Funeral Honors to Dead Rebels.
GALVESTON, January 25.—Great excitement has been occasioned by the interference of General Griffin in the obsequies of General A. S. Johnston. The stores are closed and draped in mourning. General Griffin has agreed to permit the body to be taken to the Episcopal Church, and the burial service to be performed there. This has been the case in the following respects:—That there shall be no music by bands, ringing or tolling of bells, and no public demonstrations of any organized associations, should the body be conveyed to the church in this city, and from thence to the point of its destination. All persons appearing in the procession shall be invited, and appear as members of the family of the deceased or their friends. These conditions were refused, and the body remains in the city. It was suspended during the day in honor of the deceased.

—We cannot but think that the conduct of General Griffin is founded in bad policy. General A. S. Johnston was, beyond all doubt, the purest of any of the Rebel leaders. He stands pre-eminent for his martial ability, and rivals "Stonewall" Jackson for religious enthusiasm in a cause which he honestly believed to be right. When, therefore, it is desired to reinstate his remains, we cannot see why the bells were not allowed to toll, and the people to follow the funeral cortege, whether they were friends or strangers. If it is understood that military honors be meted out only to officers of the United States army, General Griffin may be right in forbidding a salute at the grave, but we think that the interference in this case was arbitrary. Even if the conduct of General Johnston during life was such as to richly merit the refusal of funeral honors, yet it is certainly not sound policy to treat his remains with disrespect. If there is one thing about which a people are tenacious, it is the memory of their dead public servants. The reigning Bourbon did much to strengthen his position on the throne of France when he allowed the body of the great Napoleon to be reintegrated in the magnificent mausoleum in Paris. A like sense of policy, if not propriety, should lead us to allow the honors of regard to be paid by the Southern people to the dead Southern Generals.

So far as we are concerned, we would join in paying every respect to the dead; the only ones we would hold accountable are the living. We would not have interment refused to any of them. We would let the honor to their remains be so delightful to the vanity of the survivors as to induce them to follow their predecessors as speedily as possible. If all the Southern Rebel leaders were to-day where Sidney Johnston is, the Union would not be now distracted by their bitter animosity. We would so act as to deprive these men of every opportunity of pointing to our course as though it were tyrannical. But while dealing leniently with the masses and the dead leaders, we would so use the rod with the living rulers as to crush out and trample down forever the slightest hope of a successful treason.

Aid for the Cretons.
To-night, in New York, a monster mass meeting will be held to raise funds to aid the Cretons in their gallant struggle for the privileges of Christianity and for freedom from the Turks. The gentlemen who act as Vice-Presidents comprise all of the richest and most honorable of the merchants of the metropolis. What we need is just such a meeting in our city. The cause of fellow-Christians battling for civil and religious liberty has never in the past failed to awaken a responsive echo in the American heart. Hungary, Poland, Greece, Ireland, and all who sought to be free in the past, have received our aid; and shall Crete, with her double appeal to us as freemen and as Christians, be refused? We hope that some of our merchants will take the cause of this struggling people under their charge.

Southern Wants.—The following extract from a letter from a Northern clergyman in the South, which we find in the New York Tribune, gives a touching picture of destitution:—
"But the perishing and the half-naked poor—where are they? I can tell you where they live. In tents scattered along the edge of the railroads, or in the outskirts of the town; in huts which may be called 'iron-catch' though affording poor protection against the bombardment of want—cellars composed of a half-dozed trail scantlings, picked up in some lucky hour, and lined around and on the top with nothing in the world but old tinined plates, once the roofing of some building that perished in the flames of their homes; their eyes, in shades in hovel part canvas, part old blanket, part old strips of board. Very often there is nothing but an earth floor. Do these people actually starve? Look at the sunken features; the livid hue of their faces; their eyes, in which a dull glare exhibits itself; their feet, scanty, perishing garments; their feet, with nothing on, as they tramp along the frozen ground (for winter is not all summer here), except the cast-away shoes which you throw out on some refuse-heap the other day. There are families here which have not the slightest idea of-day where the corn-cake, stirred up with water and baked in the ashes, for to-morrow will come from, unless the slender possibility of a little job of work is realized, or unless the supply depot here has been enabled, through the generosity of citizens, or of Kentuckians, or perhaps of New Yorkers, to furnish them with a ration."

these views, a meeting was held last night at the Cooper Institute for the express purpose of raising funds for the relief of the starving South. It was held by the radicals, or was addressed by radicals—Horace Greeley and H. W. Beecher being the principal speakers—and it was the radicals giving bread to the Rebels, giving it willingly and without ostentation. We hear much prating from the Democratic press about charity, but it is reserved for the so-called enemies of the South to show by deeds their true feeling, while the conservatives try to prove them by words. We ask the people of the South whether their professions or practices speak loudest?

CONNECTICUT.—When Governor Joseph R. Hawley was on Thursday unanimously re-nominated by the Republicans for Governor of Connecticut, Senator Ferry, from the Committee on Resolutions, submitted a series, of which the following is the principal one referring to national subjects:—
"Resolved, That the pending amendment to the Federal Constitution, in the generous magnanimity of the terms which is proposed to the late insurgents, deserves, and it is respectfully received, their grateful recognition; that its rejection by them proceeds from a still prevailing spirit of rebellion, and imposes upon the national authority the duty of establishing the Union upon none other than just and equitable conditions; that, in so doing, loyalty to the republic should be recognized as the first of political virtues, and disloyalty as the worst of political crimes; and that the protection of all citizens throughout the republic in the exercise of all the rights and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution, should be invariably secured."

In the enthusiasm and unanimity exhibited, we read a precursor of a decisive and victorious victory in the coming spring.

POLITICAL.—Governor J. D. Cox, of Ohio, has declined re-election.
Hon. John H. Hubbard, of Connecticut, also retires from the House. Lieutenant-Governor Averill and P. T. Barnum are the principal competitors for his seat.

In New Hampshire the Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor have agreed to stump the State together. General Harriman is the latter and Mr. Sinclair the former.

The Tribune presents the confirmation of Edgar Cowan, as Minister to Austria, in a new light, as follows:—
"Eleven of the Pennsylvania Delegation to Congress have signed a protest against the confirmation of Mr. Cowan as Minister to Austria. They do this in the belief that he is unfit for the position, but they do not seem to remember that Mr. Cowan's statesmanship is a luxury too expensive for home consumption. Before it lends to the protest of the Pennsylvanians, the Senate Committee might consider whether it would not be cheap to pay Mr. Cowan $7500 (gold) per annum to go out and stay out of the country."

STEINWAY & SONS'
Grand Square and Upright Piano Fortes.
STEINWAY & SONS' direct special attention to their newly invented "Bright" Piano, which is the only Piano in this country that consists in providing the instrument (in addition to the iron frame in rear of the soundboard) with an iron brace frame in the rear of it both frames being cast in one piece, thereby insuring a solidity of construction and capacity of tone never before attained in that class of instrument.
The soundboard is supported between the two frames by an apparatus (called "Bright" Piano) which is the most perfect and delicate of sound-producing capacity obtainable, and perfectly adapted to the present day. The great volume and exquisite quality of tone, as well as elasticity and promptness of action, of these Bright Piano's have excited the unqualified admiration of the musical profession and all who have heard them.
