

THE WORLD OF FASHION

Paris, Berlin, and London Modes for Summer—Bonnets, Cloaks, Dresses, Patelois, Jackets, and Shawls—Hair Dressings—Jewelry, Etc.

Never has spring opened with more variety in fashions. All those which delighted us during last spring and autumn seem vying with new ones for supremacy.

For bonnets the prevailing and favorite styles seem to be the Fanchon, and the new hat, and up to the present week it is impossible to say which will be taken into popular favor.

The Fanchon is not precisely similar to those worn last year, as the new forms under that name are much smaller in every respect than their predecessors.

There was an attempt made at crowns, nothing substantial and firm, it is true, but lace, ribbon, and an occasional sprig or two of flowers supplied the place.

For cloaks the prevailing and favorite styles seem to be the Fanchon, and the new hat, and up to the present week it is impossible to say which will be taken into popular favor.

Finglets are the most popular, and they are made in net, which are called Benoitons nets (everything is christened Benoitons now-a-days).

It is a fabric between the Chambers and the Benoitons, and is very much like the latter, but at a shorter distance, very like a dog's curly hair.

The fashion of dyeing the hair red or bright auburn is at last passing away. Very beautiful auburns are now replaced by those of broader moire and gros grain ribbons.

Another new material, christened the "Chambery foulard," is already extremely fashionable. It is a fabric between the Chambers and the Benoitons.

DESTRUCTIVE CONFLAGRATION.—LARGE SAW-MILL. RUINED.—LOSS, $100,000. One of the most extensive saw-mills in the city, situated on the western side of Twenty-first street, between Chestnut and Locust streets, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday night last.

The building was a large three-story brick structure, having a front of Twenty-first street of 40 feet, and extending back about half-way to Twenty-second street. It was occupied by J. M. Jones, a well-known contractor.

On Wednesday night last, at about 10 o'clock, a fire broke out in the mill, and in a few minutes the flames were spreading rapidly, and before the firemen could get to the mill, the entire structure was in flames.

The fire was extinguished by the firemen, but the damage was so great that the mill was a total loss. The loss is estimated at $100,000, which is only partially covered by insurance.

The mill building was occupied as follows:—The first and second floors were used as the planing, sawing, and drying mill, and the third floor was used as a warehouse for lumber.

The fire was caused by a gas stove in the kitchen, which had become overheated, and the gas had leaked out, and ignited.

The fire was extinguished by the firemen, but the damage was so great that the mill was a total loss. The loss is estimated at $100,000, which is only partially covered by insurance.
