LETTER FROM PARIS.

The Emperor at the Sea-side-He Receives Deputations-Herr von Bismark-His Sickness-Napoleon Loses a Friend-The Bavarian King and His Music - The New Sadowa Menal, Etc. Etc.

[ EVERING TELEGRAPH SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.] Paris, October 3, 1866. The Emperor at Biarritz.

It was thought that the Emperor had gone to the sea-side in order to take a little relaxation. and to get away from the daily occupations of the Tuileries, which have of late caused him much fatigue; but such does not appear to be the case, as we every day read of his Majesty's receiving this or that diplomatist.

Monsieur de Monstier, who has left Constantinople, and is now on his way to Paris, will proceed from Marseilles to Biarritz, and will there, no doubt, take his master's instructions as to the line of policy he is to pursue on taking office as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Herr von Bismark, who has been so often announced as intending to pay the Emperor a visit, will now very likely not be able to leave Berlin, as he is laid up with a sharp attack of neuralgia in the left leg.

His Majesty will also receive the visit of the unfortunate Austrian Ambassador, Von Metternich, who, it is said, will soon be replaced. Now that things in Germany appear to be settling down, fresh troubles seem to be springing up in the East. The insurrection in Candia may, we fear, bring up the difficult Oriental question. The insurgents have, for the last ten days, been setting the Turco-Egyptian troops at defiance, and they seem determined to throw off the Ottoman yoke. There is no doubt but that the Candiotes are receiving secret assistance from the King of Greece, who is himself backed by the Czar. They both consider Turkey to be the most decided obstacle to the emancipation of the Christian races, and they look on the overthrow of the Ottoman Empire as the best mode to solve the Eastern question.

The Sicilian Insurrection. News from Florence informs us that the insurrection in Sicily has been quelled, and that the troops of Victor Emanuel are now in quiet possession of Palermo.

The arrival of the English fleet at Palermo a week before the insurrection broke out, and the attitude of the English towards the Sicilians, have been the subjects of comment among the Italian journals, and furnished the chief argument of the charge brought against England, that of covering Sicily, the pearl of the Mediterranean. But it is much more rational to believe that the presence of the English squadron was a measure for the protection of the interests of Great Britain, a sort of precaution which appears to have been entirely wanting to the Italian Government. Moreover, if England really nourished any designs on Sicily, in view of her own naval interests in the Mediterranean, would she spontaneously have abandoned the protectorate of the Ionian Islands, which gave her a far more commanding position in the waters of the Levant? It is evident that these insinuations are therefore utterly devoid of common sense, and if Italy is ever to lose Sicily, it will certainly not be through the intrigues of England.

With the exception of the two insurrections in the Mediterranean, we have very little of political interest to write about. Our papers are mostly taken up with the doings of the Court at Biarritz, The health of Napoleon III is, It may be said, quite re-established: he leads a most active life at the sea-side, he daily superintends the works of the jetty which is being made at that fashionable watering-place; he also takes long walks with the Prince Imperial, and superintends his swimming lessons. His Imperial Highness cannot be said to have a very decided taste for the salt sea wave.

Napoleon Loses a Friend.

The Emperor bas, since his arrival at Biarritz, been much afflicted by the death of his intimate friend and almost constant companion, Count Bacetoche, the Count who was at the same time chamberlain to the Emperor and Surintendant des Theatres. He was sixty-three years old, and had long been a sufferer. France has also lost another notability, but no friend to the present

The Marquis de Boissy, the most eccentric man in France, died a few days ago, at the age of 68. He was a Legitimist of the Ville Roche, and was called the Enfant Terrible of the Senate. The noble Marquis was allowed to say many things which others hardly dared to think in France. He was always of the opposition, no matter what Government was in power. The Marquis de Boissy was notorious for his hatred of our neighbors across the channel, whom he never lost an opportunity of abusing. It was he who gave such a welcome to Stephens, the Fenian leader, of whom he made a great pet during his stay in Paris, after his escape from the hands of his English jailors.

The Musical King. The good Bavarian beer-drinkers are at the present, moment very much dissatisfied with their young king, who pays more attention to the music of the future than to the affairs of the State. It is thought that King Louis, the grandson of the old Lola Montez Louis, is something like his grandfather, and that he is not quite right in his mind, for he spends whole days on the lake of Starnberg, near Munich, dressed in a medieval costume, studying the scores or the operas by his friend Wagner. It is said that his Majesty is so fond of moonlight effects, that he has had an apparatus put up in his bedroom similar to those made use of in theatres to produce moonlight effects, so that he can call for moons here whenever he likes.

The Sadowa Medal.

The King of Prussia has just had a new medal struck, which is entitled the "Sadowa Medal," which will be given to all those who took a part in the glorious campaign in Meravia and Bohemia.

Fourteen young Annamites, who had arrived in France to be educated at the expense of their own country, which allows eight francs a year for each pupil, had been placed in the College el the Marists at La Seyne, but have just been sent away from that establishment, which does not undertake the primary education of children. They are now lodged provisionally in the barracks of the ships' crews at Toulon, till a school can be found to take charge of them.

Miscellaneous Items. The Journal de la Vienne states that the manufacture of needle-guns had been provisionally suspended. At Chatillerault there was apparently some doubt as to whether the weapon should be fitted with a sabre bayonet of a triangular one. An Inspector-General and Monsieur Chassepot, the inventor, are expected to arrive, when the question will be decided.

The inundations in the east of France are beginning to cause much uneasiness. The river Alliez has attained a height of nineteen feet between Clermont-Ferrand and Issoire, and communications between the two towns are interrupted. The railway travel is interrupted in many parts of Burgundy. The Loire was still rising at Nevers, and the houses in the quarters most exposed were being evacuated.

Everything is now ready for the approaching season at the Paris Italian Opera. Adelina Patti has just arrived. She will remain with us until the end of the year. She is staying at the Grand Hotel. She reigned supreme last year, but this season she will meet with a rival in the charming songstress La Grue.

A new piece, which was given at the Theatre de la Porte St. Martin last night, attracted a large audience by its peculiar character. It is entitled Les Parisiens a Londres, and the object of the piece is to give the French an idea of English manners and customs, but in that respect it may be called an entire failure. The scenery and dresses are very good, and called for the many rounds of applause.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

THE SCIENCE OF WEALTH. A Manual o Political Economy, By Hon. Amasa Walker, of Amherst College, Little, Brown & Co.: Boston. Philadelphia Agents; J. B. Lippincott & Co.

An extended work of 480 pages on political economy lies before us. Coming, as it does, from an ex-member of Congress, and a gentleman so favorably known "down East" as Mr. Walker is, it should merit a careful attention from those who teel an interest in the subject-although, as a text-book, its fallacies are so glaring as to make it rather an evil than a work of reference.

To a careful student, and one who has already fully made up his mind on the great questions of the day as relating to political economy, we would recommend its perusal, It is a case of special pleading in favor of the heresy of free trade. The arguments advanced are plausible, and the theories erected seem perfect. Were it not that experience has taught us that free trade would ruin our land, we might almost believe that Mr. Walker was right. But with the light of the past as our guide, we cannot but view all Mr. Walker's reasonings, plausible as they are, as "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal." We hope that, so far as beginners are concerned, the sophistries of this work may not reach them. Voltaire is not dangerous when read by sincere Christians. All his scurrility and contempt are powerless. So all the teachings of gentlemen of Mr. Walker's school are powerless so soon as reason has attained maturity. Until then, let us protect the minds of our young men from those dangerous fallacies which can only to deceive the ignorant.

The work is admirably illustrated with diagrams, representing the rise and fall of gold, the effect of trade, the value of commerce between nations, etc., and as a work of referance should have a place in every library. It is handsomely bound, and printed on good paper and with clear large type.

THE ART OF AMUSING. By Frank Bellew. Carleton: New York. Philadelphia Agents: Ashmead & Evans.

A work full of all the charades, devices, and pleasant games with which to please. It is a curious compilation, fitled with amusing wood-cuts, and will be a valuable work to guide all parents in providing harmless enjoyment for their children. We can recommend it as one of the best books Carleton has issued. Neatly, though by no means handsomely printed, it will prove a welcome aid to all our domestic games.

Woman our Angel. By A.S. Roe. Carleton: New York. Philadelphia Agents: Ashmead & Evans.

"Woman our Angel" is an insipid, and by no means powerful and spicy novel. It claims in its printed notice to be moral. That claim we will not deny; but as to any force or vigor either in plot or expression, it has none. It possesses no characteristics to specially distinguish it among its thousand contemporaries, and is really as poor a book as has been manufactured for several months.

THE CITY'S HEART. By "A Daughter of New York." Carleton: New York. Philadelphia Agents: Ashmead & Evans.

When "Nothing to Wear" first appeared, it produced a sensation. It was new in style and good in conception and composition. When, however, it was followed by a series of sickly imitations, what was originally spicy degenerated into sameness; and now when the "City's Heart" comes to us, we must really vote the idea exhausted. It is a reply to all the lampoons springing from the relative merits of the attack and the defense. We think the city had better let her heart break. "The Daughter of New York" has made but a sorry defense, and with her failure we hope the last of that war of words is laid before us.

-The preparation of the "Hand-Book of Travel, for the State, City, and Vicinity," is now completed, and will be put to press forthwith by D. Appleton & Co., New York. The care taken in its compilation will insure one of the most comprehensive and reliable books of the kind ever published. The editor, Mr. Hall, is still ready to receive communications at No. 92 Grand street, New
