called health preservers.

"After its introduction into the United States, the President of the New York Academy of Medicine, Dr. James Anderson, appointed a Committee to report on this celebrated beverage, which is not only used in enormous quantities in Europe, but has also received the indorse-ment of many European scientific bodies. Mr. Hoff received from the Chairman of the Committee an invitation to assist at a meeting, and had the honor to give the members of the Academy full information as to the compound and mode of preparation. The Committee, the members of which had convinced themselves in their private practice of the efficacy of this remembers. remedy, received with approbation Mr. Hoff's explanations, particularly as to its virtues as a nutriment, appetizer and tonic, and as owing to its containing only a slight tinge of alcohol, is equally desirable for the sick and healthy. LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE WILLIAMS HOMICIDE-SECOND DAY, COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER-Judges Luclow and Pierce.—William B. Mann, Esq., District Attorney: T. Bradford Dwight, Assistant District Attorney.—The number of persons assembled in the court-house this morning was equal to, if not greater than, the number present yesterday. From the special ventre returned at 10 o'clock this morning the five infors to be selected were obtained, and the trial commenced. The following are the lary:—

Luclus N. Chwille, George W. Unruh. Augustus Elmore, E. McDonnell, John G. Broctor, John W. Dabree, Joseph L. Kinkerton, William Hall, Martin Jush, Samuel Roberts, William F. Grifflits, and E. H. Butler.

Butler.

They were sworn by the Clerk to render a true verdict according to the evidence.

The but of indictment was then read to Williams.

Mr. Worrell made a motion to the Court to exclude all the witnesses, on both sides, from the court-room, except while testifying.

The District Atterney said he presumed there must be a reason for it. There is no reason to apprehend a conspiracy existing between the witnesses.

Judge Ludlow—We consider that this matter rests entirely in the discretion of the Court.

It is not a matter of right, but nevertheless, as this is a trial which involves the life of the prisoner, we are disposed to grant every privilege possible which tends to a thorough, careful, and searching investination of the case and the development of the truth. Through these reasons, we are of the opinion that this motion ought to be granted—the motion to apply to all the witnesses in the case. The Court will reserve the right hereafter, if any witness should come into the court-room, to determine whether he shall be excluded or not, according to the circumstances and further desire it to be distinctly understood that any witness who comes into this court-room intentionally witness.

without the permission of the Court will be punished for contempt.

District Attorney Mann then stated the facts of the case to the jury. He said the case was a very will not ene, and the man who did she deed had a heart fall of malice inconceivable. There should be no sympathy for a man that would enter a house and strike down a woman, and then, bend over her and deliberately kink her throat. Laying aside all sympathy and him for and against the prisoner, I ask you to decide the case by your love of justice, by your reverence for the truth; and with these aids to exercise your right and reason, I am confident that you will come to the conclusion that this prisoner committed the murder of which he is charged. In an experience of twenty years, no one who committed such a deed has escaped. Although there was no eye to look upon this scene of murder, although there is no tongue now that can tell the details, except one that is mute and motionies—whelly so, for that tongue has said too much already consistent with the safety of its owner—I am prepared, with incts and circumstances, to demonstrate to you, beyond all earthly doub, when, where, and by whom this murder was committed.

Mr. Mann then described the position of the body as wisely so, for that tongue has said too much already consistent with the saidty of its owner—I am prepared, with mets and circumstances, to demonstrate to you, beyond all earthy double, when, where, and by whom this murder was committed.

Air, Mann then described the position of the body as found by a reighbor, and said that the mark of the right hand was upon her. He argued that the prisoner had threw Mirs. Anther down was the being in and, and then took the razor from a drawer near by and cut her throat. There was a small sum of money in the house, and the body of this woman was found near the door leadur up stairs where it was, as if she had gone there to prevent somebody from going up then to get the money. This was what was conserved by those who first entered the house. He then gave a description of the habits of Mirs, Milter in her daily avocations, and said he could prove that the intriduced was frought there and carried away. The woonds were not inflicted with a small poker, as was said at the lime, but by the same bludgeon. There were two them the flavor, one practs in the dia ver, one provides the stail to the receive the more received in the stail to remember the surfect is gone from the house. He did not get the punder. The streams of the woman, we restred, had aroused the neighbors, and in refer to seal her importance of the money, he cut her throat. We attempted to get the money, he cut her throat. We come now to the remaining part of the proposition. I started out to show you by whom it was uone. The started out to show you by whom it was uone. Mr. Conness (Cal.) called up a resolution directing the payment to Donahue, Ryan & Secor of $173,700, to make good their losses on the contract for building the iron-clad Camanche. Passed.

Mr. Morton (Ind.) moved that the Senate take up the resolutions of Mr. Summer, which were yesterday laid on the table. He said he voted against laying the resolutions on the table because he was unwilling to see them disposed of in this way. He dissented entirely from the views expressed by certain gentlement, that the actor the 2d of March was a pledge. It could not be regarded in the light of a contract, as that takes two parties, one to propose and the other to accept. Consequently it is entirely competent for Congress to alter amend, or repeal that bill without distinnor or breach of faith. There was much in the resolutions which he (Mr. Morton) could not approve most heartily of what they said about education, providing for the education of the people of the Rebel States. Fie contended that there could be no republican form of government in the South unless whites and blacks allke were admitted to the reselfs of the common of government in the South unless whites and blacks He contended that there could be no republican form of government in the South unless whites and blacks alike were admitted to the benefits of the common schools. Regarding the status of the Rebel States, Mr. Mor. Regarding the status of the Rebel States, Mr. Morton said he had always opposed the theory of Mr. Summer that they were reduced to a territorial condition. He had always held that Congress had full purisdiction over them as States since their acts of rebellion, and under this power could do what it was now proposing to do, reduce them to Territories.

Mr. Howe thanked Mr. Morton for bringing the resolutions again before the Senate. He (Mr. Howe) voted yesterday against laying on the table, and found himself compelied to do so without giving his reasons. On motion of Mr. Trumbull, the Supplementary Reconstruction bill was referred to the Committee on Indiciary. The Senate went into executive session, and soon after adjourned.

House of Representatives.

Mr. Woodbridge (Vt.) rising to a personal explanation, referred to what had taken place yes variaty on his objecting to the resolution offered by Mr. Washburne (Wis.) directing the suspension of the execution of the act of last session for the relief of the heirs of John E. Bouligny. When he stated that the allegations in the preamble was not true, he did not wisn to to be ciscourteous to any gentleman, and as it might be inferred from the language used that he interved to insinuate that the resolution was designedly false, he assured the House, and the gentleman from Wisconsin, that he had no such intention, and he corduly begged the gentleman's pardon for saying anything that might be so construed.

Mr. Washburne (Wis.) did not suppose that it was the intention of the gentleman from Vermont to attribute to him the introduction of a resolution contraining falsehoods, although he confessed that the language used seemed to him at the time most discourtsous. He availed himself of the opportunity to show up the fraudulent nature of the claim, which was part of the Mississippi scients, and derived from a grant made by the King of France to John Law, of the South Sea bubble notorier; in Fig. He denounced the claim as uterily groundless and fraudulent.

Mr. Paine (Wis.) suggested that the resolution proposed yesterday by Mr. Washburne be now offered.

Mr. Woodbridge objected and proceeded to reply to the allegations of fraud made by Mr. Washburne serion offered that he had either approved it or examined it, it had not been prought to his attention till the last week of the last session, and neither Mr. Baker nor himself would undertake then to examine the voluminous papers on the matter. His own impression was deededly against the claim.

Mr. Baker (Ill.), another member of the Committee on Private Land Claims, denied shat he had concurred with a surgestion made by Mr. Haves that the case ought to be reopened, and if there was fraud in it, that fraud could be discovered and defeated.
