End of the Russell-Gladstone Ministry.

THE deep interest taken in the war now progess ing in Europe, has turned public attention a way from a struggle as momentous as that going on in the Quadrilateral. We refer to the British Ministerial battle in Parliament. In the one case the quarrel is merely to decide which of two monarchs can oppress a minor State; in the other the great question of the perpetual advancement of mankind is being mooted. It matters little, so far as the good of the masses are concerned, whether Austria or Prussia is the victor. It is, however, of vital importance whether the doctrines of the Liberals or the Tories succeed. One contest hinges on the extention of tyranny, the other is over the extension of the dearest right of man to hundreds of thousands of those who have heretofore been debarred from its enjoyment. The one is a mere quarrel of material power, the other a mental and progressive battle, the fruits of which, if not so soon apparent, are far more permanent than those of its martial rival.

Yet, with all its vital import, the fight in Parliament has not received in America that attention with which we would expect a nation so progressive as ours, to view a struggle for a principle for which we have so often contended. While we have been standing with open eyes gazing st the European struggle, the Ministry has been defeated. No one who has watched the combinations being formed can express much surprise at the result. The whole of the vast power of a well organized and ancient party battled against it from the beginning. To its ranks were added those who were to be expelled by the adoption of the measure, and in addition to them the disaffected part of the Ministerial benches, headed by Mr. Lows, who had been grossly neglected and slighted by Mr. GLADSTONE. The result was the defeat of the RUBSELL Administration by an adverse majority of eleven votes. That it was not more is our only cause for surprise.

The question which has excited all Great Britain since the announcement of the result, was how the Ministry would act in the emergency. They had two courses open to them, either to resign and let a new Munistry be formed from the ranks of their opponents, or else to dissolve Parliament and appeal to the people. We confess we had anticipated a dissolution. Had it taken place, the Ministry would have had a popular watchword, one which would take with the masses, and which would undoubtedly have secured them a triumph. Besides, as RUSSELL is now an old man, he would naturally want to see the success of his party before his death. and an appeal would have been by far the most expeditious mode of being retained. It has pleased the Cabinet, however, not to dissolve, but to tender their resignation, which has been accepted by the Queen. At present they only hold their respective portfolios until their successors shall be appointed. The Jquestion who will be their successors is one of interest. We have no doubt but that DERBY and DISBAHLI will be called upon to form the new Cabinet. The Times has such an expectation, and the Times is generally right in its political prophecies, so far as home matters are concerned. The old Cabinet will thus sink into the opposition, and a new amalgamated party become the Government. It seems more than probable that the course selected by RUSSELL is the surest one towards regaining political power. He adopts the argu ment reductio ad absurdum. He intends to prove that his administration was right because all others will be wrong. With half the House united in his favor, and with his opponents composed of a heterogeneous mass of malcontents, he will easily succeed in securing the defeat of his successors. Those who stand united during a battle are too frequently dispersed by victory to cause GLADSTONE to despair. He will make his defeat a political Bannockburn. What with the Lows party to be satisfied, the conservatives to be compromised with, the radical tories to be concllisted and retained, we expect the Earl of DEBBY will have as much as his hands can do, and we think a great deal more. DEEBY has always been in an administration which was short-lived, and we anticipated that his Ministry of 1866 will not outlive the year. He is fighting against the stream of popular advancement, and he might as well expect "to dam up the waters of the Nile with bulrushes" as to be able to stein its current. There is but one question on which the Earl of DERBY may firmly ground his administrative policy, and that is a change in the attitude occupled by England in European politics. The course of RUSSELL has been such as to weaken and disgrace the prestige of the British name. The world might have supposed that the English Government was a mercantile firm, endeavoring to save its cargoes from capture. Such hesitation, vacillation, and thmidity as the Ministry have exhibited, could not fail to pull down the nation from its previous commanding position. What the daring genius of Pirr won, has all been frittered away in order that gold might be produced. The people of England love gold, but they also love glory. They see, with all the world, that one word or wink of LOUIS NAPOLBON is looked upon with far more interest, and held of far more value, than any open declaration of theirs. Hence their pride is touched. Non-intervention, though excellent in America, is but a poor policy in England. If, therefore. DERBY will take a decided stand, and make the due influence of Great Britain felt on the Continent, the pride of the people will come to his rescue, and their votes support him, even though their suffrages be continued in their present curtailed condition. The only rock on which DERBY can rest will be the rock of foreign glory.

The Citizens' Association of Pennsylvania. FINANCE AND COMMERCE. DR. JOSEPH PARBISH, JAY COOKE, WISTAR MOR-

RIS, S. MORHIS WALN, GRORGE MILLIEBN, HENRY D. MOORE, and others of our first citizens, have joined themselves together and formed an association entitled "The Citizens' Association of Pennsylvania." The object of the organization can be best stated by an extract from the appeal issued by the Directors :---

"the rapid increase of pauperism, vagranov, and orime, may well excit-alarm in the minds of all who watch for the good of the commonwealth. Pobl of begins has increased to an atarming extent, and vagranov is almost recognized as a inwith cathing. Drinking-houses are fostered by the law, and the cost of icceases is so very small, and the penalty for selling the most deleterious legoors without an nority is so insignificant, as to render the offense scarceity worth avoiding by the offender. The Assoc ation proposes to inquire into the can es of these eris, and to institute measures, if possible, that shall lead to improved legislation concerning them and to a better state of public morals and safety. The charter under which this Association acts, however, indicates so that a refere toon of buildings for the cure of the interparate,' to which end to action is sepecially "the rapid increase of pauperism, vagrancy, and intemperate,' to which end is action is especially directed at h s time, and to aid which, the Board of Directors now accress their fellow citizens."

Such are the objects of the Association, and all must commend them as worthy of the imme. diate attention of all our people. The gentlemen who are at the head of the enterprise are sufficient guarantees that all funds will be appro. priately disposed of. It may be objected that the plan, although good, is by no means practical. That inebriates will not go to a public institution to be reformed, and hence, though well meaning, the scheme will prove futile. The report speaks for itself once more :---

"We propose to offer the means of recovery, if possible, to those who may desire to accept them, and to place those means within reach of the ir ends of such as may be lost to the desire for good. It is not the intention to crect a large and forbidding coffice, with even the appearance of a public charity, a reformatory or penal establishment, but a series of cottages, where the domesus idea and habits of the family may be observed and perpetuhalfs of the family may be observed and perpetu-sites. Homes to which persons may go without any compromise of their se f-respect, subjecting them-selves only to such treatment and discipline as the r coi divion may require, and where the alloroments of literature and six may be secured to them, with a hope of restoring and improving the taste for the good and the true. These homes will be erected in the construction of a will be detected in the country, and we will endeavor to make them as attractive in situation and external surroundings attractive in situation and external surroundings as possible. Above all, we will aim to make them Christian homes

This plan appears to us to be a feasible one, and of sufficient practicability to command attention. In order to accomplish this end the Directors deem that $300,000 will be necessary; but as soon as fifty thousand can be secured the work will be commenced. They appeal to our citizens, liberal-minded and benevolent as we all know Philadelphians to be, to aid them in their labors. We cordially endorse their appeal, and hope to see before many months are past the whole design of the Citizens' Association in tull operation. Much good may, and we predict will, result from its labors in reclaiming the abandoned and saving those who do not care to save themeelves.

The Prussian and Austrian Campaign.

WHILE a great battle has already been fought between the armies of Italy and Austria, still the popular interest clings to the movements of the great forces in the north. It is felt that the decisive blows must be struck there. The Italian campaign can only be looked upon as a diversion in favor of Prassia. The contest is really to be decided by the tremendous armies that are now confronting one another in central Germany.

The Saxonia brings us dates down to the 27th ult. The most important item of news is the probable capture of the entire Hanoverian army by the Prussians. Early reports spoke of its escape through the Prussian lines south to Miningen, but later telegrams contradict this, and positwely assert that the Hanoverian army is still completely surrounded, and that terms of capitulation had been proposed. This version is probably correct, as the rapid and unimpeded movements of the Prussian forces in Saxony had isolated the forces of Hanover, so that they could not form a junction with the Austrians or their allies without breaking the Prussian lines. The Prussians were advancing into Upper Silesia and Bohemia, meeting with but little resistance from the Austrians, whom they easily repulsed. The great superiority of the Prussian arms-the "needle guns"-is spoken of. Meanwhile, nothing is heard of the Austrian Field Marshal BENEDEK. The tardiness of the Austrian movements would seem to have already conferred very important advantages upon the Prussians. Perhaps BENEDEK means to make up for this by a grand stroke by-andby. We shall see.

Deteat of the Italians.

Tux Italians have been defeated in the first great battle of the European war. Our accounts by telegraph are, of course, altogether meagre and irsgmentary; but the important fact remains that the main Italian army, under the lead of King VICTOR EMANUEL himself, has been defeated, after a heavy battle, and driven back across the Mincio. The Austrians captured twothousand prisoners, storming the stronghold of Custozza, which had been occupied by a part of the Italian army. What effect this battle will have upon the contest in its wider aspects remains to be seen. Subsequent dates from Florence represent the confidence of the people as still unimpaired in the army, and the want of success in the first battle was felt to be only an incentive to redoubled efforts. The war against Austria would be continued until the liberation of Venetia was secured.

We saw too much of de'eat in our own recent war to attach any undue importance to this first repulse of the Italians. They threw themselves against one of Austria's strongest positions, and have been beaten back with loss.

The Atlantic Cable,

ANOTHER attempt-the fifth-is being made to lay a telegraphic cable across the Atlantic. The fine writing and sentiment were expended on this topic some time ago. People will now wait until the thing is an assured success-If it shall prove to be one-and then add congratulations and rejoicings appropriate to the event. It is believed that everything is really more favorable to success this time than ever before.

Complaints are made from some sections of the South that the cotton crop is suffering because the black people will not work steadily. The best method that we have ever heard of for getting faithful and persevering labor out of whites or blacks, is to pay good wages, in cash, every Saturday night. We wish somebody would try that down South. We think it would succeed.

A Naples letter-writer says :-- "M. Thalberg's time has not been spent in vain ; the great musician has become a large grower of grapes, and, what is more, of first-rate wines."
