

CITY INTELLIGENCE

[For Additional Local Items see Third Page.]

A REVOLUTIONARY HELIC BROUGHT TO LIGHT.—A day or two since some workmen were employed in making an excavation in the cellar of Mr. William McNally's liquor establishment, No. 146 and 148 Water street, one door above Walnut, on the west side. After digging to the depth of about two feet the spades of the workmen struck on something that would not yield to the force applied to the digging utensil. An examination proved that two pieces of artillery lay embedded in the cellar, which were quickly unearthed and brought to light.

They are regular old-fashioned six-pounders, and, of course, covered with rust to the depth of about half an inch. They were found resting on the blocks of oak wood, underneath which ran a small stream of water. How they got there is a matter of conjecture; but the inference is that they are either pieces of ordnance buried there by the American troops during the Revolution, and just before the city of Philadelphia was occupied by the British, or else they constituted a portion of a fortification that existed in that locality long before bricks and mortar were known on the shores of the Delaware river.

The position of the guns, as discovered, gives coloring to the supposition that they belonged to some ancient fortifications. They were, as far as appearances indicated, regularly mounted, one pointing north, and the other south. It is established beyond dispute, that the guns were where they were found, for over fifty years; for the deeds of the property occupied and owned by Mr. McNally, where they were found, states that the building was erected about the commencement of the present century. It cannot be ascertained whether any building existed on the site of the one where these guns were found prior to the erection of the present one, and the plain inference is that they were situated in the cellar of some building that stood during the "times that tried men's souls," then they belonged to some old (possibly Dutch) fortification. The semblance of a crown can be distinctly traced on the breech of the guns, and the number of the breech is certainly highly interesting relic of "Aurora's" reign.

LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN. T. B. Peterson, No. 306 Chestnut street.—The present biography is a neatly executed and accurately compiled work, and covers the ground which has not been touched by any other life of the great President. While the space devoted to his public career is small, yet all the circumstances of his death, funeral cortege, and obsequies are given far fuller than ever before. The address of the Hon. George Bancroft is also included, the whole making a volume of also interesting and valuable. It is another evidence of the energy of the Messrs. Peterson.

A MAN OF THE WORLD. By William Worth. T. B. Peterson, No. 306 Chestnut street.—The present volume is the most unadorned waste of good paper and gilded binding that we have ever seen. If it was intended as a parody on this class of sensational novels, now so common, it would be a great success. But as it is the Simon pure, and not a sarcasm, we can only advise our readers to look at it as an imitation and enjoy it as a joke.

TOOK TO THE WOODS.—Lydia Walker is a mulatto girl. Lydia occupied the responsible position of a domestic in the family of Mr. Charles Lloyd, who resides in Delaware county. Lydia went to Mr. Lloyd's residence last Tuesday, but suddenly left between two days. It was discovered that an overcoat and a quantity of ladies' underclothing belonging to the family accompanied Lydia. It appears that, after leaving the house with the articles in question, Lydia concealed herself in a patch of woods in the Twenty-fourth Ward during the entire day yesterday, with the intention, doubtless, of reaching the city under cover of the night. The police, however, overhauled Lydia in the woods, and she could not give a good account of herself she was taken before Alderman Allen, where the above facts were brought to light, and she was sent to Delaware county for trial.

DEATH OF A CELEBRITY.—Most of our readers will remember Mr. Nellis, in connection with Barnum's Museum, at Seventh and Chestnut streets. His specialty was that he was born without arms, and had so carefully educated his feet, that he was able to perform all those menial tasks which could be accomplished by more fortunate individuals. He could use the pen and scissors very expertly—writing an admirable hand, and cutting profiles with an accuracy that was perfectly wonderful. News has been received from the friends of the late Mr. Nellis, that he died at his residence in Philadelphia, on the 4th of December last. He was a native of New York, and was about 48 years of age at the time of his death.

FREAKS OF AN INMATE OF THE ALMSHOUSE.—A man named William Mullen was arrested yesterday evening for an assault and battery with intent to kill the door-tender of the Almshouse. Mullen was an inmate of the Almshouse, and attempted to get out, when his progress was checked by the door-tender. He (Mullen), then seized a chisel and attempted to stab the door-tender—a struggle ensued, during which Mullen succeeded in wounding the latter, consequently taken before Alderman Allen, who committed him to prison.

DISCHARGE PAPER FOUND.—During yesterday a soldier's discharge paper was found in the street, and taken to the Mayor's Office.
