I curtain out each sound and sight— of all the nights in the year, to-night I choose to be alone, Alone, with doors and windows fast,

Before my open desk I stand. Alas I can twelve long months be past, My hidden, hidden wealth, since last I held thee in my hand? So there it lies! From year to year I see the ribbon change: the page Turn yellower; and the very tear That blots the writing, disappear

And tade away with age ! Mine eyes grow dim when they behold The precious trifles hoarded there.— A ring of battered Indian gold, A withered harebell, and a fold

Of sunny chesnut hair, Not all the riches of the earth, Not all the treasures of the sea, Could buy these house gods from my hearth; And yet the secret of their worth Must live and die with me.

The Last Hours of Stonewall Jackson. The May number of the Richmond Medical Journal gives a deeply interesting account, from the pen of Dr. McGurre, of the wound, amputa-tion of the arm, and last moments of General Stonewall Jackson. The battle of Chancellors-ville was four ht on the 2d and 3d of May, 1863. It was on the night of the 2d that the dreadful accident (General Jackson having received his wound at the hands of his own men) occurred, which was the turning point in the fortunes of the Confederacy. We append the closing scene: About I o'clock Thursday morning, while I was asleep upon a lounge in his room, he directed his servant Jim to apply a wet towel to his stomach, to refleve an attack of nausea with which he was again troubled. The servant asked permission to first consult me, but the General knowing that I had slept none for nearly three nights, refused to allow the servant to disturb me, and demanded the towel. About daylight I was aroused, and found him suffering

An examination disclosed pleuro-pneumonia of the right side. I believed, and the consulting physician concurred in the opinion, that it was attributable to the fall from the litter the night he was wounded. The General hunself referred it to this accident. I think the disease came on too soon after the application of the wet cloths to admit of the supposition, once believed, that it was induced by them. The nauses, for which the cloths were applied that night, may have been the result of inflammation already begun.

Contusion of the lung, with extravasation of blood in his chest, was probably produced by the fall referred to, and the shock and loss of blood prevented any ill effects until reaction had been well established, and then inflammation ensued. Cups were applied, and mercury, with antimony and opium, administered. Towards the evening he became better, and hopes were again enter-tained of his recovery. Mrs. Jackson arrived to-day and nursed him faithfully to the end. She was a devoted wife and earnest Christiau, and endeared us all to her by her great kindness and gentleness.

The General's joy at the presence of his wife and child was very great, and for him unusually demonstrative. Noticing the sadness of his wife, he said to her tenderly. "I know you would gladly give your life for me, but I am perfectly resigned. Do not be sad: I hope I may yet recover. Pray for me, but always remember in your prayers to use the petition, "Thy will be done."

Friday his wounds were again dressed, and although the quantity of the discharge from them had diminished, the process of healing was still going on. The pain in his side had disappeared, but he breathed with difficulty, and complained of a feeling of great exhaustion. When Dr. Breckinridge, who, with Dr. Smith, had been sent for in consulation said as here. had been sent for in consultation, said he hoped that a blister which had been applied would afford him reliet, he expressed his own consi-dence in it, and his final recovery.

Dr. Tucker, from Richmond, arrived on Saturday, and all that human skill could devise was done to stay the hand of death. He suffered no pain, and his breathing was less difficult, but he was evidently hourly growing weaker.

When his child was brought to him he played with it for some time, frequently caressing it, and calling it his "little comforter." At one time he raised his wounded hand above its head, and, closing his eyes, was for some moments encaged in prayer. He said to me, "I see, from the number of paysicians, that you think my condition dangerous; but I thank God, if it is

About daylight on Sunday morning Mrs.

Jackson informed him that his recovery was very doubtful, and it was better that he should be prepared for the worst. He was silent for a moment, and then said. "It will be infinite gain to be translated to Heaven." He advised his wife, in the event of his death, to return to her father's house, and added, "You have a kind and good father, but there is no one so kind and good as your Heavenly Father.'

He still expressed a hope of his recovery, but requested her, it he should die, to have him buried in Lexington, in the Valley of Virginia. His exhaustion increased so rapidly that, at 11 o'clock, Mrs. Jackson knelt by his bed, and told him that before the sun went down he would be with his Saviour. He replied, "Oh, no, you are frightened, my child, death is not so near; I may yet get well." She fell over upon the bed, weeping bitterly, and told him again that the physicians said there was no hope.

After a moment's pause he asked her to call me.

me. "Doctor, Anna informs me that you have told her that I am to die to-tay; is it so?" When he was answered, he turned his eyes towards the ceiling, and gazed for a moment or two, as if in intense thought, then replied. Very good, very good; it is all right." He then tried to comfort his almost heart-broken wife, and told her he had a good deal to say to her. had a good deal to say to her, but he was too Colorel Pendleton came into the room about one o'clock, and he asked him, "Who was preaching at headquarters to-day?" When told that the whole army was praying for him, he replied, "Thank God—they are very kind." He said:—"It is the Lord's Day; my wish is ful-filled. I have always desired to die on Sunday." His mind now began to fail and wander, and he frequently talked as if in command upon the field, giving orders in his old way; then the scene shifted, and he was at the mess-table, in conversation with members of his staff; now with his wife and child, now at prayers with his military family.

Occasional intervals of return of his mind would appear, and during one of them, I offered him some brandy-and-water, but he declined it, saying, "It will only delay my departure, and do no good: I want to preserve my mind, it possible, to the last." About half-past one he was told that he had but two hours to live, and he answered again, feebly, but firmly, "Very good:

it is all right." A few moments before he died, he cried out in his delirium, "Order A. P. Hill to prepare for action! pass the intentry to the front rapidly! tell Major Hawks"—then stopped, leaving the sentence unfinished. Presently, a smile effable sweetness spread itself over his pale face, and he said quietly, and with an expression as if of relief, "Let us cross over the river, and rest under the shade of the trees;" and then, without pain, or the least struggle, his spirit passed from earth to the God who gave it.

Ever of Thee.

A sad story is connected with the name of the writer of the beautiful song, "Ever of Thee," in this country and in Europe.

which has been sung and admired by so many Folgy Hall was a gentleman by birth and edu-cation. Wealthy in his own right, with large expectations, he led a heedless life, not choosing his associates, but allowing himself to be drawn into the society of the victous. His property soon disappeared, and he was left without resources sufficient to buy his daily bread. His musical talents had been highly cultivated, but as he never needed them he sourcely knew to what degree they could be made available. In his distress, however, he wrote this charming song, "Ever of Thee." A London publisher gave him one hundred dollars for it, but that amount with such a spendthrift would not last long. He wrote other sorgs, but the money not coming as fast as he wished, in a weak moment he forged the name of his publisher, and although every effort was made (even by the publisher) to save him, it was all no use, and poor Foley Hall went to Newgate, and died broken-hearted before his Religious Matters.—St. Luke's P. E. Church—On last Sunday the Rev. M. A. De Wolfe Howe, D. D., entered upon the twenty-first year of his ministrations as recor of this church. In his morning's discourse he took occasion to review the history of St. Luke's, from its organization to the present time. He referred to its mission church, in Lombard street, above Eleventh, and said that this church would soon be self supporting. He also spoke of the gratifying success attending the parochial school, the Widow's Home, the Sunday schools and other charities connected with the Church. Since Dr. Howe has been ministering at St. Luke's, the sum of $153,602 has been distributed in various charities. The church has steadily advanced. Its members and the congregation have increased until now there is not a pew to rent, and an enlargement of the editice is in contemplation. This exhibit must be truly gratifying to Dr. Howe and the people among whom he has so long labored, and by whom he is so universally beloved. Few churches in the city have evinced more energy or devotion in the cause of the Great Master, and tew pastors have labored with more zeal and Christian earnest-ness than Dr. Howe. RELIGIOUS MATTERS .- St. Luke's P. E. labored with more zeal and Christian earnest ness than Dr. Howe.

A Good Appointment,—Arthur A. Messiter, formerly organist at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church in this city, has just received the appointment as organist and choir-master at Trinity church, New York. The appointment thus made is a good one, and certainly reflects credit on the judgment of those whose daty it was to fill the position. was to fill the position. Trinity is one of the most celebrated churches of this denomination in the United States, and is sure to be visited by strangers of a religious tendency who may sojourn in that city over Sunday.

THE JEWISH PENTECOST. - While the Israelites of old inhabited the land which Pro-vidence had bestowed upon them, they were commanded that their small population should appear before the Lord in the place consecrated and set apart to His worship at certain 'seasons, -three times in every year. The times of their so appearing were fixed at the three great national iestivals—The Passover, com-memorating their liberation from the Egyptian bondage; Pentecost, or the feast of weeks, a featively instituted to festival instituted to commemorate their being constituted as a nation and appointed to be the peculiar and chosen people of Got; and thirdly, the Feast of Tabernacles, to commemorate their peaceful enloyment of the promised land, and to express their gratitude at the fulness and abundance of Divine bounty, which poured forth its bissings over them.

The second of these festivals, also known as the Feast of Shebuoth, will be inaugurated at sundown this day, its observance extending throughout Sunday and Monday, when at eventide the feast will be at an end.

In obedience to these commands the festival is observed with great suiterest throughout.

is observed with great strictness throughout the word. The synagogues in this city and elsewhere are decorated with flowers, and are unusually well attended by their respective congregations. Ad business is suspended, and worldly affairs are uncared for from sundown to-night until eventide on Monday. The services performed do not differ essentially from those held on most holy days, and are, as usual, extremely interesting to witness.

ZANE STREET GRAMMAR SCHOOL.-The commencement exercises of the Zane Street Grammar School for girls took place yesterday afternoon. The building was crowded to excess. afternoon. The building was crowded to excess, and everybody present appeared delighted with the proceedings. The songs and recitations, original and selected, were rendered by the cholars in a pleasing manner.

During the intellectual entertainment Miss Webb received a pretty present from the graduates. It consisted of a sliver egg stand, a glass stand and salts. Miss Susie R. Mitchell, who stood number one of the candidates at the High School in 1865, was the recipient of a hand-somely-finished gold pencil. Speeches were made by Edward Shippen, Esq., the President of the Board of Controllers, Richard R. Ludlow, Esq., Protessor Rhoads, of the Central High School, and Messis. Beesly and Riche. The proceedings were interesting.

THE ODD FFLLOWS .- The Grand Encampment of Pennsylvania adjourned sine die and was closed in ample form on Thursday after-

The Grand Lodge closed late yesterday afternoon in perfect harmony, after the transaction of a large amount of business. Reports from all parts of the State show that the prosperity of the Order in numerical strength and wealth is re-markable. The progress of the institution is altogether without a precedent in the history of human associations, if we except political

CASUALTIES. - Owen Taggart, aged 38 ears, residing at No. 1325 Pearl street, had his left arm badly lacerated by its being caught between two blocks of marble, at Ridge road and Spring Garden street.

Joseph Massey, aged 25 years, residing in Quince street, near Eleventh, was run over by a fray on Front street, below Pine, and had his ett leg injured.

Patrick Kelly, while driving a wagon at Third and Spruce streets, fell off and the wheels passed over his breast, injuring him severely. Charles Kerr, aged fourteen years, residing at No. 1830 Pemberton street, had the fingers of his right hand badly mashed between two cog-wheels, at Sixteenth and Fitzwater streets. The above-named persons were admitted into the Pennsylvania Hospital.

Opp. of True—But Probably nor True.—Here is a story from a late English paper:—"A woman named Harriet Eastbury was missed from her home at Brockles, Gloucestershire, on the 14th ultimo, and no trace of her could be discovered by her husband or the police. On the 15th instant, a laborer was passing along the 'Wagren,' on Lord Northwick's estate, where there is an ornamental lake, nearly sorrounded by shrubs, they he have a marchen making a seculiar when he heard a moorhen making a peculiar noise; he proceeded to the spot, and found the nest of the bird on the breast of a woman's body, which was floating in the water. On the body being removed, it was found to be that of the woman Esstbury, which must have been in the water for five weeks. At the luquest, a verdict of 'found drowned' was returned. The nest contained seven eggs, which were nearly hatched."

-The 23th Geo. II., cap. 23, is the rather enigmatical title of a new comedictta, which has just been produced in London. The Act of Parliament in question, is that by which the calendar was reformed, and the "new style" introduced; and the mystery of the name of the statute being applied to the play is explained by the fact that a lady, who is bound, under oain of disinheritance, to marry a wealthy officer, whom she abhors, finds a means of escape from her dilemma in the discovery that, under the her dilemma in the discovery that, under the new system of computation, there is positively no such day in the year as that appointed by her
