

THE GERMAN'S FATHERLAND.

As some curiosity has been evoked by quotations from Arnold's translation of the "German's Fatherland," we give the English version of James Clarence Mangan's—

SCENES ON THE GERMAN BATTLE-FIELDS.

A correspondent of the London Times writes— "The commissioners despatched to the lazarets and hospitals by the Patriotic League Association (Hilfsverein) of Vienna have just published a long and interesting report. The commissioners were Baron Gorny, Oberleutenant Nohrwitz, and M. Polak. They begin by remarking that the Association have a wide field for their labors in Northern Bohemia alone, and draw a pitiable picture of the condition of the peasantry. For six months their country has been occupied by great armies—first by the Austrians, then by the Prussians, and lastly, by the enemy alone. The peasant's food has been devoured, his fields laid waste, his house burnt or torn down, and laid in ruins. They declare that the dead were left unburied in many places, and that the poisoned air destroyed the living. Nearly all the amputations made by the Prussian military surgeons were successful, and ended fatally; but no difference was made in the treatment of Austrian and Prussian wounded by the medical men who had charge of them. Still, they found the condition of the hospitals in all that related to nursing and medical attendance so deplorable, that the succor afforded by the Hilfsverein was most desirable.

BEATH OF WASHINGTON WRIGHT, A SAN FRANCISCO JOURNALIST.

The San Francisco American Flag, of a recent date, says:—Nearly ten years ago the writer of this made an agreement with the gentleman now deceased, that the one surviving the other should do justice to his memory, placing him in his proper light before the country, and awarding that meed of praise which might justly be his. The time has come when that melancholy duty must be performed; and, perhaps, no other is so well acquainted with the life and character of Mr. Wright as the writer of this article. He was born in the town of New York, and was a nephew of the distinguished statesman, Silas Wright. Having removed to the West, his parents died, leaving him a mere child, and utterly friendless. By some chance he was taken to Cincinnati, and mingling with other little waifs of the great city, became a match boy, and grew up almost to manhood without any advantages of even common schools. His taste for art was developed in a common paint-shop, where he attained great skill, which was afterwards employed in some of the ornamental work of the National Capitol, and also in various of the mountain towns of California. When only sixteen years of age he went with a company of volunteers to the war in Mexico, where he was employed in the hospitals until the end of the —The song of "The Wearing of the Green," in Arnold's translation, is not claimed by Mr. Boucicault as original. The "Wearing of the Green" is a familiar song in many parts of Ireland, and Mr. Boucicault had the taste to select it, and carry it into popularity. He substitutes "Napper Tandy" for Napoleon Bonaparte, and omits the refrain. Here is the old version:— "I met Napoleon Soupparte, He took me by the hand, He asked me for my Old Ireland, And how does she stand? She's the most distressed country That ever you have seen, For they're hanging men and women For 'Wearing of the Green.' But the green it shall be wore, And the orange shall be tore, And the red flag of Ireland Shall wave forevermore.
