Hannibal Hamlin, who had a short time before returned from Media, was serenaded at the La Pierre House, by the Union League of Philadelphia, who had employed the services of an efficient hand of musicians. the services of an efficient band of musicians for the purpose. The eloquent musical strains soon drew together a large crowd of people—their number being greatly augmented by the addition of a large part of the audience that had been at the Academy of Music to near Miss

Arna Dickinson. After the performance of the music, the name of Hannibal Hamlin rang through the multitude, and presently the honorable gentiman made his appearance upon the northern

He was introduced by R. Rundle Smith, Esq. who said:-Fellow citizens:-I have the honor to introduce to you our distinguished representative and citizen—that bright star of the East, the Hon. Hannibal Hamlin.

Three cheers were given. Some one in the crowd proposed three cheers for the man who ought to be the President of the United States. These were given with a mighty good will. Mr. Hamhn said he felt grateful for this renewal of confidence and expression of kindly feeling, and that he would return to his native state taking with him the most pleasing recollections of the kindness extended to him, not only by the Union League but the good and loyal people of the city of Philadelphis at large. (Applause.) He must also remember with very great pleasure what hat been accomplished by that truly loyal, noble organization, the Union League. (Applause.) Who but the Union League could have sent ten regiments into the field from this city? thousand intelligent, high-minded, honorable gentlemen, in the hours of the country's need, made the name of Philadelphia and their own well known and respected throughout this broad and. (Applause.)

The good work that emanated from their hands was not merely confined to the city, but its beneficial effects were felt far abroad. We look from our Eastern home to the loyal city of Philadelphia with feelings of the profoundest admiration. Your city is worthy of all praise, and for its many good works, for the unquestionable loyalty of its intelligent citizens, we in the East shall e very happy indeed to imitate your noble given with great enthusiasm.

William B. Mann was next introduced. He said that while the Mayor was speaking, an illustration had occurred to him of the antagomism existing in the South against everything Northern-excepting, of course Northern Cop-perheads. The illustration alluded to was the refusal of the Richmond Base Ball Club to play a friendly game with a Washington club, and their expressed desire to have no connection with the National Base Ball Convention.

Mr. Mann continued at some length on na-tional topics. While he was speaking, the "Boys in Blue" of the Twenty-seventh Ward took up a position near the speaker's stand, and Mr. Manu proposed three cheers for those who had worn the blue blouses and brass buttons. (Immense cheering )

He had left a sick bed merely to present himself, and, in brief, to deny some of the slanders heaped upon him while he was ill. The speaker referred to the proposed amendments to the Constitution, and said that while he admitted there might be a necessity for a change in the basis of representation, he denied that these amendments were har and onest. They were designed to establish negro suffrage.

Colonel E. W. C. Greene was the next speaker. He referred to the fact that, two years ago, the radical candidate for Congress had secured his influence in favor of his election and in aiding the men of the district to secure money to evaluate drait. All this was done upon the principle that the Union should be preserved intact and perpetuated. He was for the Union; he was for estamine the Union of the States, whether the attacks came from foreign toes or from dastards in the South or dastards in the North. (Cheers.) Speeches were made by Charles Atermeble and others.

John Hulme, Esq., candidate for Congress in the Second District, was introduced to the meeting. He was received with loud cheering. He announced as his platform, the Constitution of the United States, and said it was sufficient as t now stands, and that there was no need for the thousand amendments proposed to it. If he should be elected to Congress, he would devoce as energies to have the Government economically administered, and taxes reduced; and no fort should be spared to secure the Navy Yard

it League Island. The speaker then referred to the present con-dition of the Southern States, and the position they occupied politically, and urged that the Constitution of the United States was sufficient to remedy all evils. (Applause.) Capiam Powers, and others, addressed the
