THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

Letter from Consui-General Beckwith to J. C. Berby, Esq. Panis, November 9.—J. C. Derby, Esq., United States Agent, New York—Dear Sir:—As regards the shipment of products. I requested in a former letter, and now repeat the request, that the packages may all bear the numbers and class affixed in your lists and in mine, to the name; of the respective exhibitors.

This will give me a knowledge of the contents of each markage without opening and will

of each package without opening, and will chable me to bring forward as wanted and direct to its proper locality each package before open-ing it, which will save much time and labor. The bills of lading must correspond exactly with the marks and descriptions on the packages by which they are shipped, and be made to my order, as it is upon these that I make the entries and obtain the documents at the Ministere du Commerce to permit the landing and forwarding of the products.

There are two methods of forwarding the broducts, one of which is greatly to be pre-terred. First—Collect and warehouse the products in New York, and ship them by one ves-sel chartered for that purpose. Second-Warehouse nothing, but ship off the products as they arrive by any and every good freighter laid on for Havre that promises despatch.

The first method would cause great delay in New York, and could not be fully carried out, because some products will lay behind, keeping all the others waiting, and cause them all to be too late in reaching here.

On arrival at Havre, also, in a mass, there would be a delay, because they cannot be forwarded any faster than placed in the exhibition, and as that is a slow process, there will be double carriage and storage and labor at Havre, and increased expenses.

But the chief objection to this method is the loss of time on both sides; ample time is allowed for placing the products, but the whole of that time will be required, beginning on the 15th of January 1867. January, 1867. Please bear in mind that the presence of products on the 28th of March does not secure their reception. They must have been placed, and the placing will end on that day. Products not then installed and ready for the opening of the exhibition will be excluded, as if they had not The necessities of the business, therefore, require the products to begin to arrive and to be placed on the 15th of January, and by con-tinuous arrival the labor to be so conducted as to secure the placing of all.

The second method is, therefore, the proper one to adopt. Ship by every opportunity, and if opportunities do not offer, make them, and keep the products in movement, without any delay. No other method will succeed in getting the products properly installed in the Exhibi-tion in time for the opening, and without which they will be excluded. These are the Imperial regulations, and considering the value which the nation attaches to punctuality and military exactitude in affairs, especially when is essential to the intended effect, I do not think there is any reason to expect a relaxation or departure from these regulations.

It is possible that you might charter a large Vessel at a lower rate of freight than the average of freight by several vessels, but this would be bad economy. The increased expenses on bad economy. The increased expenses land by delay, accumulation, warehousing, etc. on your side and on this side, will greatly ex-ceed the difference of freight alluded to, and at the same time produce a clog in the movement, that will endanger, if not wholly prevent, the possibility of placing all the products.

I hope, therefore, you will not hesitate to adopt the second method, and will call in the products from all points, shipping them as they arrive, and not permit any relaxation till they are all afloat.

If this be done on your part, and not with-standing delays and consequent exclusions and disappointments occur, the responsibility of it will attach to the producers themselves who are behind time, but whose inactivity should not be permitted to endanger the chances of those who are punctual. Your obedient servant, (ed) N. M. BECKWITH. (Signel)

United States Consul-General.

Revoiting Persecution-Outrageous Conduct of a Guardian Towards His Young Niece.

From the Chicago Times, November 28. George McIntosh is a man whose hoary head and bended frame are premonitory of the near approach of that unwelcome guest whose presence even the good, the pure, and virtuous so much dread. He has lived the allotted period of threescore years and ten, and is, figuratively, tottering upon the brink of eternity—trembling at the verge of the dark abyss whose regions never have and never will be explored by mortals. This old man was yesterday morning an occupant of the pri-oner's box at the Armory. He was not charged with any hideous crime, but came forward to plead to the usual com-plaint of "disorderly conduct."

The witness against him was a beautiful young girl, whose fair form and raddy cheeks and bright eyes and transparent purity were strikingly indicative of a chaste mind, and that moral loveliness which is the most charming attribute which a beneficent Creator can besto w upon woman. She gave her name as Lizzie Marie Schriber, and stated that the prisoner was her uncle. When the little hand had been raised, and the lips of the budding woman had pronounced the solemn words, "So help me God," this pure little girl proceeded with scalding tears pouring down her shane-reddened cheeks, and with painful sobs rending her bosom, to relate the pitiful tale of sufferings, of persecutions, of wrongs and of perils, which at once riveted the close attention and enlisted the warm sympathy of all who listened to it.

Nine years ago the father and mother of Lizzie

Marie Schriber died, leaving her, an orphan seven years of age, to the care of her uncle, George McInto-h. The wife of McIntosh was also buried shortly afterwards, and thus Lizzie and her uncle were left alone in the world—a wrinkled, venerable old man and a bright biossom who was destined to bud and ripen and mature for good or evil under his teachings and according to his example, A fearful responsi-bility rested upon his shoulders. The destinies of a dead sister's child were placed in his hands, and to him the child appealed for love, atten-tion, kindness, support, and education. She received none of these. In place of that love which the tles of consanguinity should have prompted, and which com-mon humanity would suggest, she received kicks and cuffs, and words whose burshness and coldness and bitterness sent a blighting chill to her warm young heart. Her lot was, indeed, a miserable one. With no father to whom she could look for the love which a man always feels for an only child; with no mother on whose bosom to rest her head and relate her little tales of girlish trouble; with no brothers nor sisters to share her joys and mingle in her sorrows; with not even a single playmate—deserted, desolate, despairing-she was shut out of the world and confined to the society of an unprincipled old uncle. She was made his slave, and was treated worse than a man of the commonest nobility of soul would treat a dog. Education was denied her, and she grew up in utter ignorance, not knowing one letter from another—scarcely even being aware of the ex-istence of a Supreme Being. She was compelled to drudge from morning to night, to cook, to wash, to iron, to mend, and to do as much work as is usually allotted to two stout girls. Not only this, but the uncle, she says, compelled her to steal the fuel which kept him warm in winter and cooked his victuals in summer. This and cooked his victuals in summer. This abominable course of life continued for several years, and Lizzie at the age of fifteen was almost resignorant as on the day when she was brought into a world of wickedness and misery.

It was then that a fearful calamity threatened her. It was then that the baseness of her uncle was revealed m all its hideous enormity. According to the child's story, when she became more mature in years, and when budding womanhood revealed developments of rare personal gifts a new feeling entered the uncle's breast. gifts, a new feeling entered the uncle's breast. His conduct toward his niece suddenly changed, and, instead of cowardly blows, he lavished upon her the most ardent caresses. This change was not wrought by any feeling of manly regard for and divine with the street of the best and of the child of a sister whose ashes are now min-gling with the clay of the cemetery. As horri-ble as it may seem, the girl asserts that George McIntosh attempted to accomplish her ruin. For weeks and months, by entreaties and by threats, he has endeavored to gratify his unholy appetite at the expense of Lazzie's virtue, her fame, her name, and all that is dear to the heart of woman.

The native purity of the young girl rebelled against such an outrage, and she resisted his importunities with an energy worthy of the noble girl she is. Finding that neither entreaties nor resistance were effectual in ridding her of the annoyance and danger which she was daily persecuted with, Luzzle finally pro-cured a warrant, and the old man was arrested and arraigned at the police court.

These were the facts related yesterday morning. Justice Sturtevant, while expressing the contempt and disgust which the facts suggested, concluded that a fine would not remedy the evil, and, therefore, required McIntosh to furnish bail in bonds of $500 to keep the peace, The sec , ity was not furnished, and McIntosh was sent to juli was sent to jail.

OPSILL'S PHILADELPHIA CITY AND BUSINES DIRECTORY-1867-S PUBLISHER OF GOPSILL'S SENNSYLVANIA STATE DIRECTORY-1867-S. OF GOFSILL'S "DENNSYLVANIA STATE DIRECTORY, Etc. Etc.

The necessity for a reliable Directory in so large a mercantile city as this is apparent to every business man; it is an actual want, and unless accurate, is useless, and instead of a true guide and index to its business interests, is a matter of annot ance.

The publisher, from long experience in the publication of similar works, of which the Pennsylvania State Business Directory is a specimen proposes at the solicitation of a number of influential mercuants of this city who bave suffered from the inaccuractes of former editions, to publish the above Directory from an actual and carefully prepared canvass of the city by an efficient and experienced sorps of canvassers, thoroughly educated to the business.

The work will contain a FULL CITY DIRECTORY, A COMPLETE BU ILESS AND STREET DIRECTORY, and such use ul miscellaneous information as shall form a complete guide to the Mercantile, Banking, Insurance, Beliglous, and other interests of the city.

In a city comprising to large a number of streets, so ing, Insurance Religious, and other interests of the city.

In a city comprising so large a number of streets, so greatly scattered, and in which such a vast amount of changes have been made during the past few years, the actual want of a systematically arranged and carefully compiled street and avenue Directory is appearent to every citizen and business man who has recourse to the Directory and especially to the stranger, who is entirely unacquainted with the location and ruméralization of the streets.

The form of the Street Directory will be so arranged as to tive at a glance the beginning of the street with any other name it may formerly have had, with its interactions right and left, and numbers thereon to its end, and will form a leature of the work, exhibiting not only the extent and number of the streets, but giving, from any stand-point, definite and correct information of any locality sought.

With the reputation of past publications, which have afforded perfect satisfaction, it will be his aim to make this book equal, it not superior to any issued by him, and requests that the canvassers for this work will be an orded the necessary information they require for it, as without such ald a reliable Directory cannot be issued.

As an advertising medium merchants and others issued.

As an advertising medium merchants and others will find this an excel ent opportunity; terms will be made known by the canvassers, and in no case will the payment be sacrotioned till the book is published.
