From the Court Circular.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, Murch 14, 4 P. M.-No important change in the condition of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales has taken place since the last bulletin was issued. The inflammation of the knee joint, though still causing pain and interupting sleep, is slowly diminishing.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND. From the London Morning Star, 15th.

The reserve of the Bank of England has again crept up to a sum exceeding £12,000,000. The directors, however, made no alteration in the rate of discount, but after a very brief sitting proceeded to meet the proprietors at the half yearly court. The Governor intimated that the dividend proposed for the hall year was 54 per cent. The net profits for the period have been £792,492. The usual discussion took place at the meeting as to the propriety of giving interest on deposits, and with the usual result, the directors claiming for themselves the right to decide these matters according to their own traditions and theories. The consequence of their obstinacy on this point is that the bank of the nation is losing its place at the head of bankthe factor is down its pince at the head of bank-ing institutions. The deposits from the public which they held this week amount to £16,789,161. Those of the London and Westminster Bank, by last half yearly report, amounted to £22,672,558. The Government account must, of course, be added to ascertain the total amount of deposits held by the Bank of England, but as this is enjoyed partly as a of England; but as this is enjoyed partly as a species of monopoly and partly as a species of reward for services given in the keeping of the public accounts, the comparison ought to be made between the deposits of the public entrusted to each bank. The question may not seem to be a very practical one at the present moment, when the bank has on hand £11,187,476 of its own notes, for which it cannot get sufficient applications, even at the low rates of discount which now rule; but the season is an ex-ceptional one, and we shall doubtless again witness the reserve gradually disappearing, and at the end of a period of vigorous enterprise or speculation, or both, the resources of the Bank being pressed upon to au inconvenient, if not an alarming extent.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

AFFEAL BY THE GREGIAN GOVERNMENT FOR INTER-VENTION.

LONDON, March 18-Evening .- The Grecian Government has asked the leading powers of Europe to intervene for the prevention of further bloodshed in the Island of Candia.

SERVIA AND THE PORTE.

LONDON, March 17.-Lord Stanley has ordered the English Consul at Belgrade to make repre-sentations to the Prince of Servia to the effect that the Porte, have acceded to the arguments of the great powers, and consented to evacuate the Servian fortresses, as well as to grant im-portant concessions to its Christian subjects, it has now become the absolute and imperative duty of the Prince to perform his part by preventing the outbreak of any disturbances in Servia.

It is believed in London that the Sultan is sincerely anxious to carry out to the letter the concessions he has piomised, and it is expected even that a Christian will shortly become a member of the Turkish Cabinet.

BELGEADE, March 15.-In consequence of the advice of England, Prince Michael has consented

TOILETTES AT A WASHINGTON RECEPTION.

I write this letter as an act of justice to neglected man. The Washington correspondents, as a body, have given themselves over to the dominion of woman. Witness their one-sided accounts of the fashionable parties given by Senators and Secretaries. The women are all described as a lover might describe als beloved, while the men, though they may be hu-bands and fathers, Senators and Ministers, are not considered worthy to be mentioned at all. For the sake of vindicating the dignity of my sex,—and for an example to the regular correspondents, I give you a proper account of the brilliant reception given at the house of the distinguished Secretary, R-n-d-ll.

The host was dressed in a reat, close fitting cost, of a changeable hue, showing a delicate blue at night, but in open daylight a real sub-stantial grey. Pants same material, lined with grey muslin. White skirt, cut biased with a beautiful frill all around the skirt. New patent steel collar, marked "A. J." It is here proper to remark that his tables groaned under luxurious piles of bread and butter, furnished by the Treasury Department, and the side tables stag-gered with loads of the choicest wines, confis-cated by the New York custom house.

Senator D-1-tt-l-e was dressed in his best clothes, made loose, so as to be changed in a moment, and worn either side out. They were of a light changeable blue on one side, and a cliable grey on the other. His shirt was cut goring, and was made of material confiscated at the New York Custom House. The bosom was immaculately white, typical of the breast within. He wore a steel collar which was also typical of the character of the man. He seemed hungry, and spent most of the evening in the refreshment room, eating bread and butter, and slipping the odds and ends into his pockets.

Chief Justice C-h-s-e was dressed in a full suit of blue, with the exception of his vest, which had a green back. The tops of his boots were also green, and he had in his pocket several little pictures of Christopher Columbus and others set in green. He seemed to be rather choice of these, keeping his hands in his pockets all the time, especially when the host or Sena-tor D-1-tt-1-e were about. He wore suspenders, General G-r-n-t was also dressed in blue and a cigar case. He had on suspenders and blue ribbed socks with white toes. He was heard to inquire of the Chief Justice why he was like one of Shakespeare's characters? When the Chief Justice gave it, he said it was because his offense was rank. The Secretary of War breveted him on the spot.

President J-n-s-n came in leaning heavily on the arm of Vice-President S-t-v-n-s for support. On first entering he seemed to be insensibly affected by something, but soon dried his eyes with his new pocket handkerchief-a splendid pattern of bunting, representing the United States flag on one side and the Confederate flag on the other. His outer garments were a curious mixture of blue, grey, and butternut, but all his underwear were of a sturdy grey, dyed in the wool. He wore no suspenders, claiming, it is understood, that such fixtures are clearly in violation of the Constitution, and an insult to the South. It is unconstitutional to suspend anything except women. Senators S1-s-b-r-y and McD g-l came together, and looked and acted like brothers. They were dressed alike, each having on a snuffcolored butternut coat, with two bottles of whisky in the coat tails. Bottles partially empty. These two chivalric gentlemen added much to the festivities of the occasion by acting an interesting tableau, representing the coat of arms of Kentucky-"United we stand." They wore white kids.

Seated in a corner were Secretary W-1-1-s, and Senator Davis, of Kentucky, engaged in a warm discussion for several hours, the Secretary being asleep all the time. The gallant renator's attention being called to the fact that his adversary was asleep and sporing, he replied that he was glad of it, he was used to such things; it gave him more time to establish his side the question-and he went on "like an April shower."-Washington Correspondent Cincin noti Commercial.

OBITUARY. Rev. Arthur Burtis, D. D.

This reverend gentleman died at Oxford, Ohlo, on the 23d instant, in the sixtletli year of his age. The decreased was born in the C ty of New York on the 25th of October, 1807, his father being one of the ten Governors that ruled that city during the Revolution. In the year 1829 the deceased graduated at Union Col legg, in the same class with Julg-Campbell, of Otsego county, John J. Giscoll and the late Collector of this port, Mr. Preston King. After his graduation Dr. Burtis studied law with the late Chancellor Kent, at Columbia College, but here of a same submersion College, but, being of a very religious cast of mind, abandoned the study of the profession, and entered the Auburn Seminary, where he received his theological education. After his ordination as a minister of the Presbyterian denomination, he filled several publits in the western portion of New York with great ability and to the entire substantion of the different and to the entire satisfaction of his different congregations. Later he became Secretary of congregations. Later he became Secretary of the American and Foreign Christian Union, and was atterwards appointed Professor of the Greek language in the University of Oxford, Obio, which position he occupied at the time of his death. Dr. Bortis was a gentieman of fine classical and theological abuilties, and was noted for his religious and exemplary life.

Professor John Goodsir. The English journals record the death of John Goods'r, Protessor of Anatomy in the University of Edinburgh. The deceased was the son of a sileshire county surgeon, and, after pass ing the Arts Curriculum in St. Andrews, became apprenticed to a dentist of Edinburgh named Nasmyth. While in this capacity he attended the lectures of Dr. Knox on Anatomy in the Royal College of Surgeons, and the medical classes in the University. Upon obtaining his diploma he returned to Fifeshire, where he assisted his father in the practice of his profess'on, but having written several papers on ana-tomical subjects, which procured for him the office of Conservator to the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, he returned to Edin-burgh. After being several times promoted to high offices in the University, he was, in 1846, appointed to the position which he occupied at the time of his death. The anatomical and physiological researches of Professor Goodsir give him an extended reputation throughout the medical world, and, but for his feeble health during the past sixteen years, would have greatly added to the obligations under which he had laid the medical profession.

Marquis du Halley Coetquea.

The foreign papers announce the recent death the notorious Marquis du Halley Coetquen, of Paris, from an attack of apoplexy. For a number of years he bore the title of "the first duellist in France," on account of the many duels in which he was successfully engaged, and in later years he was looked upon as the supreme arbiter on all points of honor.

Peter Von Cornelius.

Of the three men who gave the Academy of Painting at Dusseldorf a new life, and to whom the art of painting in Germany owes its revival atter years of cullness, a second has just died full of years and houor. Von Schadow de-parted in 1861 at the age of 72, and Cornelius died on Wednesday, the 6th instant, at Berlin, in his 80th year. Overbeck, born in the same year with Yon Schadow (1789), still lives at Rome, and still works, the last survivor of a group whose influence on art, whether for good or evil, has been as strongly and as widely dif-tused as that of any three men, not men of genius, at any period in the history of the world

Peter Von Cornelius was born at Dusseldorf on September 16, 1787. He was the son of a painter, and early showed a strong leaning towards the study of art, and while still a child earned considerable sums by illustrating almanacs and other cheap publications. Mean while, he kept his eye upon a higher aim, and studying the works of Raphael and the antique, accustomed himself to repeat their designs from memory. At the age of sixteen he lost his father, and feeling the necessity of earning money for the support of his widowed mother. determined to renounce all thought of becoming an artist: but his mother would not consent to the sacrifice. Good and noble woman that she was, she preferred to struggle with the narrowness of her lot rather than to jeopardize the future of her son. In 1811 the young Cornelius went to Rome having already given proof of his ability by painting the interior of the cupola of the Church at Neuss. At Rome he was joined by Von Schudow and by Overbeck, and the three young men worked with fervor and energy, painting together in several series of pictures-among others a "History of Joseph," for the palace of M. Bartholdy, Ambassador of Prussia. Here, too, he designed his illustrations to the Nibe-lungen Lied which, more than any other work of his, made his name known in Germany. He proposed also a series of illustrations in tresco the "Comedy" of Dante, but had only made the designs when he was invited to Munich by the Crown Prince of Bavaris, afterwards King Louis. At Munich he remained several years, Louis. At Monich he remained several years, and executed at the command of the King many memorable works. He filled Munich with frescoes. In the Academy of Fine Arts he decorated two halls in the Glyptothek or sculptore gallery with frescoes, where subjects were drawn from the Greek mythology. After a brief visit to Dusseldort, where he was made Director of the Academy, he returned to Berlin and began the decoration of the Pinacothek or picture gallery, with a series of frescoes, illusrating the history of painting. In the Church of Saint Louis he painted four great frescors, the largest of which is the "Last Judgment," the largest painting in the world, being 62 feet high and 38 feet wide. In this work he cutered the lists with Michel Angelo, and dared to compete with him on a field where rivalry would seem ridiculous. But Cornelius, if he has not made Augelo forgotten, has at least made himself remembered by this vast work, which remains his greatest monument. After a long residence in Munich. Cornellus and King Louis became estranged. and the artist took up his residence in Berlin, where Frederic William made him director of the Academy, and charged him with the painting of the Campo Santo. He never returned to Munich, although he must have often regretted whatever necessity drove him from that city, where he lived so happily, a king in the king-dom of his art. Of the three restorers of the art of painting in modern Germany whose names have acquired a European reputation, Correlius undoubtedly was the strongest. His originality was hampered, not stimulated by his early devotion to Raphael, Angelo, and the Antique art, but it was not utterly killed by it. as was that of his tellow-pupil, Overbeck, whose style grows ever more thin and colorless, and whose small original stock of colorless, and whose small original stock of ideas has not lasted him for sixty years without a process of dilution that has long since deprived them of all flavor. Yet if Over-beck has little deserved to be called the Raphael of German art, Cornelius as little deserved the title of its Angelo. He had in excess the German its denote to subjectivity of inservent and her tendency to subjectivity of treatment, and believed that he was producing art when he was painting conventional figure-pieces by the acre. Still, though he has left no work of universal interest, and must ever be little more than a notable name to the world at large, it is not to be denied that he secured an abiding place in the affections of his native Germany by his enthusiasm for her early history; and perhaps not less by the powerful stimulus his energy and activity gave to German art, which owes no doubt to him in greatest measure the high posltion it has taken in the last fifty years.

FROM WASHINGTON THIS AFTERNOON.

[SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO EVENING TELEGRAPH.] WASHINGTON, March 29.

Governor Throckmorton, of Texas. An effort will soon be made to induce Major-General Sheridan to remove Governor Throckmorton, of Texas. The Union men now here from that State claim that it will be useless for them to attempt to organize a Government under the Reconstruction bill while he is in power, as his influence, and all the patronage of his position, will be used by him in behalf of the Rebels and the disfranchised classes. They are afraid that the freedmen will be driven to vote against their wishes unless the control of the Government is in the hands of the Union party, and state that there are at least fifty counties in which they will not be allowed to vote at all unless they are protected by the presence of Federal troops. If Throckmorton is removed the appointment of a Union man will be secured, no matter what the desire of the Administration may be, as the law requires all officers to take the iron-clad test oath. Throckmorton cannot take it, and there are but few men of prominence in the State who can. Among them are Judge Paschal, Judge Sherwood, and Judge Thomas, all radical Unionists. First Pennsylvania Revenue District.

No action has been taken yet upon the nomination in this district. The impression here is that Mr. Crawford's name will be withdrawn, and a Republican will be sent in who will be confirmed, which it is said will secure the confirmation of Mr. Frazier.

The Fourth Revenue District.

Judge Kelley is strongly opposing the confirmation of McGrath for Collector and Theodore Adams for Assessor in this district. Judge Kelley's favorite for Assessor was Mr. Henry M. Lewis, but he was thrown overboard.

The Nominations Before the Senate.

There are several hundred nominations now before the Senate for action, which, if not acted upon before the adjournment, will all fail; and, unless an Executive session is convened by the President, these nominations will have to be made over again.

Melancholy Suicide of Major James Stedman, at Fredouta, N. V.

FREDONIA, March 25 .- One of the most melancholy suicides transpired in this town on Saturday morning last, which we have ever been called upon to record.

Major James Stedman, an old citizen of Fredonia, and a gentleman held in universal esteem, committed suicide by shooting and then hanging himself to the beam of his barn.

Major Stedman had for several weeks given indications of partial insanity, in his busines transactions, and in his intercourse with his family. On Friday he went to several places in the village and settled up some business matters, declaring that he must settle up all his matters.

On Friday evening, about 6 o'clock, he left his house to attend to some matters in the village. Not returning as usual, his family became alarmed, and his son started in search of him. The search was continued until morning, when in the snow were found many footsteps round his house, and then leading off to the barn, On going to the barn they found marks of blood in the new white snow, which had fallen the previous day.

Upon going into the barn, whe most fearful sight was revealed.

Major Stedman was found suspended to the peam of his barn by a rope-dead 1 He had shot himself in the neck, first, with his rifls, in the hope, as is supposed, to sever the jugular vein. Not producing as quick work as he desired, he unfastened a cow, took the rope with which she was tied, and thus finished the terrible tragedy. Major Stedman leaves a wife and four children, and the reputation of a kind and exemplary husband and father, and good citizen. He was about forty-live years of age. This is the third suicide committed in the illage within the past three months, - Rochester Express.

NEW GOLD DISCOVERIES .- A correspondent of the Sioux City (Iowa) Register, writing from Fort Beauford, Dakota, January 19th, says that in digging a well at that post, at the depth of about twenty feet, a vein of sand was struck that panned out ten cents in gold to every quart in dirt. Some Montana miners say there are some of the very best indications for gold in large quantities about there. The Register says :- "In the fall of 1858 we were shown some fine specimens of gold, brough from the Black Hills region by Major Culbertson, of the American Fur Company, who also gave it as his bpinion, founded upon the knowledge acquired by a residence of more than a quarter of a century in the Indian country, that gold existed in large quantities, and was distributed over a considerable scope of territory, embracing the Black Hills, the Valley of the Yellowstone and its tributaries."

A few days ago a blackand-tan terrier, getting wind of the rendezvous made an attack upon a couple of rats that had ventured too far into the open air. The terrier, after despatching the first victim, charged into the swarm with the evident determination of serving the remainder in like manner. But for once a terrier was doomed to meet with fight from the poor animals he had so long devoured at plea-sure, and in a trice he was surrounded on all sides by a swarm of ferocious brutes anxious to be avenged for the death of their companion. Then ensued the most frightful scene imaginable. The rats swarmed around their adversary, and fastened their claws and teeth in his The dog, enraged by the pain, fought flesh. brayely, killing scores of his enemies in his contest for life. But the odds against him were too great, and after a sharp conflict, which lasted for about five minutes, he was to succumb. His body was literally forced devoured by the rats, they seeming to take savage pleasure in tearing their vanquished enemy piecemeal. Scarcely a vestige of the animal remained behind. The terrier died game, however. There were about half a hundred rats left upon the field, bleeding and mangled, and as many more more or less inured.

A singular instance of the kindness of dumb animals to their fellows was noticed at the con-clusion of the combat. A number of the combatants had been somewhat lacerated by the teeth of the dog. Their companions gathered in groups around them, licked the blood from their wounds, and then tenderly carried in their teeth to their nests. The bodies of the slain were as tenderly cared for. One by one they were carried to a hole in the ice near by, where they were piled up. When all the bodies had been gathered together, the survivors grouped around them, and one of their number, mounting upon the pile of bodies, seemed to deliver a brief funeral oration over the remains of their companions. The utmost stillness reigned among the company during the address of their chief. The whole company then proceeded to tumble their dead companions into the water, where they soon sank from sight. In half an hour scarcely a vestige of the conflict remained. The funeral service was the most extraordinary instance of the kind we have yet observed, and is well deserving of the study of naturalists. The fight, as a whole, would have delighted sporting men and dog fanciers. It was highly interesting to the few who observed it.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S GIFT TO MR. PEABODY .-The portrait of Queen Victoria, to be presented to Mr. Peabody, has just been finished in London. It is painted in enamel, and is an oval miniature fourteen inches by ten. The enamel is on a stout gold plate, and represents the Queen seated, half length, the arms and hands thrown out admirably from the black dress. Her Majesty wears the blue ribbon of the Garter and the George; she is represented in a Mary Stuart cap, surnounted by a coronet, and her black dress is relieved by a trimming of ermine. It is a good likeness of the Queen, and very handsomely framed in leep maroou velvet, ornamented with fine ormolu. Above the pertrait are the royal arms, at each side the rose, thistle, and shamrock, and beneath the inscription, which was given by the Queen herself-"Presented by the Queen to George Peabody, Esq., the Benefoctor of the Poor of London.

MONTANA .- An old resident of Atchison, now n Montana, writes as follows to the Champion oncerning the country:-"I am satisfied that within two years the extensive and fertile valleys of the Territory will supply our popula tion with the products of the soil now brought from the States. As a stock-raising country, it certainly surpasses the best stock countr known to me. Stock thrives summer and winter, without grain or provender, even in winter. The diggings will yield the coming season more than twice the amount of gold of any previous season; whilst in addition many quartz mills and smelters will be in successful operation. Indeed, many mills are now in successful operation, not one of which, known to me, fails to more than meet the expecta-tions of the owners. The climate is well adapted to persons afflicted with pulmonary affections."

-The commercial editor of the New Orleans Times moots a point of paramount importance to the holders of mortgages on real estate:-

"The question is asked in some circles, whether under the Bankrupt act, in cases of parties availing of the act surrendering property which may be under prortage, the Jodge of the United States Court can order all mortages standing against the bankrupt, or any one petitioning for the benefit thereof, can order the grasure of mortgages on the records of the mortage office? It will be remembered that under the act of 1842, or the last national bankrupt att, the presiding Judge could direct the erasure of all mortages; that the mortgages merely could have a privilege on the assets or proceeds of the pro-perty released. It will be remembered that the pro-ceeds of much real estate, sold under the order of hankruptey, under that law, did not command oue-fourth or half the sum for which it was valued or cost. It will be remembered that the pro-ceeds of much real estate, sold under the order of hankruptey, under that he real estate of the late Thomas Banks, who built and erected many stores and buildings in the new First District, went i to court with property worth 5,500,000, comprising the Ciry Hotel, the Arcace, on Magasine street, the outer and Natchez, new complet by four stores, the Commercial Motel, and other property now the most valuable in the city. In fine, Mr Banks never owned or improved a property only in the best locations; hud what is it suppsed all this valuable real estate, now worth seven to eight millions of dollars, sold for onder a decree of bankruptcy of the United States ? Merely for four hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($40,000. Thomas Banks, died a broken-bearted man, There was no necessity for his being forced into bankruptcy." The merits of the question are not all on one side. If the owner of incumbered property "The question is asked in some circles, whethen uder the Bankrupt act, in cases of parties availing

The merits of the question are not all on one side. If the owner of incumbered property become bankrupt, and the whole of his assets pass into the hands of a receiver for the benefit of the creditors, should the existence of a mortgage upon the real part of the estate relieve it from liability to forced sale? The creditors are entitled to the entire body of assets, and, to secure the benefit of all, the power to anticipate entitled to the conditions of a morigage, and even to direct its erasure, must rest somewhere. Of this au-thority the Judge is the proper custodiau.
