MONDAY, MARCH 5, 1866.

Union State Convention.

A Stated Convention will be held in the Hall of the House of Representatives in Harrisburg, Pa., on WEDNESDAY, THE SEVENTH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1866, at 12 o'clock M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor, to be supported by the friends of the Union.

The Federal Government is now amended and to start forward on a new and grander career of prosperity on the basis of national unity. The true and tried "Union party" of this State must, therefore, while keeping their main principle in view, so modify their action as to meet the altered conditions of the time. They have put down rebellion and destroyed slavery. Their obvious policy now, is to aid the Federal Government in all wise and just measures for the speediest possible reconstruction of the Union.

The State Conventions.

THE politicians are to have a grand time at Harrisburg this week. The State Conventions of the Republican and the Democratic parties are to meet there at almost the same time, to nominate opposing candidates for the Governorship. The State Capital will, of course, be a scene of unusual excitement during the next few days, and we have made arrangements to supply our readers with full and accurate reports of the proceedings of both of the very important bodies to be there congregated.

This evil should be corrected. The time and its issues are too critical to be trifled with by indiscreet or corrupt persons, who are generally much more solicitous for their private advantage than for the public welfare. And in this connection it is seriously to be deplored that conventions called to choose candidates for high and responsible positions, cannot meet and act without being impudently interfered with by a vast crowd of selfish, ignorant, and intriguing individuals, who are mainly concerned to secure the nomination of some particular aspirant whose special friends they claim to be, and whom, if successful, they intend to hold personally bound to take care of them in the dispensation of his official patronage.

character of men they elect to represent and carry out, in executive station, those principles. We are, of course, particularly interested in what the Convention of the Union party in this State may do. They will, we trust, act with more than ordinary caution. In view of what has recently transpired at Washington, they certainly will not close their eyes to the fact that the Union sentiment of the people everywhere in the North, at least, is as strong now, if not even stronger, than it has been at any period during the last five years.

Amendments to the Constitution.

A GREAT deal of unnecessary surprise has been recently expressed at the numerous amendments proposed in the national Congress for altering the Constitution of the United States, and there are not wanting a class in our community who view these suggested changes as evidence of the general instability of the times, and predict financial and political disaster.

BOARDING HOUSE PROCLAMATIONS.

Mr. "Colorado" JEWETT walks to and fro on the earth like the "Wandering Jew," (from which root his name might have been derived,) pausing only at the caravanserais on the desert of life known as fashionable hotels.

Ed. TELEGRAPH.—I am of the opinion that the people must meet the issue that the freedom of the slave means equality with the white man— or prepare for a war of races; and that a war of races may be prevented by securing to the negro race an independent domain, or by distributing them among the nations of the earth, under international action—as declared the only just course to pursue, by the late King Leopold, at an interview I had the honor to have with His Majesty.

The President has intimated the action of Congress, without Southern representation, is void. The people must go further, and admit the action of Congress null and void during the civil war. I opposed the war because both the North and South were in the South in seeking independence outside of Congressional constitutional action, and the North in seeking the freedom of the slave outside of constitutional action.

tended to alarm the timid. It is an old remark, that every year the crops and the nation are going to ruin, yet by some benign dispensation the anticipated devastation is continually postponed. Let us then continue to hope that the same care which has in the past defeated the numerous trivial propositions will continue in the future to act as a shield against unnecessary innovation.

The Streets and the Cholera.

THERE seems to be a very prevalent opinion that the cholera, which made such terrible ravages in various parts of Europe during the past year, will visit this country in the course of the coming summer. This impression is not confined to the general mass of the people, who are too apt to be led away by what may be, not offensively, called their ignorant fears, but it is participated in by our most eminent medical men, who build their anticipations in respect to the matter on their own experience of the nature and habits of the epidemic. It is well remembered that its progress hitherto has been from the East westward, and that its passage, though suspended at certain points of its route, and for shorter or longer intervals, has never failed in the end to run its own course.

It is also notorious that the cholera is yet not completely understood by the medical profession in any part of the world, notwithstanding its repeated appearance and the vast amount of study and investigation which have been bestowed upon it. Its operation, moreover, is as rapid as it is mysterious, and in the presence of its fearful fatality the public mind is so seized with panic as almost entirely to paralyze all rational efforts to check its march.

This fact should be particularly effective in urging on every municipal government the importance of making all necessary arrangements to either avert the pestilence altogether or to mitigate its violence when it comes. An ounce of prevention in such cases is worth a pound of cure, and any money, labor, and foresight expended now will be richly compensated for hereafter.

The streets are in a shocking condition of filthiness, and if they are allowed to remain so until the hot summer sun begins to putrefy the offal in our highways and byways, and to evaporate the noisome poisons it contains, so that the whole air of the city will be filled with it, we may certainly expect that the destructiveness of the cholera, when it arrives, will be a hundred fold greater than it could or would be, were it not given the aid of the powerful auxiliary agencies which it has everywhere found in foul localities overhung with a mephitic atmosphere.

The late action of the City Councils authorizing the Mayor to have the city cleaned by contract is a step in the right direction, though it is to be regretted that it was not taken months ago. This delay of the municipal legislature, however, requires that the Mayor shall act with all prudent expedition in the granting of the contracts, as several weeks must necessarily elapse after that before the contractors can get ready with carts, horses, and men, to perform the work. There will, no doubt, be much competition among those who may desire to get the contracts, in the hope of being able to make considerable profit out of them; but they should be awarded to those only who can be trusted to execute them efficiently and faithfully.

BOARDING HOUSE PROCLAMATIONS.—Mr. "Colorado" JEWETT walks to and fro on the earth like the "Wandering Jew," (from which root his name might have been derived,) pausing only at the caravanserais on the desert of life known as fashionable hotels. From each station he issues a manifesto, treating of Empire, Cattle Diseases, Reconstruction, and other cheerful topics. We have one of these bulls dated at the Tremont House, another from the Astor, while a third comes from the Continental, and the last from the Burnett House. Like its predecessors, it is slightly confused in its utterances, and some narrow-minded people cannot see any connection between the different parts of its contents. This last effusion is more radical than its predecessors, and we greatly fear that the conservatives of our land are about to lose a valuable member of the party. We hope that Mr. JEWETT will pause before he acts. His influence is great; the utterances of WYKOFF, JOANNES, and other great diplomatists sink into insignificance when compared with his. We therefore counsel caution. The "Burnett Manifesto" which we give below, is incendiary in its tone, and reflects but little credit on Mr. JEWETT's heart.

BURNETT HOUSE, CINCINNATI, February 25, 1866.

Ed. TELEGRAPH.—I am of the opinion that the people must meet the issue that the freedom of the slave means equality with the white man— or prepare for a war of races; and that a war of races may be prevented by securing to the negro race an independent domain, or by distributing them among the nations of the earth, under international action—as declared the only just course to pursue, by the late King Leopold, at an interview I had the honor to have with His Majesty.

slavery), with a patriot Government. I do hereby, for the promotion of that end, pledge my time, directly while here, and indirectly while in Europe, and will furnish five hundred thousand dollars, at the time of nomination, as a part of a legitimate expense fund to advance the nomination in question; and now declare, in order to show the disinterested character of this act, that I will not receive any nomination from that convention nor from the people, acting only in the convention as a delegate from Philadelphia, Pa.

—The Florida Times learns from all parts of that State that the demand for laborers is in excess of the supply, and that the plantations everywhere are successfully worked, though there is still a lurking apprehension that free labor will fail to meet all the exigencies of the cotton crop. Like the fears of insurrection and insubordination, which have been indulged and disappointed, it believes this apprehension groundless.
