lesaness or dept, it is like walking over the concealed crater or a volcano, which may break at any moment and precipitate him ben

"It is astonishing how much repose a mane s woman enjoys who places confidence in her busband; but, Beware of wearying him with every petty detail of housekeeping—of the shortcomings of the servants, the breakages, and the hundred petty annoyances a woman has to bear who has only limited means at her disposal.

"All bills and pagers should be laid before him on the day of their arrival. It is possible that he may receive such with pettish words or manner; if it he so, avoid comment or notice of any kind. All will come right at the proper time.

"The best check against unnecessary expenditure is to let the husband see the bills every week, although the wile alone pays them. He will then know the cost of everything, and there can be no blame.

"Never, as a rule, intrust bills to servants to pay; they will sometimes get a percentage from the tradesmen, which the house-keeper pays for—if not in the price of meat, in sundry short weights. This proceeding small incomes cannot

"Weigh all articles as they come in. It is no use to complain of bare weight, as then there would be always unpleasantness with the trades-men, which should be avoided; but when an ar-ticle is flagrantly of short weight, send it back to be verified; never break open the package, or even untie the string with which it may be tied, and even then you may be told your scales are wrong; but it a half-ounce weight be put in one scale, and a letter on the opposite side, this must be a convincing proof that the scales are truly balanced.

"In a large family the waste of pieces of bread is a source of great trouble to a mistress. Servants object to eat the pieces which are so frequently made in the dining-room, either in pundings or any other form; but in a small household like yours, dear Milly, not a scrap must be wasted. See that a second loaf is not cut before the first is consumed; teach the children not to waste the smallest bit; if they have more than they can eat with comfort, let it be made into sop or pudding for them. Never ask a servant to cat this; and at your own table never make unnecessary pieces. When a loat is reduced to about three inches thick, cut no more slices from it, but cut it downwards, and thus make four square pieces. If yourself and bueband particularly like crust, and are apt to disfigure the loaf to obtain it, there is no reason for abstaining; for if the remainder, being all crumb, be pulled into small pieces, and placed on a dish, not a tin, in a quick oven, in ten minutes you will get as much crust as you like. As to stale bread beyond a day old, it is no economy to compel your servants or children to have it, under the idea that less will be consumed, stale bread not being so appetizing as new. In nine cases out of ten the servant will burn it or cover it in the dust, or thrust it into the flue of the copper, this being a famous place for burning up all that is disagrecable, and that, too, without the knowledge of the mistress, who never dreams of opening the door of the copper. To give away unseen the stale bread to beggars is the least evil; and the mistress dreads to speak of the consumption, fearing she may be taxed with starving her servants. One day's stale bread is the right time to eat it. Home-made bread is not so dry as baker's bread, hence may be heat longer. be kept longer.

"Dripping is another source of dispute. You will remember these rules are for an expenditure of twenty-seven shillings a week; and I can see you, dear Milly, turn up that little nose of yours at the idea of taking care of the dripping; but fish, chops, and cutlets can be fried as well in dripping as in lard, which is expensive. A free use of it, and that made boiling, is all that is needed. It is using dropping sparingly which makes it burn; a plentiful supply will not even become discolored. It answers for puddings, too, but, it you do not like it for that purpose so well as suct the latter need not be rossied into dripping when it is sent with the beet. careful to see that every superfluous piece be cut off for future use previously to roasting the

"Besides dripping, where bacon is used there remains the fat which drips from it; this is one of the most useful products from cooking. In France, most of the meat and all poultry and game are larded; this means drawing with a large needle, into the desh of fewls or game, strips of bacon, which serve to keep the meat moist and impart an agreeable flavor, but, of course, consumes a great quantity of bacon, which is a certain loss. Butter connot give the flavor of bacon fat, though it is too often lavishly used in the shape of melted butter as a sauce and to cover the dryness of the meat. The right way of using it, after it has dripped from the bacon, is to carefully put it away in a preserve pot; it will keep sweet for months; when it is required, spread it with a knile over the poultry, then flour the latter well, and continue to drip it as needed. It is excellent for larding yeal, also for every stuffing instead of suct; the latter, to some people, being very indigestible. It is equal to lard in making pastry, and, in fact, is one of the most useful of all articles in cooking, and that without reference to income. It is just, these two things which general servants of every grade pounce upon as their special 'perkisites,' to be replaced by the mistress by expensive lard. In households where the limited amount of income is not a constant pressure, it may rest in the choice of the employer to grant these things, but for twenty-seven or even for eighty-seven shillings a week it is simply preposterous.

"A profuse, unseen, and silent matter of waste is the use and abuse of coal and cinders. 'She actually looks in the cinder-box.' is the frequent remark of one domestic to another; the careless, thoughtless girl little dreaming that cinders are as much fuel as coal, that better fires can be kept up with sifted cinders than with coal alone, and for bedrooms the burning them is safer than coal; there is no danger of their sparking about.
If, dear Milly, you wish to do your duty, you will certainly insist upon cinders being daily sifted, and on the fire in your own sitting room they will be consumed with advantage to your-self, the glow which is thrown out from them warming the whole room; and a moderate warming the whole room; and a moderate use of them should be insisted upon in the kitchen. Coals in front of the grate and cinders behind make the best cooking fires. I would just say, with reference to the kitchen fire, no matter what the income may be, if you find your servant make up a fire, and in a few minutes begin to break the lumps to pieces, and be frequently stirring it while cooking, that such a servant is not worth salt; she carries the same principle of waste without profit into every portion of her management. This rule applies equally to servants living in districts where the coal is cheap, as well as where it is dear. A large fire, unsuitable to the size of the joint, will dry up the juices of the meat, leaving it a hard and indigestible mass; a fire constantly stirred takes all life out of the coals, and powders the meat with dust.

"The best arrangement for sifting cinders is a box with rockers, like a cradle; it has a wire-sliter inside, fitting like a tray in ordinary boxes, and a cover which closes firmly over the top. The cinders and ashes being put in the tray, the over is put on; the apparatus can be rocked with the band or toot for two minutes, then left alone; in a quarter of an hour, if the cover be taken off, the dust will have subsided, the ashes have gone through to the box beneath, leaving the cinders ready for use on the top. This simple machine is strong, inexpensive, very portable, takes up no room, and efficiently does its work; the only care in purchasing one is to see that the wires of the sitter are stout and strong, otherwise they will give way, and the cinders fall through."

LAYING OF THE CORNER-STONE OF THE CHURCH OF ST. ANNE.—Yesterday afternoon the very interesting ceremony of laying the corner stone of the church of St. Anne, in Richmond took place in the presence of a large gathering of people. At 4 P. M. the ceremonies commenced. Rev. Francis O'Connor, of Reading, was Master of Ceremonies, with Rev. John McGovern and Rev. M. A. Walsh as deacons of honor. Vory Rev. Dr. O'Hara, V. G., as assistant prices.

The procession was formed in the pastor's house, and Rt. Rev. John McGill, of Richmond, Virginia, conducted the ceremonies, which con-sisted of blessing the stone and foundation walls. After the conclusion of these ceremonies, Rev Dr. Moriarty made a most effective and eloquent address. The new church is designed to be one of the largest in the city. The design is turnished by Edwin F. Durang, architect. The structure will be 79 by 180 feet, and the tower will exceed in height that of St. Peter's and St. Paul's, at Fifth and Girard avenue. As an evidence of the spirit of the parish, it may be mentioned that the project of building a new church was first broached about two weeks ago, and since that time over $16,000 have been subscribed. The collections yesterday amounted to nearly $2000. Considering that this is a poor parish, the liberality of the members is noteworthy. Rev. Mr. Kiernan, the pastor of St. Anne's, is convinced that the enterprise will be carried through successfully, and that his parish will soon contain one of the most commodious, if not one of the finest churches in Philadelphia.

STEALING HARDWARE FROM THE SCENE OF THE LATE FIRE IN COMMERCE STREET. - J. Smith had a hearing at the Central Station e the charge of stealing a hatchet at the P in Commerce street, which he had concealed soont him. It was found on him after his arrest on a charge of breaking the peace. Defendant denied the their, and called a man to prove that he saw him take the hatchet from the locker of a hose carriage. Several gentlemen stepped forward to say that they had known him for some time, and that he had always borne a good character. The magistrate said he would have to hold him for trial, and bail in $1000 was demanded.

Daniel Murphy was arrested in the store of Messrs, Biddle & Co. with a package of car-penter's roles in his posses-ion. He had on a red shirt, and a fireman's belt, and was supposed to be a fireman frem that fact; but he said that he was not a member of any company. He had a hearing at the Central Station, and was bound over for trial.

STEALING A WATCH .- Joseph A. Hertzell was arrested at the fire in Commerce street on the charge of stealing a watch. He had a hearing before the Recorder on Saturday, when De rective Stevens testified that he saw the defendant with his arm over the breast of the com-plainant, and saw that something had been taken when the hand was removed; when he got close to the man he found the watch at defendants feet. William Stewart, the owner of the watch, said he was so intent looking at the fire that he did not know the theft until the officer told him of it. The accused said he die not know anything about the watch. He was held to answer.

ADMITTED TO HOSPITAL .- The following cases were admitted to the hospital during saturday night:-

Catharine McDaniel, aged 43, with her leg broken by falling from a ladder while carrying a bucket of water to extinguish a fire on the roof of her house, in Houston street, Nineteenth

James Catheart, aged 21, residing at No. 1623 Shippen street, badly bruised in consequence of a cart running over him.

SUDDEN DEATHS .- The Coroner held an inquest on the body of James Carter, aged 53 years, residing in Leiper street, above Unity, who died suddenly. Also, on the body of Eme-line Waterly, aged 18 years, who died suddenly in Adapts street. in Adams street.

THROWN FROM A WAGON .- On Saturday afternoon, a wagon in which E. F. Partridge and Mrs. Spatford were riding, was run into at Broad and Wallace streets by a large wagon and the jolt threw the lady out, seriously injuring her.

A FATAL FALL.—The Coroner held an inquest upon the body of Levi Funk, was was killed by falling from the fourth story window of a house at the corner of Julianna and Callowhill streets.

HOUSE ROBBERY .- Late on Friday night some person or persons unknown broke into premises No. 515 Pine street, and stole therefrom several articles of kitchen furniture and some marketing.
