OBITUARY. Alfred Mellon.

The death of the eminent London conductor will occasion a very general regret, for the name of Mr. Meilon was favorably known among musicians the world over. In the musical circles of England his name is a household word, This distinction Mr. Mellon has achieved, not by great genius, but by earnest talents. He has long filled the conductorship of the Philharmonic Concerts of Liverpool, which, as a regular and established musical enterprise, are unexcelled by any. The talent, tact, and practical knowledge of this musician were admitted codially by his contemporaries. He was regarded second only to costa in the conduct of Italian opera, and in other branches of art he was without a superior among London directors. Mr. Miciton began his career in the orchestra of the Birmingham Theatre, and soon went to London to take charge of the orchestra of the Adephi Theatre under Manuger Webster. Under the Pyne and Harrison management he conducted the English opera, and found time to produce a work or two of his own, His opera of Violorius, and several capital overtures, will secure him a place among composers. Under Herr Molique of Stuttgard, Mr. Melion had acquired that distinguishing command of the tecunical resources of his art which made him one of the most precise, assured, and spirited of the higher achieved, not by great genius, but by earnest resources of bis art which made him one of the most precise, assured, and spirited of the higher class of conductors. One of his best services to the cause of music was the institution by him of the Shilling Concerts, which every night, for many weeks in each summer of late years, crowded the Covent Gazden Theatre with the popular thousands. The people were thus benefited as they seldom have been in any other way, and the noblest classics were made popular under Mellon's enthusiastic direction. Nights devoted respectively to Beethoven, Mozart, Weber, Mendelssohn, and the rest of the great instrumental composers, succeeded each other, and all who came to hear were instructed. Mr. Mellon was the husband of one of the most popular and admihash were instructed, Mr. Mellon was the bushness of one of the most popular and admi-rable ustresses of the English stage. If we may believe the judgment of some of the best in-formed of his contemporaries, he had, in his simple and honest character as a man, won universal esteem, especially that of his musical brethern.

The Rev. Dr. John Campbell. The death is announced of the Rev. Dr. John Campbell, a well known minister of the English Congregationalists. The deceased was born in 1795 in Scotland, and received his education at the Universities of St. Andrews and Glasgow. He labored more than twenty years in the ministry. On resigning his position as a minister, be devoted himself entirely to literature, being in turn the editor of several periodi-cals (including the British Standard), and the author of a number of works, especially controversial. In 1839 he opened a controversy with the Queen's printers on the Bible printing monopoly, which resulted in the immense re-duction of the price of the Scriptures. During our war, Dr. Campbell was surpassed by no one and equalled by few English journalists, in his warm advocacy of the cause of the United States against the robellious slaveholders and their sympathizers in Great Britain.

Prince Frederick of Hesse Darmstadt. This nobleman, a brother of the late Grand Duke of Hesse Darmstadt and uncle of the present Duke, died recently at Paris, at the advanced age of seventy-nine years. When a young man Prince Frederick renounced the Protestant religion and embraced Catholicity, becoming a member of the clergy and being a becoming a member of the clergy and being a lay cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church. His father, Louis I of Hesse Darmstadt, who was a bigoted Protestant, drove the deceased from the Grand Duchy, after compelling him to make a renunciation of his rights to the succession of the ducal throne. He retired to France, and did not return to his native land until after the death of his father in 1830. He did not long remain in the Duchy, however, but soon returned to Paris, where he lived in great retirement to the time of his death. M. Hittorff.

In the death of M. Hittorif, member of the Institute, which took place recently at Paris, the artistic world has suffered a severe loss. The deceased was a native of Cologne, in which city he was born in 1782. Being destined by his father for an architectural life, he was placed under the best masters in his native place, and at seventeen years of age was sent to Paris, where he studied under Percier and Belanger, who took a great interest in his progress. He rapidly attained a prominence, and in 1814 was appointed Inspector of Royal Buildings; and, on the death of Belanger succeeded to the position of Royal Architect. His principal works were the construction of the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, and the embellishment of the Champs Elysees, and the Place de la Con-corde. He also built L'Ambigu Comique (theatre), with many other works of a different (theatre), with many other works of a different character. Among his lesser works may be mentioned the Abattoir du Roule. As an author, M. Hittorff made some reputation by the publication of his "Ancient and Modern Architecture of Sicily," together with other works relating to art. In 1825 he was decorated with the Leglon of Honor, and in 1853 becames member of line Academy of Fine Arts. Although a ber of the Academy of Fine Arts. Although a native of Cologne (in Prussia), M. Hitterff pre-ferred to retain his French citizenship after that city was captured by the allies.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF LEE'S SURRENDER.

Letter from General Grant. The anniversary of Lee's surrender, the 9th instant, was celebrated with considerable pomp in various parts of the North and West, In response to an invitation to attend the celebration in Titusville, Pa., General Grant sent the following note:-

HEADQUARTERS ARMIPS UNITED STATES, WASHINGTON, D. C., March St., My Dear Captain.—Your kind invitation to me to be present at the celebration to be hold at Titusville, Pa., by the soldiers of that vicinity, who contributed to the saving of our country during the late struggle through which we have passed, was duly received. I should like very much to be with you, but cannot. I can, however, wish you a happy, good time, and can add that every man who bore his musket or sword during the Rebellion has a record to be proud of, and one which it is hoped he will never harnish by subsequent acts. Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

U. S. GRANT, General.

To Captain Henry F. Wrigley, Titusville, Pa.

Conversion of the Jews.

Conversion of the Jews.

Bishop Odenheimer, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of New Jersey, has issued the following pastoral letter recommending a collection for the Jews, on Good Friday:

To the Clergy and Laity of the Diocese of New Jersey:—Brethren beloved in the Lord—I have more than once written to you, recommending a collection for the Jews on Good Friday. Again I urge you, by your love for Him who died on the Cross, to imitate His unconquerable charity for His brethren after the flesh, the ancient people of God. And not on the next Good Friday only, but on each annual recurrence of the great Fast, I ask you, in the Master's name, to make a contribution for the Jews; so that your alms and prayers may be a perpetual memorial, in the sight of God. of your longing for the promised time when "the fullness of the Gentiles simil be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved." Pray, give, work for the conversion of the Jews; and so much the more beartily and hopefally, as ye see the Day approaching.

approaching.
Affectionately your Bishop.
WILLIAM HENRY ODENHEIMER.

REMOVAL OF THE SPLEEN.—Towards the end of last year M. J. M. Philipeau gave the French Academy an account of some experi-ments on young rats, showing that the spleen is reproduced after partial extirpation, but never when entirely removed. He has followed up these experiments by others, in which he first totally extirpated and removed the spleen, and then replaced it in the abdominal cavity. The animals thus operated on were examined at periods of five, ten, and fifteen months afterwards, when the spleen was nearly always found to have engrafted itself on the peritoneum, generally near the stomach and on the left side In only one case had the spleen attached itself on the right side, whilst in almost every instance adhesion took place at the edge of the funiculum. Where the graft succeeded, the spleen presented its normal structure, and increased in size with the growth of the animal, without, however, altering its normal dimensions.
