SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1866.

The War of Ideas-The Dissolution of the Democratic Party. Ir is interesting just now to witness the war of ideas, so to speak, that is going on in the bosom of the Democratic party. The Chicago Times, the leading Democratic organ in the West, has stirred up a tremendous commotion by coming out squarely for impartial suffrage. The Boston Post says ditto. The Albany Argus, scenting "the inevitable," and remembering the enormous Democratic rote in New York city cast by those who can neither read nor write, cries out against any test of intelligence, and goes the whole figure for "manhood suffrage." The Age, of this city, having cogitated on the subject for s veral days, comes out at last this morning a double-leaded leader, and calls upon the Lathful to stand by the old "principles" of the party. It evidently thinks that the bugb: r of "nigger equality" has not yet lost all its power, but can be made serviceable for an election or two more before it is finally cast de. It too sees the "inevitable," but thinks it of quite so close at hand as its Chicago veighbor, looking through the sixty thousand Republican majority in Illinois, does.

Now what does all this hubbub and racket in the Democratic household mean? Why, it simply means that the old party is breaking up-going down-shaking in the agonies of dissolution. Its discomfited leaders are running hither and thither, some crying one thing and some another, all terrified, and none knowing what to do. They all see that the old hulk is sinking. The Chicago Times would stop the leaks and turn the ship's head away from the breakers; but the Age, drunk with passion and prejudice, believes in crowding on the steam and tiding over the rocks if possible.

The Democratic party has outlived its day. It has ceased to represent democratic ideas. It has fallen from the position of a leading, active, aggressive, positive organization, to that of a conservative, hold-back, reactionary party. Its leaders have nothing in common with the liberal, enlightened, and progressive spirit of the times. They fail to comprehend the era in which they live. They have lost almost entirely their hold upon the young men of the country. They have alienated from their organization the liberal and progressive elements of the country. They have become essentially parrow, un-American, and aristocratic in their policy and views. The party is going to pieces; it is already in the agonies of dissolution. These discussions of the suffrage question which are springing up in its ranks are but the symptoms of dissatisfaction, discord, and disgust which prevail among its masses. There is no common bond of great principles and of enlightened public policy to hold them together. The more liberal and intelligent minds of the party are daily becoming more dissatisfied with its position. They see that, upon, all the great vital questions of true democracy, it has become apostate. They behold the banner of equal rights, under which the Democratic party used to march to victory, now borne at the head of another organization. They see liberal ideas everywhere more thoroughly permeating the masses. They see those ideas triumphing in foreign lands. They see that the Democratic party in this country is no longer really democratic. It has a name to live, but the vital principle that once gave power and glory to the organization is gone.

The "irrepressible conflict" has at last reached the Democratic organization. The "war of ideas" is raging in its very midst. It has no great leading mind capable of marking out a new course, reversing its present disastrous policy, and snatching victory once more from the very jaws of defeat. Douglas is dead; Breckinridge is in exile; Buchanan is imbecile; Jeff. Davis is in prison. The old leaders are gone. The stricken host is reduced to such a beggarly leading as is given by the Vallandighams, the Seymours, the Clymers, the Woods, the Morrisseys, the Jack Rogerses, and that class of third and fourth rate politicians. For the Democracy the era of statesmen has passed with the era of ideas. As a party, it has come into the condition which the Roman historian described as that of his country, where it can neither endure its vices nor their remedies.

Meanwhile, the great Republican organization grows more grand and more powerful. Its mission is to realize true democratic ideas in our institutions and laws. It believes in the people-not in classes, sections, divisions, families, races, but in the people. It believes in equal rights, a fair race, and a free field to every man. This is essential democracy. This is what Jefferson, the founder of American Democracy, meant when he declared all men to be created equal. Equality of rights, no privileged classes, no special legislation to keep one man above another, no grinding laws to keep any man forever down; but equal laws for all; exact justice; and then let every man make the most of the powers given him by his Creator:-this is the great American idea which has has given us such marvellous growth and greatness in the past, and holds out such startling possibilities of development and grandeur in the future. This is the radical idea of the Republican party. This is vitality that makes it grow in the face of all opposition. This is the secret of its marvellous success. In a word, the Republican party is that grand organization through which the great American nation is now working out its sublime destiny.

The Value of One Vote.

WELL, if my vote could do any good, and if the election depended upon it, I'd go to the polls; but one vote won't make any difference." How often we have heard that sentence within the last few months! The fact that fifty thousand citizens in this city neglected to exercise their right of suffrage, shows how prevalent and convincing was the argument. Yet often in the history of our country one vote has been of mighty value. Some twenty years since the Governorship of Massachusetts was decided by one vote, and within the past month its value has been well illustrated. The Legislature of New Jersey has the duty devolving on it of electing a United States Senator. Its political complexion was a matter of doubt. Had the Republicans lost Salem county, which was only carried by one hundred majority, and failed to gain elsewhere, the State Senate would have been against them, and the House have been almost a tie. Such a condition of affairs was anticipated throughout all the State. In Middlesex county, on the success of whose member the opinion of the Legislature was expected to depend, Mr. M. H. Tyrrell (Republican) was elected to the Legislature by a majority of one vote!

On that vote the sentiments of the United States Senator almost depended, and on his sentiments might rest the impeachment or acquittal of the President. Thank of the value of one vote! The whole political complexion of the country might have been altered by one vote! An importance belongs to it which was denied to the voice of any crowned head in Europe; and all this power is not hypothetical-it is real. The contingency almost arose, and may arise on any future election. Yet the power and value of that vote were not increased. They were merely brought out. Every one of our readers possesses a right which is equal to that we have argued, and any contingency may raise it to the height of almost omnipotence. When this is borne in mind, let us hear no more of a vote being of no consequence, but let every citizen exercise his dearest right as though the future of his country depended on his discharging his duty as his patriotism and his intelligence shall direct.

A Tale Untolded.

THE story of the origin, efforts, failures, and final success of the Atlantic Cable Company, as told by Cyrus W. Field, Esq., savors rather of a romance than a plain statement of facts. Yet all it deals in are events which have actually occurred. It forms a most powerful argument in favor of perseverance, and far surpasses all the force of the trite proverbs which are preached to us from infancy. Determination and undying decision to win in the end have at last succeeded. His narrative is a tale of struggling against failure, and almost in the tace of nature. Yet the force of character, the indomitable will, has at last conquered. It affords a powerful lesson to all who doubt ultimate success, and calls to mind the lines of Tupper:-

"Never give up; it is wiser and better Always to hope than once to despair. Fling off the load of doubt's cankering fetter, And break the dark chains of tyrannical care. Never give up, or the turden may sink you; Providence wisely has mingled the cup.

And in all trials and troubles betweek you, The watchword of life must be, "Never give

The Poor of Par's.-A Paris correspondent writes:- "The Administration of Public Relief in Paris bas just published its return for the year 1864. It appears from the census taken in 1863, after the annexation of the faubourgs, that there were 40,056 families, comprising 101,570 persons, on the books of the Relief Committees. A year later, 31st of December, 1864, according to the returns of the same department, the indi-gent population of the capital comprised 42,629 families, or 117,740 persons, showing an increase of 5623 families, or 16.176 persons, during the twelve months. It is to be observed, however, that by reason of the changes of domicile a con-siderable portion of the destitute appear at the same time on the books of several offices, which would consequently reduce the figures. Still, it is undeniable that the number of the indigent is on the increase." Liberal Act of the Italian Government -Baron Ricasoli has addressed a circular to the prefects of the kingdom of Italy, stating that the cessation of foreign occupation enables the Govern-ment to recall immediately the bishops who have been removed from the'r sees, or confined to a certain residence. The only exceptions made for the present apply to those bishops residing at Ronie, and those against whom proof of political intrigue has been recently furnished.

New Comedies.—The London Orchestra says that a new comedy in two acts, by Mr. John Oxentord, is in preparation for production at the Strand Theatre. A new one-act comedy by Dr. Westland Marston is in rehearsal at the Haymarket Theatre. It is entitled A Mere Child; it will shortly be produced, and Miss Powell, formerly of the Princess' Theatre, will make in it her first appearance on the Haymarket boards.

The London Printers -At a meeting of about fifteen bundred members of the London Com-positors' Society, held in Exeter Hall on the 23d ultimo, it was resolved to demand an advance of one haifpenny per thousand on all descriptions of printing, except newspaper If the advance was not conceded before the second Monday in November, a strike was deemed probable.

A Golden Compliment.—The bevy of young women who received the King of Prussia on his triumphal entry into Berlin, have been presented with gold brooches ornamented with the head of the King and the Prussian eagle.

New Opera .- An Italian correspondent informs the London Athenaum that Mr. Frederick Clay intends to attemot an Italian opera, with the view of producing the same at Milan. The libretto, it is added, will be by Signor Piave.

Complete Edition -A complete edition of the music of Meyerbeer's opera Strucnsee, with an orchestral arrangement, for performances at concerts, by M. Fetis, has just been published at Paris.

Tennyson set to Music -The London Athenaum understands that a new set of songs by Sir Alfred Tennyson may be expected, and that they are to be set to music by Mr. A. S. Sullivan.

Opera by Rossini —It Trovatore states that Signor Rossini has consented to write a comic opera for Paris, to be represented there next year, and gives as its title Il Casallo di Troja.

OFFICE OF THE EVENING TRUNGBAPH, | Saturday November 17, 1866. The Stock Market, with one or two exceptions, The Stock Market, with one or two exceptions, was very dull this morning, and prices were unsettled and lower, owing to the decline in gold. In Government bonds there was very little doing. 100 was bid for 10-40s; 10s½ for old 5-20s; 113½ or 6s or 1881; and 106½ for August 7:30s. City loans were in fair demand; the new issue sold at 102½; and old do. at 99½, no change. Quotations of cold—10½ A. M., 142½; 11 A. M., 142; 12 M., 141½; 1 P. M., 142.

-The New York Tribune this morning says:-"Money was not scrive, but little new business is done under 6 per cent. on call upon Governments. Some old loans remain at 5 per cent., but lenders look for still better cates next week. Some banks have out their call loans at 7 per cent. Next wick's bank statement is ex-pected to show a further loss of legal tender, with a gain in coin. As 'legal tender' is the item upon which the public judge of the ability of the banks to loan money, the statement will not make capital any more easy of access. In commercial paper fittle doing. The rates are 6@74 per cent., with exceptional sales below 6 p cent. Long paper is not in favor."

-The Chicago Tribune of Wednesday P. M. "Business in financial circles was very quiet to-day—exceedingly quiet—and in some quar-ters it was pronounced dull. Money is easy. First-class paper is readily taken at the usual rate, 10 per cent. On the street there is very nttle doing, and the rates of interest are nominal. Call loans are freely offered at 7 per cent. Exchange was quiet but firm, with sales between banks at par to 25 cents premium, mostly the upper figure. The counter rates were firm at par buying, and 1-10 premium

-The Cincinnati Commercial of Wednesday P. M. saye:-

Exchange remains very heavy, and dealers, for the most part, are indisposed to take outside offerings at better than ic, discount, though of customers they buy at 1-10@ic. off. Some of the sales were at 50c. off. The list of favorice borrowers becomes gradually less, and business is not a little cramped by the pinch in the Money Market, a condition of things which must be regarded as decidedly anomalous when so little is doing in a speculative way outside of the Stock Market. It is not assuring to know that the main cause of it is supposed to exist in the tardiness of mercantile collections, though the fact itself is likely to have, or at least ought to have, a wholesome influence on trade PHILADELPHIA STOCK EXCHANGE SALES TO-DAY the business community. In the practical value of its well-tried course of instruction, in the experience and ability of its teachers, and in the success of its graduates, it is unequalled. A few weeks of attentive study here seldom fails to give what usually requires years of weary toil in the routine or Counting-House apprenticeship. A. large number of young men, on floishing their course with us, have, without previous experience, entered upon and satisfactorily discharged the duties of accountants in extensive houses with confidence and skill. Catalogues may be obtained gratis on application. "CRITTENDEN'S BOOK-KEEPING." Count-
