THE BUTCHERY OF MRS. MAGILTON.—The circumstances attending the murder of Mrs. Magilton, as reported in our last issue, are no longer a matter of mystery. An inquest was held yesterday, by Coroner Daniels, and his deputy, Mr. Fletcher. The party accused of the murder was present at the inquest. His name is Geo. W. Winnemore. His father was a high constable of the city, and some branches of the family move in very respectable circles. The accused left home at an early age, ran wild about the city, and finally entered the regular army. He served in Montana, where Indians ravaged the settlements, came home and was discharged. THE BUTCHERY OF MRS. MAGILTON .- The cir-where indians ravaged the settlements, came home and was discharged.

His discharge is dated but a few weeks ago. He seems to have lived since a vagabond life, spending his money riotously, and when reduced to penury taking refuge in the business of a street buckster. He appears to have been a believer in spiritualism. spiritualism.

At the inquest, yesterday, he appeared to be buoyed up by an artificial stimulus, as also, to the thinking of our reporter, was the husband of the murdered woman. Coroner Daniels and his dedeputy performed their duty with exceeding tact.

Adam Magilton, the husband of the murdered woman, was the first witness sworn. He reached the har of the Coroner's office amilded. the bar of the Coroner's office amidst a silence broken only by his sobe. He stated that after dinner he went away from his home to have his spectacles he went away from his nome to have his specialized repaired. His wife he left reading the newspaper. An hour afterward he returned, and found the door locked. Then he went round to the other door, when Winnemore came to the front door and opened it. and called the witness into the room where the murdered woman lay. All the explanation the fellow offered was that wome one had butchered her." The witness called a policeman, and gave Winnemore into custody.

The hammer which was used in the murder was produced by the Coroner. Mr. Magilton said that it was his he had picked it from the floor, near the body of his wife. Based the need of second the second t body of his wife. Beyond the pool of gore at the side, and around the head of the woman, there were no traces of disorder in the room. Her knitting ball lay on the floor. The paper which had fallen from her hands was near the chair in which her husband had last seen her.

Mr. Dwight, who appeared for the common-wealth at the inquest, inquired of the witness whether his wife had any money. He stated that on Thursday morning she told him that she had procured change for a ten dollar bill, receiving two two-dollar bills.

on Thursday morning she told him that she had procured change for a ten dollar bill, receiving two two-dollar bills.

George Parker was then called—He said that he keeps a barber shop in Shippen, near Thirtsenth street; he left the shop at twelve o'clock and returned at three; immediately after, Mr. Magilton appeared in the street, calling that his wise was murdered; Winnemore came out of the house, and, stating that he wanted a policeman, accested Policeman McCullen, who afterwards retained the prisoner.

Mrs. Mary Stewart resides at 1303 Shippen street Her story was that, sitting at the window opposite Mr. Magilton's come when that gentleman came to the door, she saw him try to open it, and turn from it to the window; she then saw the door open and Winnemore come out and pull Magilton in. She saw the two enter the house and Magilton run out into the street with a cry which alarmed the neighborhood. Winnemore walked toward "thirteenth street, and returned with the policeman a minute later. Winnemore walked with a firm step from the house.

Mrs. Rebecca Smith stated that, living immediately in the rear of Magilton's house she came to the front and sat upon the steps for nearly an hour previous to the arrival of Mr. Magilton. During the time that she sat there no one passed into the dwelling. When Mr. Magilton came he entered the house, and immediately Winnemore emerged. saying, "Don't be alarmed, Mr. Magilton; I will go for the doctor or Coroner, or anybody yon want." "aid the wi'nees, "Who are yon?" "thi I sm a friend of Mr. Magilton's," was the reply.

Cornelius Donahue and a number of others deposed to the same effect.

Robert Buck testified that he lived at the northwest corner of Broad and Shippen. Shortly after dinner, on Thursday, Winnemore came to the premises and asked the time. The witness replied that it was about two o'clock. Then Winnemore walked down Shippen steet and step in the charge of policeman McCullen, and heard that Mrs. Magilton had been murdered.

Nathaniel Nesbit testified that he saw W man McCullen, and heard that Mrs. Magiiton had been murdered.

Nathaniel Nesbit testified that he saw Winnemore go down Shippen street and stop in front of the door; he stood there in the shadow of the doorway for five minutes, when the witness went into his own house, opposite that of Magilton; in the morning Winnemore stood in the same position for several minutes before entering the bouse; in the afternoon it was about two o'clock when the prisone came to the premises.

Martha Dobtins, who lives directly opposite to Mr. Magilton, deposed that she saw Winnemore come to the latter place and stand on the door step; she saw him take the knob in his hand, but turning her attention away for a minute, she saw no one there when she again looked; this was a little after two o'clock; an hour later she heard that Mrs. Magilton was murdered, and went and saw the body.

again looked; this was a little after two o'clock; an hour later she heard that Mrs. Magliton was mur dered, and went and saw the body.

William Selby, a superintendent of street-cleaning under Mr. Contractor Bickley, was sworn. From him the lary learned nothing new; he was in the vicinity of the house when the prisoner came out and accosted the policeman This he saw.

Sentor Policeman McCullen, who was then put upon the stand, testified concerning the arrest, and corroborsted the testimony of preceding witnesses upon this point. He stated that he picked the hammer from the floor, and gave it to the detectives.

Junior Policeman McCullen, who assisted in the arrest, testified to the same effect. He saw Winnemore walking hurriedly out Shippen street, and brought him to the house. At the station the Lieutenant took two two dellar notes, a ten cent note, fifteen pennies and two three cent pieces from Winnemore's pockets. The witness looked for blood upon the prisoner, but found none. Winnemore stated that he had put his hand upon Mrs. Magliton's head when he entered the house, for she was lying on the floor with her throat cut. This he did to see if she was dead, but when he ascertained that fact he washed the stain away. In the yard the policeman said there was a small clot of blood near the hydrant and two feet from the privy. McCullen size riated that he got a lad to descend the privy; in ball a minute the boy found a razor, which he handed the peliceman before he ascended from the well; the fezor was produced, and the policeman recognized it; it is a straight thin blade, with a long, slender handle, peculiae in construction and readily identified; Mr. Mc ullen said that there were dark stains on the rezor, under the deposit of the cesspool; he did not wash the razor, iest he should remove the stains.

James Gallen, the la, who recovered the razor, was then called. He correborated Policeman Malinian in he did not wash the razor, test he should remove the stains.

James Gallen, the late who recovered the razor, was then called. He corroborated Policeman McCullen, Jr.

Lieut. Hampton stated that he was at the station-house when the prisoner was searched; a pocket diary and the money previously described were found; these were all the contents of his pocket; no traces of blood were found upon the body or clothes of Winnemore; the Lieutenant went to the house and found blood tracks in the yard; from the house and found blood tracks in the yard; from the house the Lieutenant went to the boarding-house of Winnemore, and found a value and various articles of the prisoner's.

Chief Lamon testified that, with Detective Tryon, he went to the scene of the murder, took possession of the razor and hammer, and then visited the boarding-house of Winnemore at Menoch's to Front street. The chief found there, a small hand trunk, in which was a case for a razer. To an inquiry of Mir. Lamon's whether he had ever seen vinemore with a razor, Menoch said that he had loned one to him.

Adam Menoch testified that on Saturday last Winnemore came to him, and, finding the witness shaving, said "I have a good rozor winds I will loan you." Menoch said, "Very well." Winnemore then produced the razor, and after the witness had used it he returned it. Mr Menoch declared that the razor in the Coroner's hand swas the same instrument. He recognized it readily by the manner in which it was ground down on one side.

William Suid ff, who was pre-ent at the house of Mr. Menoch when the resur was loaned, corroborated the statement of that wit eas in regard to the loan of the razer, but could not identify it.
Mr. Mickley, the son-in-law of Mrs Magliton, said that at 4 o'clock is the afternoon preceding the marder, that lady came to his house. He gave her two two-dollar notes, government bills.

The Coroner produced the two notes taken from the prisoner. Mr. Mickley, could not swear that

Mr. Mickley could not swear that they were those given by him to his mother-inlaw, sithough they were the same kind of bills, of the same denomination, and were old notes, such as he gave her. He said that he had folded them several times and put them in a small pocket book. The notes on the Coroner's table were creased seeral times. This closed the regular examination of witnesses The report of the post-mortem examination of witnesses. The report of the post-mortem examination concluded the inquest. This was significant. Dr. Shapleigh stated that he made a thorough inspection of the body. The throat had been cat. The left hand had been bruised. There were seven contasted wounds on the head, all of the same character and produced by the same instrument. character and produced by the same instrument. Five of them extended to the brain, and of these one was behind the outer angle of the left eye, and two before. One, above the right eye, penetrated the brain, and an inch to the right of that was a similar one. On the top of the head there were three other wounds parallel with and similar to

This summed up the entire case. The jury re-tured a verdict, almost without consultation, that the deceased came to her death by the hand of the prisoner. Winnemore was fully committed for
