The Probable Downfail of the Derby Ministry.

FROM the latest advices from England, we teel able to prophesy that our prediction as to the short life of the DERBY-DISBABLI Ministry is about to be fulfilled, in far less time than we had anticipted. The issue of reform or no reform, which has acitated the people of England for the last thirty years, was for the first time, brought to a direct vote for settlement, a few weeks since. The battle was fought, and so far as Parliament was concerned, the cause of reform was defeated. The closeness of the ballot, however, proved that the great mass of the people were in favor of a revision of the system of franchise, which, however liberal it might have been in the days of the first Georges, is decldedly too antiquated for an advanced aca.

All the unprejudiced thinking men of Great Britain had come to the conclusion that some extension was needed, and the only question was in regard to how many of the lower classes should be admitted to the sacred right. Lord Russell proposed a wise and liberal system. and one which, although it did not meet the demands of justice, was as near a perfect law as we could have expected. It was defeated by the bolting of certain of his followers, and the DERBY Ministry came in on the direct issue of opposition to the popular reform measure.

The consequences of baving a Government which the people themselves despise have already become evident. A series of riots are commencing, which, unless immediately stopped by some temporizing measure, will endanger the throne itself. A riot in England is an affair of rare occurrence, and a much more dangerous matter than a riot in our republic. Here, all are interested in suppressing a dusturbance and saving their property. Wealth is so generally distributed that each is fearful of losing what little he has. But in England the matter is different. The wealth all lies in the possession of the few, and any destruction which occurs does not directly affect the masses, except in giving them an opportunity to plunder. It was to this uneven distribution of wealth that the rapid spread of the French Revolution must be ascribed; and it is on this danger that the chief hopes of the masses of England lie.

The fear of their property will act as a far stronger argument in favor of a liberal law, regulating franchise than any appeal to 103tice. And to this danger the property of Great Britain is to-day subjected. The cable brings us information of riots in London, and will probably tell us of similar outbreaks in other cities of the kingdom. It is because of these demonstrations that we prophesy a speedy termination of the DERBY Ministry. The country has no confidence in the Administration; and in England, despite all statements to the contrary, everything must bow down to the popular sentiment. If the Lords resist, a sufficient number of new Peers are cleated to turn the majority. If the Commons do not follow the popular dictation, then reform meetings are held, and the mutterings of a storm make all opposers seek refuge in flight. We therefore anticipate that, before the month of September is fairly opened. her Majesty will find it necessary to invite Lord RUSSELL to once more form a ministry.

A False Alarm.

Our Democratic contemporary has a leader this morning, double-leaded, and meant to be sensational, but, after all, only "powerful weak," as they say out West. It has picked up a stray paragraph in the Philadelphia correspondence of a conservative New York journal-written, as likely as not, in the office of our contemporary itself-containing a lot of bugaboo nonsense about the assembling of the Conservative Convention in this city.

We beg our contemporary to be reassured. The conservatives have just broken up a Union convention in New Orleans, and murdered some of its members; but the Union men of Philadelphia will not follow that bad example. The right of "free assemblage," although always denied us at the South, and often at the North while the sham Democracy bore rule, is still a sacred one, which we desire to see preserved to all men and to all parties.

We have no doubt the August Convention will tell powerfully in favor of the Union cause. The WOODS and VALLANDIGHAMS, and that class of politicians, can hardly get together, and make speeches and pass resolutions, without strengthening the tone of public feeling in opposition to their schemes. The outspoken sentiments of this class of men-by the very extremity of their tanaticism and disloyalty-strengthened us throughout the whole course of the war; and, we doubt not, will do so still. Let them assemble then, by all means, and let them again declare the war a "failure" if they choose-let them rec 11 their old speeches against coercion and emancipation-let them even abuse, as of old, our great martyr, ASRAHAM LINCOLN, it they desire-let them say what they choose, for the more truly they speak out the sentiments of their hearts the more powerful will be the reac tion in favor of the Union cause.

Intemperate Discussion.

THE affray last night in the southern past of the city, which grew out of a heated political discussion, resulting in the violent death of one of the persons concerned, should be a warning to men of all parties. We are entering upon a very active political campaign, and it behooves every good citizen to confine his political discussions within the bounds of prudence and good sense. Men who cannot talk upon politics without getting into a row over it, had better confine their conversation to other and less exciting topics. Molence of all kinds should be trowned down by all parties.

Facts Which Demand a Theory.

How do those theorists who maintain that the Rebel States remained politically in the Union despite their secession, and lost none of their rights or functions by the Rebullion, reconcile their theory with such facts as are disclosed in the following telegrams?-

Galveston, July 30 .- Acting State Judge Bell. has been instructed from Washington to con-tinue the Provisional Government till further orders, and to notify the President immediately on the assembling of the State Legislature.

Houston, Texas, July 31.—Despatches from Austin state that J. H. Bell. Secretary of State, her been resident by the Persident has been noticed by the President that the Legislature well be permitted to assemble without hundrance on the 6th of August; and also, that Governor Throckmoston will be inaugurated

How did Texas lose her State Government, and come to be put under a "Provisional Government?" How does it happen that as a State "in the Union" the President has anything to say about a Legislature being "p.rmitted to assemble?" And it Texas is and has been all the time politically in the Union, who, for the past eighteen months, or since the overthrow of the Rebellion, has had the right to appoint Senators in Congress from that State? Has the Provisional Government created by the President, possessed that right? If not, who bas? How can that be a State "in the Union" which has no government by the people, but whose Government is one imposed upon it by the Federal Executive?

But if Texas by the Rebellion lost her status in the Union, lost her State organization, so that a military government from April, 1865, to August, 1866, was right and proper, then how is she to get back into the Union, except through the action of Congress? If for so long a time she has not only rightfully been kept out of the Union, but even deprived of self-government, what power except the people of the United States, acting through their representatives, is now competent to say that she shall again be American Horse-Racing. WE are told that hereafter the races at Saratoga are to be prohibited, as the proprietors of the large hotels consider them injurious to the reputation of the place. So far as the racing of two fine specimens of horse-flesh is concerned, we suppose that all will agree with us that there can be no possible objection to a display of equestrian beauty. The examination of any perfect object in the animal kingdom not only does no harm, but is of positive benefit; and the assemblage of all the finest blooded racers together would give our citizens an opportunity of admiring what is incomparably the finest of all the brute creation. Leaving all questions as to the intrinsic good or evil of the custom out of the question, we think that, viewed in the light or expediency, the action of the Saratoga proprietors is a good one. The Springs have heretofore maintained a reputation as the fashionable resort of the country. The class of visitors who frequent them are the best of our society, and it is supposed that only the eute attend. Although this fact is merely a supposition, yet the name of Saratoga has always been respectable. If, then, these races be made a feature, an entirely new class of people will go to attend them; and, as a matter of consequence, the present frequenters will di-continue their visits. In America, attending horse-races has not yet proved to be anything but disreputable. To them resort gamblers and their associates, who monopolize the turf, and make what in England is legitimate sport, degenerate into almost a crime.

It was but a few years since when a fast oung man, going rapidly to the bad, was de nominated as one who "drinks, gambles, and attends horse-races." If, therefore, Saratoga would protect herself from an inundation of the lowest classes of our community, it is only proper that she should prevent the continuance of the races. We carnestly wish that the turl might be regenerated, and placed once more among the allowable recreations of the day; but we consider it a dangerous thing for Saratoza to risk her reputation in seeking to be the first to attempt to tarn the tide.

Resignation of Assistant Secretary of War. It is with extreme regret that we hear from Washington of the resignation of Hon. T. T. ECKERT, Assistant Secretary of War. Mr. ECKERT held that office during the darkest days of the Rebellion, and has fulfilled its duties with unswerving fidelity and ability. He had charge of the special department of war telegraphing, and controlled it to the perfect satisfaction of both the Government and the country. He was recently confirmed by the Senate in that position, and he now leaves it to accept of the post of General Superintendent of the Eastern Division of the great telegraphic combination-the Western Union and American Union lines. He is a practical electrician, and while we regret his loss to the Department, we cannot but congratulate the Directors of the Company in securing a superintendent in one who is at once most able and most experienced, as well as an ever courteous gentleman.

A Prudent Speech.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL W. T. SHERMAN IS a shrewd man in every respect. Witness the following little speech that he made in Washington last evening, in response to a large crowd that had assembled outside his hotel:-"Gentlemen; -- I have no doubt this serenade is intended for me. I therefore thank you for the compliment. I am a stranger here, and I intend leaving in the morning. If you want to see me come out West, and you will find me either at St. Louis or on the Plains. I shall always be happy to see any of you. I don't intend making a speech, because I think the less man says in Washington the better for him. I have no better triend than myself, I will say

The General was not so reticent when he was in New England.

Death of John Ross. JOHN Ross, the Cherokee Chief, died in Washington yesterday. He was a man of education and ability, and although said to be a half-breed, had but little appearance of the Indian about him. He had awassed a large property, and lived in splendid style before the war, his mansion being furnished with plano, paintings, elegant furniture, etc. All was destroyed, however, during the war, and he must have been reduced to rather straightened circumstances. He was at Washington prosecuting claims against the Government.

MAJOR GENERAL FRANCIS J. HERRON, a prominent Union officer who settled in New Oricans immedistely after the war, and who was one of the delegates elected to the August Convention in this city, has declined to attend, since witnessing the terrible scenes connected with the great massacre of Union men in that city.

-The New York Herald this morning says:-'Money remains abundant, and the general rate of loans to the Stock Exchange is four per cent. with exceptions at five. There is very little offering of good commercial paper. That of the first class is still quoted at 5@64 per cent. The Western money markets are extremely easy-a consequence of the general stagnation of business, which is usual this season of the year. The Chicago papers report that currency is still being sent daily to New Yors, and exchange there on the East is firm at par buying and 1-10 premium selling."
