Imperial Sports. The Imperial Court is now fully enjoying the pleasures of Complegue, and the health of the Emperor is so far re-established as to enable him to partake of the pleasure of the sports with his guests.

There was a hunt on Saturday last, the 18th instant, in the forest of Compiegne. The rendezvous being at the Pait du Roi (the King's Well), one of the largest openings in the forest, the meet presented a very interesting spectacle. A pack of sixty fine hounds, white, spotted, black, and brown, with keepers in imperial livery (bright green), occupied one side; while on the other were carriages from the neighboring chateaux-huntsmen in the imperial uniform, and chars-a-banc, and Court vehicles, with guests coming at a gallop down the avenue of the forest. It was a rich confusion of toilettes, costumes, and bright colors, forming a picture full of animation, the frame of which was supplied by the lofty trees. The Prince Imperial arrived early. His Imperial Highness rode a small creamcolored Arab, and wore the imperial hunting dress, as did also his equerry, M. Bachon, and the son of Dr. Courseau. The Prince made the tour of the place of rendezvous, saluting those present, and managing his spirited little horse with grace and ease. A few minutes later the Emperor and Empress arrived in chars-a-banc. His Majesty was attired in the ordinary morning dress; the Empress wore a round hat and a mantle of maroon velvet. The Emperor alighted from the carriage, and went round the assemblage, shaking bands and speaking to several persons. Then the Prince de la Moskowa, Grand Huntsman, after taking his Majesty's orders, gave instructions to the attendants, who at once proceeded to set on the dogs. A stag, which might have been seen all the morning close by, in company with a dozen hinds, was started, which, after making several detours in the vicinity of the Puit du Roi, went off at full speed in the direction of the Etang (Pond) de Sainte Perrine.

The dogs, while following the stag, came upon a wild boar, which immediately turned upon them. They threw themselves boldly upon it, but they found more than a match in their antagonist, for the pack was obliged to give up the struggle, after having left two combatants on the field. The stag was run down about 5 o'clock, not far from the Etang de Sainte Perrine. In the evening the curee took place in the Court of Honor by torchlight, as usual.

The State of Spain.

The state of this badly governed country is beginning to attract muca attention in France. The Queen-who, it is well known, is entirely given up to religious bigotry—is now quite under the influence of her confessor, Father Claret, and of an intriguing and superstitious man, Don Patrocinio, Isabella refuses to listen to the counsels of those who wish well to their country. The sister of the Queen, whose marriage with the Duke of Montpensier, youngest son of the late Louis Philippe, caused so much annoyance to England, has long been trying to persuade her sister to listen the advice of the moderate party; and the Spanish papers send us an account of which has just taken place. It has, however, ha! no beneficial results. The Duckess of Montpensier said to her Majesty that the present situation of Spain had naturally excited the speaker's attention, at the triple point of view of the interests of the Queen and 10yal dynasty, those of the tamily of Orleans, and the position in which the Duchess might be involved by possible events. She added that, notwithstanding her residence away from Mudrid, and her anxious desire not to meddle with political affairs, she had been forced to overcome her firm intention to remain in retirement, and had only abandoned her complete seclusion in consequence of her conviction of the danger the dynasty was incurring. The Infanta expressed herself with great frankness, and declared to the Queen that, by following a reactionary policy and maintaining an attitude of open war with the Liberal party, her Majesty was departing from her mission; that she represents on the throne the Constitutional party, and cannot think of preserving her crown to remaining faithful to all the principles of that system. The Duchess warmly insisted on the necessity of the Queen making large concessions, and rallying round her the Liberal party; saying that if she did not do so, the day of rule for the Spanish House of Bourbon was near at hand; and that, in the disaster, the Queen, the dynasty, and other members of the royal family would be obliged to leave the Peninsula. By making in time concessions of a nature to bring about a sincere reconciliation with the Liberal party, her enemies would become less numerous; and should any of them venture to lift up their heads, the Queen of Spain would see her defenders rally round her. The Infanta added that her husband, the Dake of Montpensier, would be the first to fly to the rescue of the constitutional throne of Queen Isabella. Her Majesty reported that the Duchess could not form an exact opinion of the situation of Spain; that she (the Queen) had adopted a policy which produced excellent results, and which was the only one to follow to save her crown, her dynasty, and the interests and rights of all her family. Moreover, she was resolved to, in no way, modify her policy for anything." The Queen added: "The revolution has declared war to me-I, on my side, declare war to the revolution. We shall see which of the two will conquer. To abandon, at the moment of the struggle, the policy of resistance on which I have entered, and to make concessions, would be suicide; and I have before me the example of my cousin, the King of Naples, who, after having made compromises with the revolution and granted all the concessions required of him. was, nevertheless, obliged to descend from his throne, and go into exile. I am, therefore, resolved not to follow his example; I will resist. and I am firmly resolved to conquer or to die." The above information has been given by the Independance Belge, published[in Brussels. The Temps, another paper generally well informed, states that a war to the knife seems most decidedly to have commenced between the army and the population, in the unhappy Spain. The most stringent measures are being carried out in the army. Already many of the cergeants of artillery of the garrison, suspected of having anything to do with the Liberal party, have been sent to their homes, with a route indicating, in a rigorous manner, the stages and the time at which they are to arrive at their destination. Who will remain the conqueror in this lamentable strife? If the Cabinet wins the day, is there no danger in depriving the army of what is the very essence of its strength, the noncommissioned officers, for the most part inured to the fatigues of war, and possessing the confidence of the soldier far more than the officers do? On the other hand, the sergeants, the very puppets of the ambition of a few superior chiefs, may triumph over the Government and overthrow it, as happened in 1854.

Harmony in the Press of France. Monsieur Ducher; writer of the money article in the Pays, an organ of the Government, appeared yesterday before the Court of Correctional Police, in answer to a charge of violently assaulting Monsleur Mathorel, who is engaged in a similar capacity on the Presse, also an organ of the Government, An altercation between those two persons arose in the office of the latter journal, when M. Ducher so far forgot himself as to inflict on M. Mathorel two slaps in the face. For that offense he has now been sentenced to twenty-five francs tine and a month's imprisonment.
