ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Patron Saint of Ireland.

Who He Was and What He Was-How He Has Figured in History and Story, Etc.

It will be well for every man who is here after born to be great to have the time, place, and circumstances of his birth carefully noted down by some one who happens to be present on that important occasion. Such a precaution will save a vast amount of speculation and dispute, when the great man has been slumbering in his grave for centuries. And if such a precaution had been taken in the fourth century, we should now be able to state with precision the nativity of Patrick, Apostle and Patron Saint of Ireland. As it is, we are forced to content ourselves with saying that he entered upon his earthly career about the year A. D. 372, while it is quite impossible to determine whether England, Scotland, Wales, or France has the best claim to be considered the country of his birth. The high-sounding name of Patrick, however, is considered as proving beyond all doubt or cavil that he was of respectable, and even of aristocratic parentage. Be that as it may, when but sixteen years of age he was stolen away by a band of pirates, by whom he was sold into slavery in Ireland. For seven years thereafter his master compelled him to follow the humble occupation of a swineherd on Mount Sleamish. in county Antrim. His years of bondage were not altogether wasted, however, for during that period he was able to acquaint himself intimately with the language, manners, and customs of the heathens who then inhabited the Emerald Isle.

He contrived in the end to escape from captivity, and after encountering innumerable perils, both by land and sea, to make way to the continent, where he entered the Church, and was successively ordained deacon, priest and bishop. Then, armed with the authority of Pope Celestine, he returned to the scenes of his bondage, and commenced to preach the Gospel to the unregenerate Irish. At the close of the fourth century, this task was somewhat more difficult than it is at present. Bishop Patrick was obstructed in his Christianizing labors not only by the inborn obstinacy of the people to whom he preached, but by the formidable opposition of the priests of the old Druidical superstition. These Druids, being ministers of a false faith, necessarily dealt in magic, mystery, and miracles of the most astounding character; and they directed their infernal machinations against the good bishop with so much zeal and success that he was forced to resort to the same manner of warfare. Bishop Patrick therefore cursed the fertile lands of his antagonists, and they be came barren; he cursed their teeming rivers and the fish deserted them; he cursed the pots in which they concected their witching broth, and after that the fires of the Inferno were not hot enough to make them boil; and at last, having exhaused both patience and charity, he cursed the very Druids themselves, when the earth vawned and they were swallowed up

Having once gotten in the way of performing miracles, Bishop Patrick found himself offtimes tempted to repeat them. Thus, happening with his followers one cold morning to be in a mountainous locality, without a fire wiherewith to warm his limbs and cook his breakfast, the good bishop,

"In order to assuage the weather, Collected bits of ice together, Then gently breathed upon the pyre When every fragment blazed on fire.

The bishop's followers thereupon thawed themselves and proceeded to cook their breakfast, marveling much.

But the greatest achievement of Bishop Patrick in the miraculous way was his famous erusade against the snakes and other venomous reptiles which at that time infested the Emerald Isle. The good bishop procured a drum, upon which he thumped away with such hearty zeal, that reptiles of all kinds and sizes rushed frantically into the sea. But before he had entirely driven out these pests, by an unfortunate stroke a hole was made in the instrument, and his task would have been incomplete, had not an angel opportunely ap-peared and mended it. The drum, patch and all, was long preserved and exhibited, as a holy relic of the Deliverer of Ireland from the pes tilence of snakes. While engaged in this laudable undertaking, it is said that Bishop Patrick chained a monstrous serpent in the Lough Dilveen, one of the seven lakes of the Gaultie Mountains, bidding him there remain till Monday. According to the popular belief of the neighborhood, the serpent still continues in bondage at the bottom of the lake, but every Monday without fail he lifts up his voice and says-"Tis a long Monday, Patrick." Some years ago, a person who was endowed with more curiosity than good sense, turned half a dozen harmless snakes loose in the very neigh borhood of one of the bishop's burial-places. A widespread alarm was the result, some arguing that the unwelcome serpents portended the certain approach of the millennium, while others were equally certain that the inhabitants were about to be decimated by the cholera morbus; but before either catastrophe happened the snakes were remorselessly de-

Bishop Patrick continued his labors for the evangelization of Ireland for a long time and with great success; and, finally, according to the accepted account, he was called to a better world while sojourning at Saul, on the 17th of March, A. D. 493, being then in the one hundred and twenty-first year of his age. The place of his burial, like that of many other wonderful men, is involved in quite as much obscurity as that of his birth, more than one locality laying claim to the high distinction. The weight of the authorities, however, is in favor of the supposition that he reposes in Downpatrick, and that side by side with his remains are those of Saint Bridget and Saint Columb. For many years past an humble family residing in the neighborhood of Belfast have had in their possession a silver shrine, curiously embossed and evidently of great antiquity, in which is enclosed the jaw-bone of the Bishop. Not many years ago there were five teeth attached to it, but three of them were removed and given to members of the family who were about emigrating to this country, while a fourth was deposited under the altar of the Chapel of Derriaghy, on the occasion of its rebuilding not long since. The fifth tooth still remains attached to the jaw-bone. This relic is supposed to possess the power of relieving certain kinds of sickness, of counteracting the wicked conjurings of witches, and averting the influence of the evil eye. It was, likewise, formerly called into requisition when a person accused of a crime wished to establish his innocence, the people believing that a de-claration to that effect, when falsely made by one who had placed his right hand upon the relic, would render him liable to the most frightful torture, as a combined punishment for his guilt and sacrilege.

To-morrow being the 17th of March, it will be observed by our fellow-citizens of Irish birth and descent in a manner becoming the anniversary of the death of Ireland's Patron Saint. Pontifical High Mass will be sung by the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, at St. Patrick's Church, at Twentieth and Locust streets, the services commencing at half-past 10 o'clock; after which, the Very Rev. James O'Connor, Rector of St. Charles' Seminary, will deliver the Panegyric of the Saint. As the anniversary this ear falls on Sunday, the secular observance of it will not take place until the day following. There has long been current a pretended be lief that such a thing as a clear day on the 17th of March was a wonder not to be thought of. Whether the demoralization of the elements which is then confidently anticipated, is owing to the fact that the ghost of the good bishop who departed this life so many years ago is on that day in the habit of revisiting this mundane sphere, or whether it is caused by the infernal rejoicings of the Druids, snakes, and toads which he so remorselessly exoreised while in the flesh, we are not at present informed. Certain it is, however, that to-morrow bids fair to be anything but fair, from the present indications of the weather. We cannot conscientiously wish it otherwise; for we have no passion for anomalies, and the shining of the sun on St. Patrick's Day is as much of an anomaly as would be the squirming of a serpent on one of the tombs of Ire-

CITY OF PHILADELPHIA STATE OF PENNA., Have secured the largest and most valuable pened Mines in Montana, being the original hiscovery claims. They have three shalts down 10 feet on the ALTA, GRIZZLY, and HOME FICKET LODES, and many tons of the Gold re have been tested by Arastra Mills, Stamp

Mills, and by assay.

Its average yield was $93, gold, per ton, by stamp mills; and the tailings, which are loss, assayed $200 per ton. It assays regularly about $250 per ton. The Hwbbell and Patton Machine takes out 95 per cent, of the gold—an immense item. One of these double machines is about ready to ship to Montana. They take out a Harrison boiler, and two thirty-horse power engines. They are positively prepared to mine engines. They are positively prepared to mine out 3000 tons of ore in thirty days which should yield at least $500,000. They have secured a large water right and mill lot for their operations on Trout creek, at the foot of their mines. New York city of Montana lies on the opposite side of Trout creek. Their capacity for work with only one mill the country search will be to take only one mill the coming season, will be to take out about a Million of Dollars in gold. The amalgam of gold comes here to be refined. The mines are paid for in stock, at par. The titles tre perfect.
