RAISING OF THE BEAUSEANT.

This very spirited poem, which we publish for the special satisfaction of our Masonic Knights of the Temple, was written by the distinguished companion and man of letters, Brother and Professor William E. Aytoun, well known as, for a long season, the able editor of Blackwood's Magazine. It was recited at a Festival of the Knights Templars of the Metropolitan Priory of Scotland. It might be well used, in the same manner, at any convivial celebration of the Templars in our region. The "Beausant" was the name given to the Banner of the Fling out the Temple Banner as of Old! Age hath not stained the wniteness of its fold. Nor marred the ruddy cross, Salvation's sign. Once more we lift the sacred standard up-Companions, fill the cup-

We pledge the Beauseant in this sparkling Oh! what a valiant host have fought and bled Beneath that Banner to the wind outspread,

Since first it moved against the infidel! Who knows not how it waved on Salem's towers, When Acre, Ramla, Nazareth were ours,

And as Tiberias fell?

Fell with the Knights who bore it to the field When toulest treason broke the Christian shield And bade the Turkish crescent sign advance Fell but to rise again with triple pride, When, bounding o'er the tide, The armies came of England and of France!

And who is he, the leader of that band, Who first sets foot upon the Holy Land? Move on, unrivalled champion that thou art! Shout, Brethren, shout! aloft your banners

Tis he, the Christian's hope, the Island King-Richard, the Lion Heart! Then Acre fell-the Moslem foe went back, And still our Brethren followed on their track,
And even in the van of battle flew
The sacred Beauseant, like a meteor star

Shedding its wrath afar Upon the foul and unbelieving crew. Unvanquished still-till fraud, not force, com-

With basest envy in a despot's mind, Dragged from its staff that glorious emblem down, And poured, like water, forth the guiltless blood, When Jacques Molay, the valiant and the good. Received his martyr crown. Then perished all—yet no, on Scottish ground Some remnant of the Templars still was found,

Whenever treason did not dare to quell. Walter de Clifton! honored be thy name! Who, braving death and shame, Did'st vindicate thine Order's truth so well. Years passed away, ere yet the warning world

Behelo again the Templar's flag unfurled, But England saw the Rosy Cross return Once more to light, and scattering dismay Within their ranks upon that glorious day When Bruce won Bannockburn.

Then raise it up, Companions, once again, Though now it wave not on the battle plain, True hearts are here to guard its spotless fold Forever honored be the Templar's name, Forever dear their fame!

Fling out the Beauseant Banner as of Old!

STATUE OF GEORGE PEABODY. The citizens of London are about to conter distinguished honor upon the eminent American banker and still more eminent philauthropist, by the erection of a statue of himself, not yet to his memory, but in testimony of their sense of his virtues. A public meeting was held at the Mansion House, where Sir Benjamin Samuel Phillips presided, and where it was resolved, in testimony of the deep feeling of gratitude entertained by the citizens of London towards George Peabody, Esq., for his munificent donation of £250,000 for the benefit of the industri-ous poor of London, a public statue be erected in some conspicuous place within the city of

TO-As beats the sad heart of the poor lonely stranger, When dying in lands far away, He hears the loved voice of his own mountain

In melody melting away; As the lone captive welcomes again to his cell

The dove that hath long been astray, Inclasps the blue ribbon, and the warm words The feelings of her far away;

So boundeth this bosom at such friendship as thine. Returned upon wings as the dove, And so throbs this sad heart at that music divine That heralds the reigning of Love. L. M.

PUNNING MOTTOES OF THE BRI-

TISH ARISTOCRACY. An English paper says:-"We have been struck, in glancing over the pages of Debrett's Illustrated Peerage, published by Dean & Son, of Ludgate Hill, London, with the number of noble families who introduce the family name into the motto borne with their arms; for in stance, we have the Duke of Devonshire, whose family name is Cavendish, taking for his motto Cavendo Tutus (Secure by caution), while Lord Waterpark, descended from the same family, carries the same motto. Lord Lyveden (Vertranslated as Vernon always flourishes, or it might be written Ver-non semper virel, spring does not always flourish; this somewhat egotistical motto is also Lord Vernon's. Then we have Lord Byron (Byron), Crede Byron (Believe Byron); Lord Lyons (Lyons), Not writare leones (Do not rouse the lions); the Duke of Buckingham (Temple), Templa quam ditecta (How beloved are thy temples); Earl of Ellenborough (Law), Compositum jus fasque animi (Law and equity); the Earl of Clancarty (Le Poer French), Dieu pour ia Trench qui con-(God for the French: who is against Him?) Earl Fortescue (Fortescue), Fortesculum salus ducum (A strong buckler is the safeguard of generals). This motto is said to owe its origin to a Sir Richard Forte (from whom this family claim descent) having protected William the Conqueror at the battle of Hastings by bearing a strong shield before him; hence the name, Forte and escue, a shield. It is also used by

Baron Clermont, a descendent of this family.
"The motto of Lord Fairfax (Fairfax), is Fare fac (Speak and act). The barony of Fairfax, one of the oldest in the Scotch peerage, is involved in much obscurity-the residence of the present peer, as well as his brothers and sisters being unknown; the late peer seems to have been a clerk in the Supreme Court of California. Perhaps without exception the best family name motto is that of Earl Manvers, whose family name is Pierrhpont, which is thus written in toe motto Pie-repone-te (Repose in pious confidence); in Lord Monteagle's motto, the pun is on the title, the family name being Spring Rice, Alte fert aquita (The eagle mounts with me on high); Lord Fermoy (Roche), Mon dieu est ma Roche (My God is my rock); the Earl of Enniskillen (Cote), Deum cole; regem serva (Worship God; serve the king); the Earl of Abergavenny (Nevill), Ne vite vetis (Form no mean wish); the Earl of Hopetoun (Hope), At spes non fracta (But my hope is not broken); the Earl of Westmoreland (Fane), Ne vile fano (Disgrace not the altar).

"Many mottoes possess an almost historic interest; take for instance that epic comprised in the arms of the Earl of Camperdown-we allude to the sailor who supports the sinister side, and who, to quote Debrett, 'is meant to represent James Crawford, a native of Sunderland, who, during the battle of Camperdown (for the first earl wrested his coronet red-handed in the service of his country), climbed up the stump of the mainmast of the Venerable (flagship), and although the rigging was shot away under his feet, kept his position, and no less than seven times during the action named up the admiral's (first Viscount Camperdown's) flag, after it had been shot away. The present earl's father, on the recent death of this brave sailor, had forwarded to him, by James Crawford's desire, the silver medal which had been presented to him for his gallant conduct, to fasten to the flag which is still in the possession of the family.

"The Combermere crest and motto tell "The Combermere crest and motto tell another gallant tale; 'Salamanca' will be a word of power in English ears so long as military glory finds worshippers; the Erskine motto is 'Trial by jury,' rather an appropriate one for, perhaps, the most persuasive of advocates and best of Lord High Chancellors; the Exmouth motto, 'Algiers,' needs no explanation; the crest Dea adjuvante (God being my belper) seems particularly appropriate to the helper) seems particularly appropriate to the gallant commander, the first Viscount. Viscount Gough offers quite an embarras de richesses; for mottoes we have, for the arms. Tarita; and for crests, Goojerat, China, Barossa, and lastly, Clear the way, not by any means the least appropriate."
