow, and had he lived you ne'er again in Missouri would have had a foe to contend with, and peace would have had a foe to con-tend with, and peace would have reigned here from that time. (Applause.) But man proposes and God disposes. We can-not add a mite to his fame or his station; we cannot change the fact, and must accept it as one of the mysterious dispensations of Provi-dence. But to day which of you would not rather be the dead Lyon in his quiet grave in Connecticut, than to be his opponent now in a tar-off land, and the outcast (applause), or that other optionent of his who in wonder its other opponent of his, who, in yonder city, simply tarries for a few brief years, till the grave will take him up, unknown and unsung. Better, whit take min up, unknown and unsung. Better, iar better, for Lyon as he is, and none would exchange with the other parties. (Applause.) Now, my friends, you are here alter a great battle; the war and the smoke has cleared away. No longer conjusion troobles you. No eneny harasses you; and the duty devolves on you to see to it that these man who house ched their to see to it that those men who have shed their blood and who lie in remote graves are sought for, and that their memories are treasured up where they belong in history. And yet you owe it to your State and the children who are to come atter you, to make sufficient recognition of their The life of a man is nothing. It comes to day and goes to-morrow. Its span is the span of a hand; still it is the most precious thing that we possess. All men struggle to maintain their lives, and when such a men as Lyon gives up his lite unhesitatingly and unfalteringly, he simply consigns himself to your care and the care of those for whom he gave up his life. You, therefore, in honoring him, in honoring his memory, in reviving and reviewing his virtues, simply do that which does honor to yourself, to your State, and to those who are to follow you. say, therefore, erect your obelisk, and inscribe upon it the name and virtues of this man, and let your children point to it that they may see the course which leads to the approbation of men, and the honor of his fellow-men. You may, of course, do him no good now, but you may do yourselves and children good by commemorating his virtues, and erecting this tablet to his name. I have, therefore, simply appeared before you to-night to be one of the advocates of this under-taking. I care not myself in what form you may choose to honor his memory, but the Siate of Missourl, in recognizing the services of General Lyon, recognizes what the world knows to be so. that he gave his life to his whole country, but more especially that you should be no longer harassed by the dread calamities of invasion. That be did not succeed was not owing to his own personal exertions, but other causes which he could not control. The act itself was as pure and god-like as any that ever characterized a soldier on the field of battle. There were many features in Lyon's character very lew understood. He was not only a cours geous man, but a very gentle man. A kindly man-at times he was blind of course to the commonplace ever toof daily life, but when or kind to his officers or more beloved by his men. Thus the shock that made plain the desthe country, brought out the strong features in his character, and you in Missouri saw him amid the tempest and whirlwind of war when he was pulled hither and thither, and when he only kept in view one single mark—a mark which he thought led to the so ety and becore of his ecounty. I will be acted honor of his country. I wish he could have lived, for he possessed many of those qualities which were needed in the first two or three years of the war, and his death imposed on the nation a penalty numbered by theusands on thousands of lives and millions on millions of

A New Reconstruction Argument. From the Tribune.

Neglect of general causes is a common mistake in political discussions. A writer in the North American Review for January has seen this defect, and undertakes to point out the "Climatic Influences as bearing upon Secession and Reconstruction." The celebrated development hypothesis of Darwin is herein made to do good service by an application of its principles to the problem of Reunion we are all trying to solve. For, obviously, the first thing we need to be sure of is, What broke up the Union that is to be reconstructed?

The causes commonly assigned are insufficient, or, at any rate, imperfectly stated. Slavery, we say, was the root of secession; but why was it? The Northern colonies held slaves. why was it? The Northern colonies neid snaves. Why did the North abolish the institution, but the South retain it? Whence came the aristocratic form of society at the South, and the doc-trine of State Rights? The answer our reviewer would give to all these questions is, Climate It is climate which devoted the South to agricul ture, and to that form of it which employed slavery, and out of which grew the planter class, and at the same time the poor whites. This exclusive devotion to this form of agriculture is further responsible for the adherence of the South to free trade.

If the Rebeilion grew, then, not out of slavery alone, but out of all these causes which them-selves sprang from one antecedent and still existing cause, the destruction of slavery and the suppression of the Rebellion do not constitute a perfect guarantee for future peace. The South maintained its peculiar institution against the opinion of the civilized world; it may renew it under another form and another name if like causes are still operative, and are not counter-The first remedy suggested is acted by others. the general establishment of manufactures which are democratic in their influence, and would avert the tendency of questions con-cerning free trade and protection to become sectional.

The second remedy is equal suffrage, to break down the control of an aristocracy, litting up the poor white as well as the negro, and releasing both from the tyranny of caste. "In a country," says the author, "whose natural ten-dency to aristocracy is such as has been pointed out, what danger may not be apprehended from presence of a Pariah caste whose debase ment and incapacity for self-protection invites to their subjection? In the North, there is always a division into classes rich and poor, learned and ignorant, high and low; but they are never permanent. They are like the sea and the clouds; the drop which stagnates among the weeds to-day, to-morrow may reflect the hues of the rainbow. The constant interchange of posi-tion, preventing settled castes and class spirit, is one safety. But where in a State, especially one of aristocratic tendencies, there is a class distinction drawn, permanent and unchange able because based upon nature's brand setting off a race proscribed, ignorant, and necessitous, there a weight is thrown into the scale on the side of aristecracy which it seems impossible to counterbalance." If it can be counterbalanced, it is only by a reconstruction of society in fact as well as in name.

The argument for negro suffrage is thus drawn The argument for neero suffrage is thus drawn from the aristocratic tendencies of the South, and the ballot demanded as a means of perma-

The Sugar Prospect.

The Cincinnati Commercial savs :- Our advice to the farmers of Ohio, Kentacky, and Indiana, is to plant as fargely of sorghum the coming scason as possible, and to make as much maple sugar as they can for home use. It is now tolera-bly clear very little sugar and molasses can be expected from the sugar producing region of the outh. The planters say they cannot make sat-stactory contract: with the freedmen if the conis actory contract: with the freedmon if the con-tracts are made. The Legislature of Louisiana adjourned without passing any laws regulating labor or binding the parties to contracts, and there is an indisposition to abide by the regula-tions of the Freedmen's Bureau. The sugar crop to Louisiana the past is the parties of Fact in Louisiana the past year, in the parish of East Baton Rouge and contiguous parishes, falls below that of any preceding year since the culture of cane commenced. The Baton Rouge Advocate estimates that the entire crop in East Louisiana, West Baton Rouge, Point Coupce, and the Gros Tete portion of Iberville, will be under 800 hogsds for 1865. It says:-

"In former years the same section of country produced at least 30,000 hogsheads of sugar, 10,000 barrels of molasses, 40,000 bales of cotton, and any quantity of corn. This year it will sum up about 2000 bales of cotion, 800 hogsheads of ugar, 3000 barrets of molasses, and not enough of corn to last till spring. The valuation of portation products, taking the average yield and prices of former years, in these nine parishes, was, in round numbers, exceeding $9,000.00; annum. The valuation will not exceed $700,000."

A CONTRIBUTION TO THE MATERIA MEDICA.-A native East Indian physician has recently described a new drug, which promises to be of some value in the treatment of bronchial affec-tions. The plant from which it is obtained is called by the Hindoos "bakus," and is a common hedge shrub in Bengal and the upper provinces. The writer prepares an extract of the leaves, and administers it with great advantage in all cases of catarrh. When taken internally it gives rise to a sensation of warmth in the stomach, and in some cases increases the appetite, promotes expectoration when this is scanty. and diminishes it when excessive. It is con-

But, gentlemen, I dld not intend to make any lengthy remarks. I thank you for your attention. (Loud applause.)
