OUR PARIS LETTER, . talian Letter Writers in Paris-The War Question-Taciturnity of Napoleon - The Effects of a Prospective

lemini-The Approaching French Exhibition, Etc. Etc. I EVENING TELEGRAPH SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE,] PARIS, May 31, 1866.

ITALIAN CORRESPONDENTS. As it is my duty as Parisian chronicler to tell you of all that is going on in our gay capital, I must not omit to tell you of a new class of individuals that has sprung up amongst us since reports of an intended war between Italy and Austria have been circulating in France. The Paris papers tell their readers that their offices are all day long filled by persons about to depart for Italy to join Garibaldi, who offer their services to them as correspondents from the seat of war. La Liberte, of which I have often spoken to you, and which is edited by Emile de Girardin, assisted by two abic writers, Duvernois and Pessard, informs us that it has in one day received more than six hundred letters, with offers of correspondence from Italy.

We must not be surprised that our Parisian press is so badly informed on Italian matters.

THE TOCSIN OF WAR bas not yet rung. We are still living with the sword of Damocles hanging over our heads, Whilst in Saxony, in Silesia, in Lombardy, and in Venetia more than two millions of men are waiting to cut each other's throats, diplomacy is doing all that it can to prevent a conflict between Austria, Italy, and Prussia.

London, Paris, and St. Petersburg have agreed to send the following programme to Vienna, Berlin, and Florence, which runs thus:-The Elbe Duchies, the security of Italy, the German federal question. The programme, in principle, has not been rejected by the three belligerents, but, alas! the general opinion in London and in in Paris is that the Congress will not bring us a pacific solution of the present conflict.

Austria objects to the article-Venetian question. Italy, on the contrary, wishes it to be maintained on the programme. Prussia consents to send a representative to sit at the green baize table on condition that the decisions of the Congress shall not cramp its liberty of action; and, finally, the German Bund will not hear of European powers meddling in the affairs of Germany, which can only be settled by the Germans themselves.

With respect to Russia, it objects to the Oriental question and the question of nationalities being mooted. We fear the Congress will be like a Tower of Babel.

NAPOLEON III,

who is evidently the Deus ex Machina of this imbroglio, is still as taciturn as ever-those nearest about him know not his second thoughts. He has had private wires attached to the different telegraphs, and sends private telegrams, with his own hands, to Count Bismark, at Berlin: and General La Marmora, at Florence. At all places of public amusement, at the balls of the Tuileries, his Majesty wears a most unruffled countenance-apparently, most desirous for the maintenance of peace. It is believed by knowing ones, that the Congress is only a subterfuge, in order to give Italy and Prussia the time to arm comme it faut. There is no doubt that Austria is in a better situation, in a military point of view, than either Prassia or Italy. In Prussia the Landwehr, which is the basis of Prussian defense, refuses to answer to the call of the Government. The forty thousand volunteers that have flocked to the standard of Garibaldi are as yet armed but with good intentions, as they have neither arms nor clothing. Our priwate Italian correspondence informs us that the swarms of volunteers now trying to get enlisted can, in case of need, be little depended upon.

Even the French Government, notwithstanding its enthusiasm for the cause of Italy, did not think that things would go so fast. It will be a few weeks before the imperial French army will be able to take the field.

Italy must have Venetia-or perish. The statu quo is a war minus killed or wounded, for the expenses of the standing army of Italy will bring it to the brink of ruin in no time. In Prussia, the consequences of the mobilization of the Landwehr are terrible. The town of Berlin, obliged to feed seventeen hundred and fifty wives and children of men called away to fight, who have left their families destitute of everything. Moreover, the number of workmen thrown out of employment by the stagnation of affairs amounts to more than twenty thousand. As regards the number of failures, they are more than I can reckon.

Our Mediterranean correspondent writes us, that several English men-of-war are about to leave Malta in order to be near the theatre of events. THE PRENCH DERBY.

Our summer amusements have commenced. One cannot imagine a more splended sight than that of the meeting on Sunday last, at the Bois sie Boulogne, to witness the run for the great prize of 100,000 francs. All now agree that the French Derby is in every respect superior to the Epsom Derby, as the lower classes in France are less brutal and less addicted to drunke aness than in England. We have had quite an invasion of English ladies and gentlemen, and lockeys innumerable have been crossing and recrossing the Channel for the last three weeks, attending on the fine specimens of horse flesh that have been sent over for our admiration.

The victory of the Duke of Beaufort's horse gave great satisfaction to the English visitors in Paris, as not only is he one of the most popular of English sportsmen, but his present success is well-merited recompense for his gallant conductiest year, when he sent over "Todleben" to meet he formidable "Gladiateur," and preferred to encounter certain defeat than allow the English our to be unrepresented. "Ceylon's" previous performances were running in the Blennial at New Market, and the fourteenth Biennial at Bath, each of which he won. As a two year old, he did not start. The work of art this year presented to the winner by the Emperor, is a large oblong silver-orbeil for flowers, beautifully chased outside withhunting subjects in alto relievo, and placed on four bet about two Inches high.

The great race of the Bois de Boungne has been carried off twice by English horse, and twice by French:-the former, "Ranger" "Ceylon;" and the latter, "Vermoult" and the celebrated "Gladiateur."

The famous cherry-stone, which has the last few weeks excited such wonderful admiration at the Retrospective Exhibition in the Champs Elysees, has just been sold at the auction rooms in the Rue Drouet; this microscopic marvel of art and patience, which has beautifully carved on it a representation of a charge of cavalry, brought £40.

We regret to learn from Florence that the charming Piccolomini, who often delighted us when signing in La Traviata and La Figlia del Reggimento, is suffering from a cancerous disease and that but little hopes are entertained of her recovery.

The space applied for in the Paris Exhibition of next year far exceeds the area at the disposal of the Council. Hence, there is a talk of supplementary exhibitions undertaken by private enterprise for the accommodation of rejected candidates. The United States people especially are very much disgusted with the small space allotted to them, and think of retiring to a show of their own.

Before closing my letter I must inform you that the greatest entente cordiale existed, on Sunday last, between the English and French votaries of the turf. These gentlemen spent the evening together I at the well-known place of amusement, Le Jardin Mabille. They did not feel inclined "to go home till morning," the pickled salmon having got into their heads. The police were obliged to help several to their homes.

The musical world has been very much taken up of late by a new opera by Flotow, the composer of the well-known operetta Martha, which has had such success in France, Germany, England, and America. It is entitled

"ZILDA." the words by H. Georges. The plot of the piece is according to the bills taken from the "Arabian Nights." This is, however, a mistake. Zida is taken from a story by Voltaire, called "Caxe Saneta; or, Little Evil for Great Good." The music is light and sparkling, though written by a German; it much resembles some of the compositions of Auber and Offenbach, whose Orphee aux Enfers has had such wonderful success in Paris, having been perfermed more than three hundred times. The public taste is now all for music, and how should it be otherwise when kings give the example?

I suppose everybody has heard of Richard Wagner, the apostle of "the music for the future," whose opera of Tannhauser met with such a very unwelcome reception in Paris in 1861. It appears that the young King Louis of Bavaria (aged about twenty) is music-mad. A few days ago he suddenly disappeared from his capital, Munich, which caused great consternation amongst the ministers and the entourage of the young King. "They sought him that night, and they sought him next day," as the song says. A few days after, the King returned; and where had he been ?-to wish his friend Richard Wagner a happy new year on his friend's birthday. Rien que cela!

The grand medailte d'honneur, which has generally been given for the best picture exhibited at the Exhibition des Beaux Arts, is to be left to the] decision of the artists themselves, i. e., those artists who have already had three medals-As usual, the artists, who never can agree upon any point, have met, but have not been able to come to a decision as to whom it shall be given; therefore, the medal will, I date say, remain this year without an owner.

TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENCE. Hasty Notes of Travel, Fishing, etc., from

Washington to the West. [EVENING TELEGRAPH SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.] FITTSEURG, June 11, 1866. The following hasty jottings of our travelling adventures are presented for the amusement of your numerous readers. We commence with Baltimore. - A regular line of omnibuses is supposed to have uniform rates of fare. Not so here. Crossing to Harrisburg depot you can take your choice-walk into the 'bus with dignity and pay thirty-five cents, or dicker with the conductor outside and go for two bits in the same coach. Mem,-Dicker next time in Baltimore. At Harrisburg depot there is polite attention; also, at all hours of the night, a cup of coffee that is not smoky, but Mocha-real nutbrown, delicious coffee, so divinely loved by "the late Henry Ward Beecher."

Up the Susquehanna and Juniata bottoms (the "Blue Juniata," where roamed the Indian maid, the "Bright Alfaretta," some years ago), the winter wheat and grass crops are looking lusty. On the uplands, however, the farmers complain of drouth and prospect of short crops. There was a shower Sunday morning over the Alleghenies, but, from appearances, it was mostly wasted on the wilderness, not extending much to the settlements on the eastern slope. Butter, twenty to twenty-five cents; beef high, and cattle never so high-so the farmers say. The apple crop promises to be abundant.

At ALTOONA the traveller will find a good breakfast cooked for him, which he will be likely to enjoy, provided there is a butter-knife furnished and the servants are attentive.

Over the mountains the rain has been abundant, as far down as Pittsburg, perhaps further. Crops, especially grass, show signs of drouth. Winter wheat also poor.

PITTSBURG.-Arrived Sunday evening. Having to leave at 2 A. M., do not wish to go to bed. So, take a stroll in the direction of a thurch, the resounding notes of whose organ attract us in. The sexton is too polite. The easy cushioned seats and dreamy music woo tired nature to repose, and we hear too little of the preacher's excellent discourse. At ten o'clock or thereabouts the sexton gently wakes us. Forgetting where we are, we hasuly inquire about the Chicago train and our bill for lodging in the same breath. The good man tells us we must still be dreaming; he dresn't keep hotel, but contributions are always acceptable for the benefit of the church. Begging permission to understand his little remark as a "joak," we cach award it a first premium of twenty-five cents, for the express use and benefit of his little jokers at home, and liquidate accordingly. We tender our apologies, and trust that if we ever stop in Pittsburg another Sunday evening to await the train, we may make better use of our religious privileges than sponging lodgings out of the church. This party-two of us-hope to find some good fishing in the Northwest, but of this 'etc.," we will write hereafter.

In haste, OBBIE.

GROWTH OF PLANTS.-M. Duchartre, a French hemist who has investigated the rate of growth plants by day and night, considers that the grantest increase in length takes place at night. His measurements have been made on the vine, the gradiolus, the strawberry, the hop, and other

OBITUARY.

Hon. Moses F. Odell. Moses Fowler Odell, Naval Officer at New York, died at half-past 12 yesterday, after a long and torturing illness, which he bore with manly and Christian fortitude. Mr. Odell, whose habit, during the war, while

Mr. Odell, whose habit, during the war, while he was a member of Congress, of constantly visiting the hospitals, and in other ways personally caring for the welfare and comfort of the soldiers around Washington, has endeared his name to men in every part of the country, was born in Tarrytown, N. Y., February 24, 1818. His parents removed to New York while he was still a youth, and here he received a common school education, and at an early age entered the Custom House as a clerk. entered the Custom House as a clerk.

By diligence and laithtulness he rose from place to place of trust, until he became Assistant Collector, during the administration of Pre-sident Polk. His conduct of the affairs of the Custom House won for him the regard of fellow-citizens. He had a clear head, and could unravel the introcacies of tariffs as tew who have held the office could do. He became so indispensable in the Custom House that he was rctained in the place of Assistant Collector under several Collectors. During the administration of Mr. Buchanan

Mr. Odell held the post of Public Appraiser at New York. In 1860 he was elected to Congress to represent the Brooklyn district. In April 1861, he made one of the first war speeches in his district, and used his influence among his party with all his might to secure their support of the war for the Union. He helped to raise the famous 13th Regiment of Brooklyn. His speeches and conduct at home gave him the conndence of the Unionists, in the extra sessions of July, 1861, when he first took his seat. He was the leader of the War Democrats; and he was placed, when it was formed, upon the Committee on the Conduct of the War, one of the most important in that Congress. He was re-elected to Congress, and would have been elected for a third term had he not declined to serve. He spoke but seldem in Congress; but served faithfully on the committees of which he was a member; and was conspicuou for his zeal and care to the welfare of the sol diers in the armies and in the hospitals. It is believed that the seeds of his last illness were contracted by exposure on the battle-field of Fair Oaks, whither he had gone to help care for the wounded, and in the hospital ships on the

Mr. Odell was a warm and trusted friend of Mr. Lincoln, who valued very highly his oublic services and disinterested character. He was also on the most intimate friendly terms with Mr. Johnson, who served during one session with him, on the Committee on the Conduct of the War. When Mr. Johnson became President he appointed Mr. Odell Naval Officer, a post which he was in every way qualified by experience and training to all to the satisfaction of the merchants and the Government.

Besjamin Mifflin.

Benjamin Millin, who was yesterday consigned to the grave, was a gentleman well known to thousands of our citizens, and especially to the members connected with the news-paper press of Philadelphia. Early in life he was associated with the Hon, Elmon Cameron in publishing the Doylestown Democrat, In 1876 he commenced business in Philadelphia, with Mr. R. Parry, book printer. When the Weekly Pennsylvanian was started, about the commencement of the struggle between Andrew Jackson and the United States Bank, Mr. Mifflin became associated with the paper. Joseph C. Neal, author of the famous "Charcoal Sketches," was editor of the Pennsy vanian at the time. 1832 the publishers were induced to issue adaily in support of President Jackson.

About the year 1844 Mr. Millin retired from the Pennsylvanian, being succeeded by A. Boyd Hamilton, Esq., and shortly afterwards he started Near's Saturday Gazette, a weekly paper which achieved great success, and was known and sought after the Union over. Mr. Mifflin was a man of genial feeling, and was universally respected by all who knew him. He was among those who assisted to make the reputation of Philadelphia journalists—a reputation which has been felt throughout the entire Union. His funeral was attended by a large number of per-sonal friends, together with the members of Rising Star Lodge, A. Y. M., and Patladelphia an old and highly respected member.
