STATE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE

RISTORI AS "MARIE STUART." So entirely, and with the subtle intuition of real genius, has Ristori grasped the nature, temperament, and mental conformation of the last unfortunate daughter of the ill fated race of the Stuarts, that scarcely anything is left us to desire in the delineation of a character whose many varied shades, in Ristori's hand, appears before us like a master portrait, to be remembered forever.

Schiller has taken strange liberties with the life and history of this unfortunate Scottish Queen-Hberties entirely unwarranted by any historical fact whatever. The love of Leicester for Mary has been introduced, we suppose, to "work up" the interest of the tragedy. The interview with Elizabeth is also purely fictitious; no such interview ever took place. Yet we cannot regret an interpolation which gives us a scene calling forth every power of Ristori's genius in its fullest and sublimest sense. The struggles of the broken-hearted, exiled, imprisoned daughter of James the First of Scotland, to bow her pride and sue for mercy, if denied justice, to the haughty English Queen, was rendered with so touching an acuteness, that our own hearts did battle for this noble lady, whose beauty had stirred the souls of three kingdoms, and whose bitter wrongs unsheathed the sword of many a noble knight, "to dare and die" in a just but hopeless cause. The swelling pride of the daughter of a "race of kings" was on Ristori's tips and in her mien when, goaded by "Elizabeth's" unwomanly taunts, she turns with flashing eyes and dilated form, and hurls upon her triumphant rival the bitterest gibe that could fall om mortal lips - Bastarda, "Elizabeth" shrinks and cowers before the mighty indignation and withering scorn of her hated rival-higher seems to rises the form of the captive Princess-the blood of the old race of Scottish sovereigns seems to rise and swell for one last moment of triumph, in their outraged daughter. Le sang azul resumes its sway, and with a gesture of inimitable regal dignity and command, she points to her feet, with the words. "Kneel thou to me-for 'tis I who am thy sovereign." Her rival is baffled, humiliated, defeated. . All the woman's nature asserts itself in the burst of joy with which she utters the line: "Un ora di vendetta e di trionfo (One hour of triumph and revenge)."

Years of cruelty and insult wipe out their bitter wrongs in that one moment of unmitigated triumph. Now she will die content. She has seen the brow of her victorious rival, England's vaunted "maiden" Queen, flush with the ignominy of conscious shame before her. To this dispirited captive, death is welcome after such a victory. In following with mind and heart Adelaide Ristori's exquisite rendition of this indescribable scene, we forgot the artistwe saw only the Scottish Queen, the injured woman, the ill-fated daughter of a doomed house, whose ill-omened birth the dying father greeted with the memorable words, "Alack! alack! with a lassie came the crown of Scotland, and with a lassie shall it pass away!" In the closing act of this otherwise powerfully written tragedy, we cannot too strongly condemn the liberty Schiller takes, both with truth and history, in making "Marie" confess her complicity in the murder of her husband, "Lord Darniey." Suspicion, vague and undefined, was all that ever left a stam on the sad, eventful life of one of the fairest and most unfortunate of women. Her marriage with the "Earl of Bothwell" was compulsory; her free will had no part in it. Even her enemies have admitted this.

The scene upon the scaffold, the parting with her maidens, the faithful followers of her exile, the sweet compassionate tenderness of her "Addio per sempre addio," touched all the deep feeling of the heart. Exquisite in delicacy, language is not soft enough to describe it. Then in her womanly, agitated entreaty to the stern 'Paulet" to permit her the attendance of one maiden, that even on the scaffold her person might not be profaned by the touch of a "baseborn churl," the modesty of the woman, and the pride of her race, spoke as one in this request.

Powerfully, grandly, delicately, as this worldrenowned character is delineated and brought before us "to the life," as it were, by Ristori, yet we miss a something even in so perfect a portrayal. Adelaide Ristori does not idealize. She gives us "Marie Stuart," around whose name so many iomantic legends'cling, and we miss this. She does not elevate this character, or clothe it with "imagination's fervid glow." She draws it to herself. She rises to no poetical idea. In her gesticulation she is augular. She has not the curved lines of perfect grace. Her peculiar genius makes no appeals to the imagination, but aims at the heart, and with the resistless graces of nature's own unembeilished appeals, carries it captive.

RISTORI AT THE ACADEMY THIS EVENING. Madame Adelaide Ristori, Countess del Grillo, will appear in her greatest role to-night, "Elizabeth, Queen of England." The historical play with the above title was written expressly for Ristori and her dramatic company, by Signor Paolo Giacometti, the distinguished Italian play-

The argument of the play is given by the translator as follows; -

"This play is historical in its main incidents, and the principal characters are distinguished persons of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Plot has not been aimed at by the author; he has presented, however, intensety dramatic scenes. In the first act, 'our Francis Bacon' solicits 'Elizabeth' to witness the representation of ahakespeare's Henry VIII. She declines at first, but on hearing the flatfering words respecting herself at the close of that play, orders its representation. See then attempts to dictate two letters at one time. Marriage is then proposed to her, and she threatens to prorogue Parliament if that subject be further pressed upon her at their solicitation. The third act is devoted to the affisirs of the kingdom, connected with Spain, and to scenes displaying the extent of her love for the 'Earl of Essex;' 'Mary Stuari's' deem forming no small portion of the dramatic elements, by the introduction of 'Maria Lambrun,' who, although the would be assassin of the Queen, is pardoned by her. The act ends with the condemnation of the 'Earl of Essex' to the block. In the fifth act 'Elizabeth' is greatly agritated that the 'Earl of Essex' will not seek pardon by returning to her a ring that she had given to him as a pledge for his safety. At last, 'Lady Howard,' to whom the ring has been confided, comes to the 'Queen,' sta'ing that her husband has taken the ring from her. Mean while the Earl of Essex' is executed. Elizabeth' curses Bacon' for the deed, and acknowledging her love for 'Essex,' is given over to remorse. In the fifth act, 'Elizabeth' is discovered on her death-bed, and all her passions are depicted strongly in the scene. She bequeaths the crown to 'James of Scotland,' but dies in anger at hearing the people shout his name. The scene is very powerful.''

GIFTS FOR THE HOLIDAYS-THE GREAT AUCTION SALE OF CHRISTMAS GOODS, -One of the most beautiful and select exhibitions that have ever been presented to the public is now offered at the Art Gallery of B. Scott, Jr., No. 1020 Chesnut street. These beautiful articles and elegant ornaments have been transferred from the establishment of Bailey & Co., No. 319 Ches nut street, being their surplus stock, to the Art Gallery of Mr. Scott, and are there arranged in grand display in the large store windows and along either side of the gallery.

Inasmuch as the people are in a state of lexity consequent upon the near approach of the ever-memorable Christmas day, to settle their minds as to what is useful, neat, and appropriate for a holiday present, we would lay he following particulars before them

That nothing is more appropriate than that which is both useful and ornamental; that that which has both of these qualities should also be substantial, and its price within reach of an appreciative public; that such articles, in grand array, are to be found at the Art Gallery of Mr. P. Scott, on Chesnut street, which have consigned to him for sale at auction, on Thurs day and Friday mornings, at 10

At this auction sale there will be offered the most elegant and unique gems for Christmas presents, at the most tempting prices. One of the chief objects of this sale is that the public can now have the rare opportunity of obtaining those beautiful ornaments which are so em nently appropriate as holiday gifts; and we feel confident in the assertion that energetic compe tition for these rare articles will be inaugurated and kept up throughout the entire sale. Many of our citizens may not be disposed to make any of these purchases; should that be the case, we would advise them to visit Mr. Scott's gallery, to witness one of the most beautiful

Among this large misecllaneous collection there is an assortment of handsomely plated and valuable silver plated goods, from the establishment of Dixon & Son, from which could be selected most suitable holiday presents. Bronzes of artistic and graceful forms, clocks of all kinds and of the most elaborate workmanship, parlor ornaments, and fine household articles of usefulness, can here be found in variety and style to gratify the most peculiar and please the most fastidious.

In order not to be perplexed in making your round of purchases, we would advise an imms-diate visit to this rare assortment, from which all can select and store by that which they may deem most suitable for a holiday gift.

LADIES' FAIR .- A Fair, one that will fully equal, if not surpass, any hitherto held of us kind, is to be inaugurated next week in the large new Presbyterian Church, Franklin street, above Columbia avenue, That it will be a perfect success—that therein will be contained Christmas presents in great variety-that therein will be stocked for liberal sale all mauner of delicious and substantial refreshments at mos reasonable rates-that everything will be conducted in the most pleasant and orderly man-ner, is fully assured by the fact that the ladies of the church have made all necessary prepara-tions, and have the whole matter in charge. The object is a noble one, that of aiding the completion of the new church edifice. Entrance fee will be small-all prices the most liberat-thassociation, the most pleasant. Let the public bear its speedy coming in mind, and at its inauguration, and through its continuance, often visit and purchase. Further particular-will be given soon in relation to all matters thereto appertaining. DIED FROM HER INJURIES .- Mrs. Ann McQuillan, who, as our readers will recollect was run over some time ago on the passenger railroad, at Twenty-fourth and Callowhill streets, and was removed to the St. Joseph. Hospital, died this morning from the injuriethen received. The Coroner will hold at

FALL AND WINTER OVERCOATS IN GREAT VARIETY.

AN OUTRAGEOUS ASSAULT .- A man named Richard White, whilst laboring under a of drunkenness, went to a place at No. 916 Locust street, where he had been living with a woman named Florence for some time past. For her, and made alviolent assault upon her, and beat her in a savage manner. After expending a large portion of his wrath upon her devoted head, he turned the rest of it towards the furniture, and chairs, tables, bed, and crockery, etc., were soon in a thoroughly mixed-up state. After looking at the ruin he had made, he walked out and went to the house of another woman up town, and gave her a beating, Mrs. Florence got out a warrant, and had him arrested and taken before Alderman Massey. After bearing the facts of the case, the Alderman held the woman fighter in $1700 bail to answer.

THE WEATHER, -A ray of sunshing to warm the body and to cheer the heart after yes terday's chill, gladdens us to-day, notwithstanding the cool, wintry air. Nothing so pleasant, nothing so comforting, nothing so cheering, when the earth is cold and frozen, when the walks crackle with frost or the ground lies covered with snow, as a ray of warm sunshine. such as greets us to-day. The freezing night air has so improved upon the condition of the little puddles and ponds, that small youngsters are already rapidly regaining the ability to stand upright on steel. A few fluttering flakes of snow, coupled with the reports from northern towns, forces upon us the idea that soon it will come down in large quantities, but which holds off quite well. Nevertheless, we can anticipate it with propriety.

A DESPERATE FELLOW .- Frank Malone, young rough of nineteen winters, was arrested t Tenth and Carpenter streets, on a charge of sault and battery upon Officer Ahern, of First District. It appears that a party of roughs, aboring under an influx of whisky, were acting in a disorderly manner at Eleventh and Milton streets last evening. Officer Ahern endeavored to ariest Malone, who was the most violent of the party, when he resisted. The whole gang then set upon the officer, and several others came to his assistance, and managed to bring off their prisoner. During the melee Officer Ahern had his clothes torn, and was kicked and beaten pretty roughly. Malone had a hearing before Alderman Lutz, who held him in $800

A NEW INSTITUTION - THE "UNION GROCERY COMPANY."—An institution has been established under the above name, which professes to sell all manner of groceries, meats, produce of the best quality, at cost to sharchold-ersand at wholesale rates to the public. An ample capital enables this company to purchase their stock in large quantities and on most reasonable terms. The capital amounts to $100,000, the number of shares 10,000, at a par value of $10 cach. The benefits which will accrue to both the public and shareholders will necessarily be great, for they will be saved the multi-plication of taxes which a transferring of proluce through the hands of wholesalers, retailers, and others will cause. By importation much will be saved from middlemen which would otherwise be lost. We wish the company success.

BLACK AMAZONS IN TROUBLE,-Three black female warriors, giving the names of Bella Prince, Sarah Gibbs, and Annie Brown, were airested last evening whilst upon the war path. The three Amazonian warriors had got into trouble with another female, and vowed vengeance against her, Sarah Gibbs, it is said, procured a razor, and the whole three started out to find their prey. An excited crowd followed them, as with gleaming eyes and foul oaths they went along on their savage errand. The police soon got wind of what was going on, and went after them. Bella Prince and Sarah Gibbs were arrested in a crib No. 632 Bay street, and Annie Brown at Sixth and St. Mary street. They were taken before Alderman Butler, who heard the facts of the case, and then held the turee in $500 bail each to answer.

FAST DRIVING .- Lewis Ross and Isaiah Draper, two young men who had started out on a sporting time with a horse and carriage, got into a slight difficulty last evening. They had, it is said, a considerable load on each of them, and did not mind the old rule to hold their horses. The consequence was, as they came driving past Eighth and Race streets at a furious pace, they were suddenly brought up with a round turn, and were escorted at a much slower pace to the office of Alderman Jones. They were, after a hearing, held in $300 each to keep the peace, and fined for a breach of ordi

MAKING A SWEEP .- James Brown, who has evidently got very sound ideas upon the subject of housekeeping, took forcible possession of some brooms which were hanging out in front of a store at Penn and South streets, in a very inviting manner. Now James' weakness is a total inability to resist temptation, and in this instance it got him into a fix. He was observed to take the brooms, and was arrested therefor. When he was taken before Alderman Beitler he could not convince that gentleman that he got rightful possession of the sweepers. and was held in $500 bail to answer the charge of larceny.

LECTURE BEFORE THE ROXBOROUGH LYCEUM.—At the regular session of the Roxborough Lyceum, last evening, an interesting address was delivered by T. Dwight Thacher. Esq., of this city, detailing reminiscences of ten years' life upon the border. Mr. Thacher was a resident of Kan-as during her early struggles and his recital of incidents connected with the history of affairs there, including reminiscence of John Brown, the late Senator James H. Lane. Governor Robert J. Walker, Colonel James Montgomery, and others, was listened to with great interest.

AN EMBEZZLEMENT CASE.—A gentleman residing in Pottstown, Schuylkill county, had of that place, by which the latter cheated him as he alleges, out of $150. He got out a warant against John at Alderman Massey's office The officer having the warrant got on his track. and, hearing that he was going back to Potts ville, laid in wait for him at the Reading depot, and caught him just as he was stepping into the cars. He was taken before Alderman Massey, and was held in $800 bail to answer at Court.

VETERINARY COLLEGE, - The Pennsyl vania College of Veterinary Surgeons held their egular quarterly meeting at the room of the Agricultural Society on yesterday. Dr. Jen-nings in the chair. The meeting was one of the nings in the chair. The meeting was one of largest ever held in this city. George Sowler, V. S., of Cincinnati, and Tiller C. Savlor, V. S., of Mercy county, N. J., were nominated as candidates for membership. The subects of cataract and putrid fever were discussed at some length, and anasarca was announced as the subject to be discussed at the next meeting.

A CORRECTION. - In our report of the dis course delivered at Sixth and Girard avense on Sunday evening last, we inadvertantly stated that it was delivered by the Rev. H. S. Hoffman, paster of the Moravian congregation, which worship in the Hall in the morning only during er ction of their new church, at Franklin and Thompson streets. In the evening the Hall s used by a religious body whose peculiar vie vs have nothing in common with those of Mr. Hoffman and his church.

DISTURBING A CONGREGATION.—There is Iways a class of young ruffians around the city who, having no respect for law or religion, take delight in annoying peaceable citizens who may assemble together for the purpose of public worship. Last night, Henry Springer, with several of his companions, undertook to annoy a small congregation that worship in a chapel at Ninth and Girard avenue. An officer who was in the neighborhood arrested him, and escorted him to Alderman Fitch's office. When making the arrest, the officer was assaulted and resisted by the prisoner. He had a hearing before the Alderman, and was held in $800 bail to answer a charge of assault and battery. He was also reprimanded severely for his part in disturbing the congregation.

Important from Mexico.

New Obleans, December 12. — The New Orleans papers contain to-day additional Mexican news furnished by Colonel John G. Fisher. General Castelnau arrived at Vera Cruz just as General Donaly, with his troops (in the latter part of October), was about embarking.

The troops immediately returned to the City of Mexico and left for Oaxaca on the 26th of November, recapturing that place from Diaz, who had taken from the Austrian troops about 3500 men in brigade on the march to Oaxaca. Maximilian bas about 2000 Belgians, 15,000
Austrians, 30,000 Mexican Imperialists, and 25,000 French troops, armed, clothed, fed, and paid (including the officers) fifteen days in advance.
