FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 1867.

Practical Operation of the Reconstruction Bill.

THE most interesting topic commanding the public attention just now is the process of reconstruction under the bills which have lately passed Congress. The first result of these measures has been to throw the hitherto united, defiant, and sullen South into the utmost confusion. A fierce discussion has sprung up in every one of the late Rebel States as to what shall be done. Public men are divided; the press is divided; public sentiment is divided. We have already the nucleus of two great parties at the South. It is no longer a solid South against the North, but it is a home contest between elements of nearly equal strength. This of itself is a great gain. So long as the whites of the South stood solidly together, the situation was unpromising. Now, for the first time since the Rebellion broke out, we behold a divided South.

The element of division is the question of action or non-action under the Reconstruction bill. The old fire-eating faction-the original secessionists and nulliflers-as a class, are so bitterly opposed to the admission of the negro to political equality that they cannot consent to act at all. The burden of their argument is that the law is oppressive, degrading, and unconstitutional-arguments which they unfortunately find ready coined in the veto message of President Johnson. They look with longing eyes to the Supreme Court, and are disposed, Micawber-like, to wait for something to turn up. On the other side, the more moderate men-those who were driven into the Rebellion, not from choice, but from the force of circumstances-and an occasional old leader who has sense enough to comprehend the revolution that has passed over the country since 1861, urge prompt and cordial action under the bill. Already this class of men are denounced by the fire-enters. The contest is settling down to one between the fire-eaters, on one side, and the moderate men, whites and negroes, on the other.

The policy of non-action must inevitably fail. The work of registering voters will soon be in full operation in every one of the late Rebel States. If the fire-eaters do not choose to take the oath and register themselves, they will neither defeat nor delay the work. They will simply exclude themselves from all participation in the political power of the State. The negroes and the moderate white men will certainly be registered, and will go ahead with the work of framing Constitutions and State Governments. In a very short time the whole political organization will have passed into their hands. The Provisional Governments will have gone out of existence, and the new Governments will have taken their places. No decision of the Supreme Court can then reach the case; for the reconstructed republican governments will be the only ones in existence, and will be promptly admitted to the Union. No decision of the Supreme Court can ever annul a de facto State Government, recognized by Congress, and admitted to its share of power in the Union. The Supreme Court will not attempt it.

The work of reconstruction, therefore, under the Congressional plan, is bound to go on, and to be accomplished. This will become so apparent that the fire-eaters themselves will be forced to participate. Yet we expect they will be so tardy and hesitating about the matter, so full of bitterness towards the North and of prejudice against the negro, that they will lose control of nearly every one of the late Rebel States.

The negro vote is to be the great controlling element in the South, until the political rights and privileges of that class shall have been placed upon a secure and unquestioned foundation. Politicians of all classes will soon court it, and no party will dare to attempt to deprive them of their franchises.

The Popular Branches of the Great Governments.

Dr. Cummings, in the last of his "Last Warning Cries," anticipates the termination of this most goodly frame, the earth, because of the rapid fulfilment of prophecies, among which he cites the unstable condition of the various Governments of the world, and infers from the rocky condition of the great powers that their fall will soon occur, and with that the end of all. To any one, however, who has watched the progress of the recent Continental elections, and has observed their result, it would be clear that most of the kingdoms of the world are really more securely seated in the affections of the people than they have been for many years. Those who have noticed the signs of the times, and have been predicting approaching revolutions, must have omitted to look at that standard guage by which we are now enabled to measure the strength of a government-the proportion of the opposition in the National Legislature. It is noticeable that a political storm is always preceded by a growing power in the opposition to the Government in the legislative branches. As a general rule, so long as the representatives stand by a monarch they are safe, for, representing as they do the people, it is seldom that they differ from their constituents on any great question. Glancing at the relative strength of the opposing parties in the legis. I be false.

find that the largest vote in opposition to the existing authorities is found in the British Parliament, yet no one can believe that the throne of Great Britain is in danger. A year ago the three parties in Parliament, the government of Lord Russell, the opposition of Lord Derby, and the Adullamites of Mr. Lowe, were so divided that Mr. Lowe, joining with Lord Derby, overthrew Lord Russell, The election did not materially alter the strength of the parties, except that it added to the Derby party sufficient to overcome a union of the other two. In the House, in such a measure as the Reform bill just introduced, the Government will have at least thirty majority. The closeness of the vote does not affect the Crown, but only applies to the existing Ministers.

In France, although the Government is not based on anything like as sure a foundation as that of Great Britain, yet its vote in the Corps Legislatif is far larger. The French Legislature is classed into three bodies, the "right," or Government party; the "left," or opposition party; the "third party" (tiers parti), who correspond with the Adullamites of the English Parliament. The late debate in the Chamber shows the strength of the three parties, the Government numbering some one hundred and eighty votes, the opposition twenty-five and the third party sixty-one. From this it will be seen that even if the third party joined the opposition on any question, the two would be largely outvoted by the Government side. It is, however, in France far different than in England; in the latter an adverse majority in the House means a change of Ministry; in the former it means the overthrow of the throne.

The assembling of the North German Parliament has shown the strength of Prussia. There can be but little doubt that King William and Bismark have a two-thirds vote in their favor. This result is reached although the Poles sent eleven adverse members and the Danes two. The fact, however, that there are at least a million souls who desire to be entirely separated from the German Confederation, may be significant of what might result in case of another Continental war.

Garibaldi, in Italy, has succeeded in gatherng around him a powerful minority of anti-Papal Liberals, and may succeed in yet further increasing his party. The recent elections appear to have met with some peculiar mishaps, as we are told that most of them have to be held over again. We do not know what has caused such a necessity, unless in the number of the candidates none had a majority of the votes cast, as is sometimes the case in New Hampshire and in other States where a majority is necessary to an election. Of the relative strength of the two parties we can, therefore, form no definite idea.

The vote in our own House of Representatives is more overwhelmingly in favor of the dominant party than in any of the monarchies of the globe, we having 138 in favor of progress to less than 40 who desire to see the country retrograde. In looking, therefore, at the numerical relations between the friends and opponents of the existing Governments of the great nations of the Old and New Worlds, we cannot but think that to most of these may be just now applied the title of a "land of settled government," and Mr. Swinburne was not authorized, even by poetic license, to dedicate the "Song of Revolutions" to the days in which we live.

The Drug Exchange and the Internal Revenue Law.

THE Drug Exchange Association of this city adopted, at their meeting yesterday, resolutions endorsing the amended Tax law relating to distilled spirits, and pledging themselves to use every honorable means to discourage violations or evasions of it.

This is a movement in the right direction. Honest men in all branches of business should combine to put down the frauds in distilled spirits. The fraudulent distillers are robbing the whole community, are breaking down the business of honest citizens, and are heaping a load of unnecessary taxes upon the people. They are common enemies of law-abiding citizens. The people should therefore strengthen the arm of the Government, that these plunderers may be put down.

We are glad to know that of late the Government has been making special and successful efforts to detect whisky frauds in this city. These efforts will not be relaxed, but rather tained by her Supreme Court. THE Supreme Court of Tennessee rendered a decision yesterday, unanimously sustaining the constitutionality of the Franchise law of that State, passed at the last session of her Legislature. This decision, which is said to have been utterly unexpected by the Conservatives, completes the revolution in Tennessee. The work of reconstruction in that State has been done very much after the programme laid down by Andrew Johnson in 1864, before he had deserted the Union party, except that the confiscation of the property of leading Rebels, and the division of their estates, which he proposed, has not been accomplished. Loyal men, however, have controlled the matter, and traiters have been compelled "to take a back seat," as Johnson recommended.

JUDGE KELLEY ON THE THIRTY-NINTH CON-GRESS .- On our sixth page this afternoon will be found a full phonographic report of Judge Kelley's eloquent lecture on the "Thirty-ninth Cougress," delivered last evening before the Social, Civil, and Statistical Association of the Colored People of Philadelphia. It will well repay perusal.

THE NEWBERN ELECTION .- An election was held yesterday at Newbern, N. C., at which the colored men voted. No trouble was experienced. Thus, daily, are all predictions of a war of races, and other direful results of the extension of the elective franchise, proving to lative assemblies of the various nations, we | A sharp Discussion in the House of Representatives. Querr a spicy discussion took place in the House of Representatives yesterday, between General Butler and Mesars. Woodbridge, of Vermont, and Bingham, of Ohio. If these latter gentlemen think they made anything out of "Old Ben," they will probably indulge in another skirmish with him, as opportunity may offer. Mr. Bingham, whose course, for some time, has disappointed the expectations of his friends and of the public generally, was especially damaged in the rencounter. His charge that Butler had supported Jefferson Davis for the Democratic nomination for President was most capitally retorted upon himself, and his allusion to Fort Fisher called out a reply from Butler which put Mr. Bing ham on the defensive, and kept him there during the rest of the discussion.

Railroad Vetoes in Michigan. GOVERNOE CRAPO, of Michigan, has vetoed twenty railroad bills passed by the Legislature of that State for the construction of railroads by the aid of municipal taxation. The veto has been sustained. The people of the State will hereafter thank the Governor for his action. Municipal aid to railroad enterprises has burdened many communities in the West with a load of taxation which they are unable to endure, and from which some of them have endeavored to escape by repudiation. In Wisconsin, during the railroad excitement several years ago, eyen the farmers along many of the routes gave mortgages upon their farms to assist in building the roads, with the vain expectation that the stock they were to receive for the same would bring them out more than safe. Of course it did no such thing, and when the mortgages came to be foreclosed an excitement was produced in Wisconsin almost equal to the famous "Anti-rent war" in New York. The people of Michigan may congratulate themselves upon their escape.

THE CITY DEST .- A bill is before the Legislature limiting the power of Philadelphia to contract any additional debt beyond forty-five millions of dollars, without a special vote of the qualified electors in its favor. This is very well as far as it goes, but it would be still better to absolutely forbid the increase of the debt above forty-five millions, and to compel the city to take measures to at least meet its current expenses as it goes along. A private individual who should conduct his financial affairs as the city does its, would soon become a bankrupt.

THE CHINGARORA

ANTI-NERVOUS

SMOKING TOBACCO! The CHINGARORA TOBACCO grows from the rich soil of the "ORIENT," and is possessed of a pecuiarly delicious flavor, entirely unknown to the obaccos of all other climes. But its unprecedented obaccos of all other climes. But its unprecedented opularity has sprung from the fact of the entire abpopularity has sprung from the fact of the entire absence of that deadly poison, Nicotin, which permeates every other tobacco, and which is the one and sole cause of the distressing nervous diseases, dyspepsia, etc., which most invariably, sooner or later, lollow the indulgence of the pipe and cigar. At the recent analyzation of tobacco from all parts of the world, at the Academy of Sciences, in Paris, the renowned Chemist, M. Lamoureaux, declared that while European and American tobacco contained fully eight per cent., and the purest Havana tobacco from two to live per cent. of Nicotin, the CHINGARORA did not contain one discoverable particle of that deadly poison, a per cent, of Nectin, the CHINGARORA did not contain one discoverable particle of that deadly poison, a drop of which, extracted, will destroy life.

Our Agent at BOMBAY has shipped us large quantities of the CHINGARORA during the last two years, and although we have been pressed to supply the demand for this delicious luxury to the veteran smoker, yet we are now prepared to offer it in animited quantities, at a price much lower than some American tobacco of a far inferior quality.

A connoisseur has but to smoke the American tobacco and cigars, which are invariably chemically flavored, to be disgusted with the medicinal taste, which leaves a nauseous, unhealthy coating in the mouth, and in time never fails to shatter the nervous system.

The natives of the "ORIENT" smoke the CHIN-GARORA from morn till night, from youth to age, and are happily unconscious of the wild, distressing fire which courses through the veins of the inhaler of the fumes of tobacco containing Neofin.

We invite every lover of the weed to try the CHIN-GARORA, and guarantee unprecedented pleasure in $$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$
