THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1867.

An Old Conflict on a New Field. WE must never lorget that our present political difficulties are a part and parcel of the late Rebellion. During that great struggle a portion of the States withdrew their representatives from Congress, refused to participate further in the Government of the Union, defled their constitutional obligations, changed the form of their local State governments, so that they should be independent of the Union, entered into a Confederacy, and made a long and desperate war against the United States, with the avowed purpose of overthrowing its Government, and building upon its ruins a slave empire, whose cornerstone should be the despolic doctrine of human inequality. That war cost the nation a loss of life and an expenditure of money unequalled in any struggle of modern times. We came out of it burdened with a national debt of almost appalling magnitude, and which must necessarily impose upon us and our children after us a fearful load of taxation. It is in the light of these facts that we must look at the political problems which press upon us for solution. True statesmanship will not attempt to solve them by verbal quibbles and technical ties. They must be contemplated in that broad spirit of regard tor the highest welfare of the nation, which carried us so successfully through the struggle of arms.

The least possible demand that the nation can make, before it admits these late rebellious and warring communities to a participation in the power of the Government, is that we shall be reasonably secured against a repetition of the terrible struggle through which we have just gone. The law of selfpreservation demands this. We know that these communities are still hostile to the nation; that their affections do not cluster around the flag of the republic; that they do not acknowledge the rightfulness of our triumph over them, but that they have simply yielded to overpowering physical force. Their demand now is to be restored to that political power which they discarded when they went into the Rebellion. This insures them admission to a share in the control of the purse and the sword of the nation. It is, in short, putting the nation's resources in the hands of the nation's enemies. To do this would be mere infatuation. Indeed, the Southern demand goes further than mere restoration to the power they abandoned when they took up arms against the nation. They demand, first, the privilege of disfranchising a large portion of the citizens of the United States inhabiting with them the districts comprising the old Rebel States, and that portion those who were conspicuous for their devotion to the loyal cause. They demand a reconstruction based not upon republican, but upon aristocratic principles. They claim to evade, as far as possible, a conformation to the social changes occasioned by the war. They would return to power with State organizations denying the fundamental principles of a republican form of government.

The whole reconstruction problem is, therefore, a mere prolongation of the great struggle which has passed from the field of physical strife to that of political contention. The Rebels are striving to save for aristocracy all that they can from the debris of their overthrown Confederacy. Philosophically, they are but fighting the battle over again in a new field and with new weapons.

On the other side, the masses of the people, imbued with a spirit of genuine republicanism, are carrying forward the great cause of popular rights to a certain victory. The President, by his insane policy, may delay the consummation, but he cannot prevent it. All the mighty forces of society are working in one direction, and in the end they will sweep all obstacles out of the way.

Gold and Silver Mining Statistics.

THE report of Mr. J. Ross Browne, who was appointed under act of Congress Special Commissioner of the Treasury Department for the collection of statistical information concerning the gold and silver mines of the Western States and Territories, shows the total products of the mines of gold and silver in our country during the past year to have been one hundred and six millions of dollars. California still takes the lead, her product being estimated at twenty-five millions of dollars; Montana comes next, with a yield of eighteen millions; Idaho and Colorado are each put down at seventeen millions; Nevada at sixteen millions; Oregon at eight millions; and all other places at five millions. This product is more than four times as great as was the annual product of all the mines in the world less than thirty years ago.

To those who are acquainted with the facts in regard to the resources and development of the mines of our precious metals, it is evident that gold and silver mining is destined, at no distant day, to become one of the most important branches of our national industry. Indeed, it has already attained to that position. The value of the production of ron, coal, copper, lead, and salt in the whole country for the year 1860, as given by the census returns, was less than one hundred millions of dollars. The total value of cotton goods manufactured that year was only one hundred and fifteen millions of dollars. But gold and silver mining is sill in its infancy. Montana, whose annual product stands second on the list, is less than five years old as an organized territory. Its quartz lodes, which are its chief source of wealth, are as yet bardly touched. So with California; it is only within a very few years that quartz mining has there been extensively entered upon, and the supply is iterally inexhaustible. We know that silver mines have been worked in Mexico, Peru, and Europe for hundreds of years, without the ore giving out. Nevada has one hundred and seventy-nine silver mines now in operation, with room for hun-

There seems no reason to doubt that the mines of gold and silver in our country are practically inexhaustble. Nor is the business of gold and silver mining, when legitimately followed, of a peculiarly hazardous character. The productive quality of a quartz lode may easily be tested before extensive improvements are made. The product itself never lacks a market, can never be in excess of the demand, and is easily and cheaply transported. The only necessary hazard is in regard to honest and prudent management-a risk which has to be assumed in all branches ot business.

Mr. Browne's report contains many facts of interest bearing upon the mineral resources of the West, and is a valuable contribution to the statistical history of the country.

Kentucky Avenged.

WE tender to the United States Senate our sincerest sympathy because of the brief telegraphic despatch from Louisville. We can imagine the blank despair, the unutterable resignation, which came over that body when it began to be whispered that "Garrett Davis is re-elected for six years." We almost believe that Nemesis is now satisfied. The desolated plantations of Kentucky, rulned by Yankee vandalism, are now avenged; the loss of slaves is compensated for; the dead Rebel portion of the population have now had their deaths avenged by the living Rebels; whatever suffering has been inflicted on Kentucky by the North, has now been repaid to the North by Kentucky. At the instigation of the radical Senate, we have given her abolition, raination, and in many cases depopulation and she, without heaping coals of fire on their heads, returns them Garrett Davis. We suppose many of our readers have listened to the oratorical powers of the newly elected Senator. We do not give him greater praise than he deserves when we say that he can talk longer and say less than any man now living. He speaks slowly, so slowly that the hearer frequently believes that he has forgotten what to say, and while uttering oracular sentences in the most deliberate manner, imparts less ideas than any public man. As a general rule, he cannot condense his remarks into less than four hours, and on two occasions during each session he owes it to his constituents to get off a two days' oration, which covers some forty-eight pages of printed pamphlet. As there is now no hour rule and no previous question in the Senate, the infliction must be borne. And now, just when it was fondly hoped the incubus would be removed, when every candidate's chances looked brighter than his, the tide is turned by vengeance in his favor, and for six mortal years must his intolerable long speeches be endured.

Considering that Mr. Davis possesses none of the qualifications of an orator or statesman, he has been for many years occupying an ill-apportioned share of popular attention. He was born in 1801. After serving in the Legislature for several years, he was elected to Congress in 1839, where he remained until 1849. From that time until 1861, when he was chosen Senator be devoted himself to his profession of law, and also spent considerable time in ex erimental agriculture. At the outbreak of the war he was sent to the Senate, where his voice has never been raised on any but the side which lent a tacit sympathy to treason. He was a disciple of Clay while the latter lived, but on his death Davis forsook the doctrines of his patron. We suppose that for six years more we will find his votes all in opposition to liberal and enlightened progress.

Court of Quarter Sessions—Judge Peirce.—
Prison cases are still before this Court.

Infili pina Weskel was charged with assault and batte y upon Margaret Mateu. The allegation of the proscentrix was that; defendant in sweeping the pavement brushed some dirt upon her. The detendant said that while she was sweeping the pavement brushed some dirt upon her. The detendant said that while she was sweeping the pavement, the proscentrix ran against the broom. The liny reacted a verdict of not guilty, and placed the costs spon the prosecutrix.

This is but one of a legion of cases, so very trivial and childish in their patter, that the time of the Court faces upon cearing and disposing of them is a muly time lost. Frequently grand juries, in making their presentments to the Bourt, speak of the great number of just such cases returned by aldermen, and complained that persons should be encouraged in annoying each other, with their pitiful domestic prosecution, by so much importance being placed on procedulor, by so much importance being placed on comp sints of this kind made before the aldermen. James Carr was convicted of a charge of the larceny of woollen stockings, belonging to James Campbell. He was caught in New street with some of the stockings.

Cest of a Findeo Weiding.—At the sitting of the Insolvent Debtors' Court in Bombay, re-cently, Pandoorung Trimouck, a sepoy, applied tor his discharge. His income appeared to be 900 rupees a year only, and he spent nearly two years' carnings on the wedding ceremony of his daughter. The insolvent debtor said his daughter become of a marriageable age, that he found it very difficult to find a husband for her, and, therefore, he had to spend a large sum of money on the ceremony; out of the money had to present the husband with clothes and

No Interference with Creek Superstitions.—The Calcutta correspondent of the London Times says the Government of India has declined to interiers with the practice of taking Hindoos to the Gauges, immersing them, and choking them with the hely mud. Relying on the representa-John Lawrence has decided to leave the matter to Hindoo opinion. The Beneat Government, on the other hand, urge that in all cases of taking the sick to the Ganges notice should first be given at the nearest police office.

Va'ue of Land in Lordon -The Pail Mail Gazette says that some idea of the value of land in the heart of London may be gathered from an incidental statement made by Mr. P. N. Laurie, Chairman of the Union Bank. The city corporation, having determined to widen Man-sion House street from the bottom of the Poulhave taken posse sion of the frontage of buildings which the Union Bank was about to erect at that spot.
