Stephen A. Douglas.

It is wonderful how soon in this country we forget our great men. Five years ago no man in the nation commanded a wider influence or stood out more prominently as a representative man than STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. Suddenly cut down in the midst of his career, he has already passed as completely out of the public mind as though he belonged to another age and generation. Amidst the stupendous events which have occurred since his death-the momentous changes, the vast progress in ideas-both his name and his career have faded into comparative obscurity.

The proposed laying of the corner-stone of a monument to be erected to Mr. Douglas memory in Chicago has been made the occasion of a somewhat prolonged tour by the President, and will probably recall for the moment men's minds to the illustrious individual in whose behalf these proceedings are ostensibly made.

It is the fashion of the times to deal in extravagant laudation of the distinguished dead. The maxim, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum," is almost literally followed out. Men who were fiercely denounced all their lives are as indiscriminately praised after they are dead, the denunciation and the praise often coming from the same parties. This is signally illustrated in the case of Mr. Douglas. No man was more flercely denounced while living-none has been more highly commended since death.

This style of dealing with public men is demoralizing in many ways. It tends to break down that distinction between good men and bad men, between good actions and bad actions, which it is the highest interest of virtue to have maintained. Moreover, it tends to remove from the minds of public men that sense of responsibility to the judgment of the future, which in most cases is a restraining and elevating influence. The man who feels that he is amenable not only to the opinions of his fellows, but also to the calmer and more discriminating voice of those who shall come after him, has in that very fact an impulse towards the right and a restraint from the wrong. But how can this influence be maintained, if after death no discrimination as to the acts and characters of public men is to be made, and all are to be alike the subjects of commendation?

The closing acts in the drama of Mr. Douglas' eventful life were so grand, so unselfish, so full of all the best elements of heroism and patriotism, that it would be an ungrateful task now to review his earlier and less worthy political career. The pen of the impartial historian, however, will not fail to point out his instrumentality-ay, his leadership-in the overthrow of the Missouri Compromise and the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, as one of the chief proximate causes of that fearful agitation which finally culminated in our recent terrible war. Nor can the true lover of liberty ever torget that utter indifference to the moral character of slavery which formed the key-note of his actions through life. These, however, are the more discriminating views which history will take of the man, when the events of our times shall have fallen into their proper order and rank. For the present, we may be allowed to dwell upon that magnificent burst of patriotic teeling and action with which the illustrious Illinoisian illumined the close of his public career, throwing into comparative shade and forgetfulness all that he done and said before.

Hungary and Francis Joseph

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the telegram from Prague announcing that peace is regarded as a certainty (which has, however, since been consummated), another telegram from Pesth. the capital of Hungary, brings us the information that, after the conclusion of that peace, the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH of Austria intends to appoint a Hungarian responsible ministry, and that the Hangarian Diet is to be formally reopened in Pesth some time during the month of September. If this intention is carried out, Hungary will be restored to her rull rights under a constitution of a thousand years' standing. There is a peculiar significance in this double announcement. To the thoughtful it reveals at once the secret of Austria's vulnerability, and points unmistakably to an easy solution of the problem how a first-rate power like her could collapse within such a short period of time.

The series of defeats on the battle-field suffered by Austria, were owing as much to the disintegrating eliments at work within her own limits as to the superior military ability of her enemy.

At the outbreak of the war she presented the anomaly of a nation without a nationality. Her provinces differed widely in race, language, historical tradition, and political aspirations. The Germanic, Italian, Mungarian, and Sclavonic tendencies were represented by these provinces respectively, and at times several nationalities were struggling in one and the same province. Since the formation of that Empire, "Divide et impera" had been the ruling maxim of the Hapsburg dynasty-to sedulously foment (dissensions amongst those different nationalities the chief study of her statesmen. They were used as a check upon each other, and in cases of internal danger, artfully turned towards the oppression of the less submissive portions of that country. A policy of doubtful honesty in itself, it became the source of irremediable weakness whenever Austria was called upon to cope openly with an enemy strong in the enthusiasm produced by a common tongue, a common history, however brief, and unity of interests. In the course of her disastrous policy, she succeeded in estranging every one of the provinces from the dynasty at her head. Venetia longed for the embrace of a sister people beyond the Quadrilateral; Galicia sighed for a united Poland; Panslavistic tendencies gained ground more and more amongst the Sclavonic races; Hungary stood firmly and unflinchingly upon the timehonored Constitution which secured to her people nationality and independence. Opposed to each other, these provinces had at the same time their distinct grievances to lay at the door of the ill-fated dynasty. BISMARK was not slow to perceive this state of affairs. He sounded the toesin of war, and success rewarded his efforts. But the successful termination of the thirty days' drama was owing quite as much to minor dramas that were being acted quietly and without ostentation within the heart of Austria itself. It is in this sense that we call attention to-day to the radical reform, or rather, restoration in Hungary which gives that people all they contended for during the revolution of 1848-9. FERDINAND abdicated in favor of FRANCIS JOSEPH, to evade the oath given in support of their Constitution. After a lapse of eighteen years, FRANCIS JOSEPH, in the day of his humiliation, by an act of tardy justice, contesses himself a usurper, and his rule in Hungary an illegal one. The peace of Prague is a cup of bitterness, prepared for him by the bands of his right royal brothers; but the Diet of Pesth is a cup of humiliation which the wickedness of the House of Hapsburg has filled for itself by centuries of systematic

The National Credit.

WE have no tears that the Government or people of the United States will ever be tempted to repudiate their financial obligations. The high premium which our bonds command in the market is a sufficient security against such a contingency, setting aside the question of our national resources as compared with our liabilities. The world has realized the fact that there is no better or more desirable class of securities in which the poor and the rich anke can invest their means; let it likewise be understood that the nation will never break faith with those who have reposed in its sincerity such unlimited con-

Notwithstanding these commonplace truths. which are upon the lips of every one, there is and has been a persistent effort on the part of a certain class of men to lose no possible opportunity for decrying our national credit, and thereby involving us even more inextricably in the quagmire of financial distress. For example, the steamer Java, which sailed from New York a few days since, carried to Europe copies of a circular over the signature of a well-known firm of brokers, in which we find the following remarkable pas-

"These proceedings of Congress and the subsequent action of the Treasury can only be in-terpreted as contact plating the payment in a greatly depreciated currency of the 5-20 bon is of 1862, falling due next May, which by existing laws are not payable in gold, nor even in legal-tender greenbacks, but only in notes of the national

This statement bears on its face the evidence of its utter and absolute falsity. At the time the bonds in question were issued the National Banking system was not in existence. These bonds, as is the case with nearly all of our other securities, are, by express legislation, made payable in gold.

The only question now is, Shall the Secretary of the Treasury purchase coin at a high premium, to redeem the bonds as they fall due on the first option; or shall he wait until we have reached specie payments, as he is permitted to do, and then pay off our obligations without a ruinous loss to the Government? The New York Tribune of this morning has the following sensible comments on this subject :-"For any American banker to say to European bankers that it is intended to redeem the issue of 1862 in May next, with currency, is to assert an untrue and mischievous statement, which will seriously injure our national credit if un-contradicted. We now see that if Congress had passed the proper legislation, and not restricted the Tressury to the amount of reduction of currency, we should have been back to specie payments on the 1st of April next, and after May we should at any time have had the right to pay the $514,000.000 Five-twenties of 1862 in coin and have sold the funded loan to furnish the

"Our duty is to wait, and not exercise the option of taying the issue of 1862, until we can do it without being compelled to pay a large premium for gold, until, in short, we reach specie payments. Above all things, our bankers should not go abroad with standers upon the national credit, and especially with bints of national repudiation. The American securities now bid fair to rule foreign markets. Every dispatch tells us of the largely-increasing de mand for foreign securities. The Five-twenty is the favorite investment in Hamburg, and Paris, and London. We should be proud of this recognition, and thank the men who have kept our credit so steady and unassailable.'

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

OFFICE OF THE EVENING TELEGRAPH,

Tuesday, August 28, 1886. The Stock Market was moderriely active this morning, and prices were well maintained. Government bonds continue in good demand at the late advance. City loans were also in demand, The new issue sold at 994@004, an advance of 1. Rathroad shares were inactive. Minehill sold at 59, a decline of 4; Philadelphia and Erie at 334, no change; Norristown at 60, no change; and Lehigh Valley at 65, no change; 130 was bid for Camden and Amboy; 58; for Pennsylvania Railroad; 57% for Reading; 29 for Elmira common; 42 for preferred do.; 35; for Catawissa preferred; and 461 for Northern Central.

Bank shares continue in good demand for investment, at full prices, but we hear of no sales. 145 was bid for Philadelphia; 130! for Farmers' and Mechanice'; 55 for Commercial; 96 for Northern Liberties; 32 for Mechanics'; 541 for Penn Township; 574 for Grard; 314 for Manufacturers' and Mechanics': 100 for Tradesmen's; 66) for City; 41 for Consolidation; 54 for Commonwealth; 66 for Corn Exchange; and 65 for Union.

Quotations of Gold-101 A. M., 1481; 11 A. M., 1494; 12 M., 149; 1 P. M., 1484.

-The New York Tribune this morning says:-"Money on call is abundant at 4@5 per cent., but the borrower is in many cases expected to take National bank notes, which are plenty on the street, and cannot be had readily under a per cent, discount. In paper little doing, Many buyers are disposed for the moment to keep funds idle, and wait the effect of moving the crops, expecting better rates. The payments from the Treasury are large to-day, and there is a general desire not to take the National curency by banks in the Clearing House, where it is for settlements unavailable.

"The payment of the temporary loan, except learing House certificates, which are redeemable in legal-tender, places the Treasury in a stronger position than it has held for a long time, but it may not leave permanently the money market to the public. Having nothing of temporary debt to pay for some time, there is every reason to expect that the Treasury will, from its excess of receipts over experses, accumulate currency in its vaults, and in that way have a conservative effect upon speculators. Gold and currency promise to accumulate to an extent to be felt by borrowers, and the Secretary will be in a position to take active though indirect steps in funding the currency. He will be able to hold the funded deb: at a price when conversions of currency debts into it will be constant, and in such amounts as to make it certain that all the 7:30s will take that orrection speeding. The Secretary has now power to dabble in Government stocks, and steadily get short into long debt, and can make at witi an easy or tight money market by his manipulations of the debt. While he is working back to specie, as he silently is, borrowers of money will be upon unsa'e ground. PHILADELPHIA STOCK EXCHANGE SALES TO-DAY

The question to be decided is whether loyalty is to be proscribed and punished in the persons of patriots like there, or treason rewarded and honored in the persons of the guilty authors and agents of the Rebellion. Shall the loyal masses or the baffled and deceated traitors govern the country? In these goest issues all are vitally concerned, and our southern compatrio a have instinctively turned towards the spot whence the Great Charter of American Liberty was first proclaimed, and propose within the sacred shadows of Indepen ence that, to renew their yows of fidelity to the principles of that functial creed, and to ake counsel with their Union triends.
