Loyal Utterances of a Southern Unions ist-The Need of Such Representatives. THERE was delivered yesterday in toe House of Representatives a speech which sounds more pleasant to our cars than any of the flowery oratory or bliter invective which has filled the Halls of Congress since the session opened. It was the effort of Hon. SAMUKL McKee, member from the Ninth District of Kentucky, who spoke with the true ring of unmitigated, unadulterated loyalty, and rebuked in no chosen words the treason and deception continually practised by the Southern members. Coming as he does from a State where the Rebel element is so dominant, as to be endeavoring to secure the return and re-election of JOHN C. BRECKINGIDGE to the United States Senate, we must congratulate him on his free outspoken utterances against treason, elavery and all who sympathize with their fate or followers. In the course of his remarks he was continually interrupted by his colleagues, and it was one continual battle against all the influence of his State to utter what he deemed right. The sentiments he uttered had such a true ring of loyalty about them that we quote from the despatch the substance of his remarks:-

"Mr. McKee held that as slavery had been viped out, the Constitution needed amendment, but this is denied by those who were opposed to levying war, and who said we had no right to call out troops to crush treason. Those who were in favor of amending the Constitution were met by those gentlemen with the cry of usurpation, because Rapresentatives from rebellious States were not now admitted to the floor; but who sent the Southern Representatives from this hall? They departed of their own accord, going out one by ore, and State by State. They picked up their hats and walked out in disgust. They wanted no part in the Legislature of the nat on, they never would come back. thanked God they were not now here. He did not desire to see the day when a traitor could ask to come back, and have the same rights as those who upheld our banner in the neid. The pending amendment did not go as 'ar as he de-sired. He should like one saying that no man who had raised his hand against the day should ever participate in our legislation; but it was not probable that in this he would be grat ded. He wanted to legislate for the whole, and not a part of the country. It did not appear to his mind that the Southern people are in condition to be represented in large number."

In the old Biblical story of the destruction of Sodom, we are told that the presence of ten righteous men would have saved the city. So now in our modern times, if there be found but ten such men as Mr. McKEE there is hope of the future resurrection of the South. The need and absolute necessity of such men is not appreciated by the late Rebel population. They are still tightly bound to their idols, and are asking us to let them alone. That we do so is because there exists an element, and we fendly hope a powerful element, of which Mr. McKee is a good representative, a fair type. Men who have been true to the Union, who have worked for the Union, and perchance have fought for our cause.

To desert such men would be the height of national baseness. We therefore stand forth, and again and again urge upon the Southern masses the propriety of exhibiting that spirit of loyalty which alone can gain their readmission into Congress. They must have been convinced ere now of the utter futility of their hopes of being able to burst into the halls of legislation and repeat again the exhibition so successfully enacted in 1860, to secure by arrogance and insolence what they gould not claim on the ground of merit. The firm and unrelenting attitude of the Union party must have had the effect of tearing the scales from their eyes. We now again urge them to listen to such sentiments as those of Mr. McKee, adopt them as their own, and they will find that those who are to-day most bitter against their readmission will be the first to welcome them as brethren, repentant and pardoned,

Our Sanitary Condition. THE rapid approach of spring reminds us of the necessity of making provision for the healthful condition of our city during the summer months. We are too much in the habit of waiting until the pestilence is upon us before we make the proper arrangement to meet the ravages of the fell destroyer. The migratory character of the cholera is a strong argument in favor of moving in this matter at an early moment. We concede the fact that it is impossible to absolutely avoid the curse. but the intensity of the epidemic may be reduced by precautionary measures. We should see that our very admirable quarantine arrangements are strictly carried out. But much greater importance should be attached to the cleansing of our streets and alleys. Immense amounts of garbage have been collecting for months in the by-ways of the city, which, although innoxious at present, will be breeding places of malaria when the dog-star rages. It is the duty of Councils to see to the removal of all disease-generating matter as early in the spring as possible. The money spent in this way will not be lost. It may save us from the attack of the pestilence, and spare many valuable lives. Our city legislators spend much of their time in discussing matters of minor importance. Let them give some little attention to the condition of our streets, and, if there is necessity for it spend some of the public money in this behalf.

The Freedmen's Bureau Bill-The New Bill and its Provisions. THE Senate passed on Thursday, by nearly a four-fifths vote the bill for the continuance and enlargement of the Freedmen's Bureau. The bill is in eight sections, the substance of each provides:-Section 1. Original act to continue in force;

President to establish twelve or less districts, with an Assistant Commissioner for each. Section 2. The Commissioner to assign subdistricts, with one agent to each. Section 8. Secretary of War may direct such issues of provisions, clothing, fuel, etc., for refugees and freedmen, as he deems needful Section 4. President may reserve for freedmen and refugees 3,000,000 acres of unoccupied land in Florida, Mississippi, and Arkansas, which the Commissioner of the Bureau shall allot in 40-acre parcels.

Section 5. Titles to Sea Islands, etc., under Sherman's order, confirmed for three years. Section 6. Commissioner shall purchase lands required for support of dependent freedmen and refugees, and build asylums and

Section 7. Where rights of labor, of contract, equal benefit of laws, etc., are denied to freedmen, the President shall extend military jurisdiction and jurisprudence for their pro-

Section 8. Whoever subjects any freedman to slavery or involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime, or discriminates between white and black in penalties, shall be punished by fine of $1000, and one year's imprisonment.

The passage of this bill is a direct rebuke to the recommendations of the Southern Governors, and to those who are arguing in favor of an accomplished resteration of good feeling and civil authority in the late Rebel States. With the single exception of the extremely trifling punishment for the sale of a human being, in the eighth section, the whole is admirable, and will meet the warmest approval of all humanloving and justice-seeking citizens.

THE HIGH SCHOOL AND COMMON COUN-CIL.-It is amusing to read the discussion of the motion to defeat the High School appropriation in Common Council, but to listen to it was positively ridiculous. The unique grammar and the original rules of syntax followed by the sages who favor the discontinuance of the school, afforded the best answer to the arguments, and made the spectator earnestly wish that some such institution, or some primary school, could be truthfully termed the Alma Mater of the speakers-To hear a man give as an unanswerable argument against the institution, that "they were not educated at the High School," is somewhat ludicrous. Yet such is the strain of oratory pursued by the opponents of the appropriation. Mr. SIMPSON stated as a powerful reason in favor of his motion, that "We tax the people to give them an equal system of education, but only about four per cent. of the pupils can be educated in the High School-Of those educated there, seventy per cent. were drones upon the community." All of which would be very conclusive, if it was not controverted by facts. Mr. HANcock, another knight in the anti-High School livery, favored the compulsory attendance at school of every child until it reachs a certain age. Their attendance, according to what he said, and possibly what he meant, begins at birth, and continues until they attain, say fifteen years. This sounds something like the public laws of the days of Cotton MATHER and witchcraft, and is about as legal as the burning of Reformers or the expulsion of Quakers. Several other orators uttered burning words against the school, and used arguments as conclusive as those we have quoted. But we are glad to see that the institution had triends who were not silent. Able and powerful addresses were made by Messrs. WILLITS, FRANCISCUS, and TAYLOR, while a really conclusive answer to all the opposition was furnished by Mr. R. M. EVANS, who deserves praise for the clearness of his style and the cogency of his arguments. The vote on the motion, 18 to 25, is entirely too close for the friends of the High School to rest in supine indifference, and it becomes the Alumni at their next meeting to take steps to protect their institution from the attacks of ignerance

The Supplies for the City Commissioners. THE proposals for blanks, books, and stationery for the coming year are now in the hands of the City Commissioners. It is to be hoped that particular pains will be taken to see that these articles are procured at reusonable, or even market prices. For some years past these contracts have been mines of wealth to certain parties, and the city has suffered from the extortionate prices paid for them. The contract is a large one, and should attract the attention of stationers to such an extent as to make the thing an object to all engaged in the trade. Our stationery costs us every year entirely too much. It may seem to be a small leakage, but when all the apertures are discovered the Treasury will be found to be a sort of cullender through which a vast quantity of the city's finances can escape. It is very well to commence at the small end and work up gradually to the larger escape pipes. The proposal to carefully inquire into these singular disappearances of public moneys can result in no barm, and may be productive of

The following communication relative to the supplies of the City Commissioners explains itself. The schedule attached shows the bids for the contract for the year 1865:-

PHILADELPHIA, January 25, 1866.—To the President and Members of the Sciect and Common Councies.—Centlemen:—The City Commissioners being about to award contracts for the supply of Books. Blanks, and Stationery for their Department for the principal articles furnished for the very 1885, by which a will be seen that the contracts were awarded which it will be seen that the contracts were awarded to the highest bidder ranging trans to the highest bidder, ranging from 50 to 207 per cent. higher than other bidders who had filed bonds to supon the work or goods at the prices offered. I respectfully ask that measures be adopted to pre-vent a repetition of the fraud or tout the farce of advertising for proposals be abandoned, and thus save b'dders the trouble and expense of fling bonds.

NEW GAS REGULATOR,

INVENTED BY

DR. CHAS. M. CRESSON,

(Late Managing Engineer of the Philadelphia Gas Works), possessing GREAT DELICACY of adjustment, by the use of a peculiar form of valve and gas holder, governing accurately a single light, with a capacity to pass gas enough for the full number of lights, and the ability within the instrument itself, to increase the pressure, when the greater quantity of gas is required. Among the peculiar advantages of this Regulator, that make it preferable to instruments of more contracted size. which require the use of MFECURY or FLEXIBLE DIAPHRAGMS, the following deserve especial notice :-

FIR-T-The tree motion of the Regulating Valve through considerable space, gives it greater delicacy of adjustment, and a wider range of consumption in a single instrument, then is possible with other forms.

SECOND-7 be field seal of GLYCERINE used in this REGULATOR, avoids the dangers resulting in other forms, from the unwhelesome vapors of Mercury, which, passing off with the Gas, are disseminated throughout the rooms in which it is burned, subjecting the occupants TO ALL THE DELETERIOUS EFFECTS OF MERCURY upon the human system, and especia ly upon the LUNG and skin, when it is thus diffused as vapor. The accidental overflow of Mercury from hese mercurial Scals has often injured valuable Gas Meters, the cost of which has necessarily been charged to the

Where the use of MERCURY in regulators is avoided by the substitution of a FLEXIBLE DIAPHRAGM, the resulting dimentics are also numerous; one is the liability to LFAK GE and EXPLOSION OF GAS: another, the less of Fiexibility and consequent inefficiency by age and exposure to cold, and thirdly, the inherent vice of want of delicacy of adjustment, and range of action. To remedy these faults, the "CRESSON REGULA -TOR" was invented, and wherever introduced it has given the greatest satisfaction, always producing a steady light and regular consumption, with a saving of from TWENTY to THIRTY Per Cent. in amount of gas

FRANKLIN IN. TITUTE, dated October 18, 1865:- "An experimental trial was then made as to the quantity of gas consumed by the burners when under regulation to their maximum economy, and also the amount consumed by the same burners when subjected to the ordinary variations of street pressure. "The result showed that with the Regulator there was uniforn ly 78 cubic feet or gas per hour consumed, being an average of 3 7-10 cubic feet per burner Whilst without the Regulator the same burners consumed from 106 to 140 cubic feet per hour, the average being 126 cubic feet, or 6 feet per hour to each barner ' The test apparatus which was set up in the FRANK-LIN INSTITUTE can be seen at our
