Disarming as a Condition of Peace. THE proposition made by the Queen of England to the other powers for a general disarming, is the most direct and sensible step towards securing the peace of Europe that has yet been made. The present condition of the nations of Europe is like that of a community whose members have quarrelled all their lives past, and where each man now goes armed to the teeth. This very condition is a warlike one and directly tends to provoke collisions. The different peoples of Europe are filled with a huge mistrust towards each other. Centuries of old feuds, unavenged wrongs, and mutual injuries, have done their work of alienation. If one nation arms, her neighbors must all make haste to do so likewise, lest an undue advantage be gained. If one nation discovers and uses a new and improved weapon, every arsenal in Europe is set to work turning out the new gun. There is a constant endeavor on the part of all to guard against surprise, or being taken at a disadvantage. The consequence is that every power in Europe is saddled with a military establishment which is a terrible tax upon the industries of its inhabitants, and the nations live in a condition of armed peace.

It is evident that no one nation, singly and alone, could safely venture to change this order of affairs, and live as though peace were the normal condition of mankind. To do so would be to place herself at the mercy of any rapacious neighbor who might choose to swoop down upon her. All must disarm or none will do so. But the proposal to disarm needs only to come from a few of the great powers, to be gladly accepted by all the rest. Of course, the extent and the conditions of disarmament would have to be settled by a common treaty of all the powers. But the measure once carried out, would go very far, in our opinion, to secure for Europe an immunity f rom war which she has never before enjoyed. The reduction of these huge military establishments would also remove a mountain-load of expenses from the various Governments, and tend to relieve the people from the evils of ex-

The time when the nations of the earth shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks seems far distant. Yet there are indications, taint though they be, that rulers and people are beginning to realize more vividly than ever before the folly of war. They see that it is wasteful, expensive, oppressive, and that the living in a constant state of preparedness for war and expectation of it, is the surest way to produce it and to prolong its evils. We hail, therefore, the proposal for disarmament, coming from such a power as England. It is a step in the right direction. It tends to turn the current of national affairs towards the channels of peace, and to throw barriers in the way of

Mr. Greeley as Jeff. Davis' Bondsman. THERE is something very significant in the fact of Horace Greeley's being the first man to sign the bail bond of Jefferson Davis. It was from no personal feeling that Mr. Greeley did so, for the two men have little in common, and there are no personal ties between them. Nor was it from any political sympathy with Davis, for Mr. Greeley has none. Its significance arises from the fact, on the contrary, that while Jefferson Davis stands as the representative of the old order of things, the proslavery principle that dominated in the Government of the "Union as it was," Mr. Greeley not inaptly represents the new order of things, the free, forgiving, enfranchising spirit that characterizes the regenerated and reconstructed Union of to-day. Probably no man was more thoroughly traduced and vilified by the old South, that which Jeff. Davis used to know and lead, than Horace Greeley, But that old pro-slavery power has passed away-vanished like the unsubstantial fabric of a dream. In its place we behold the rising of a grander and nobler power, one that is fu□ of life and progress, one that is clement and unvindictive. Mr. Greeley has all his life long been a true friend of the South. The principles he has advocated would have made her great and glorious, beneficent and progressive, and would have saved her from untold and unnumbered wors. In the hour of the humiliation of this old and haughty pro-slavery power, in the person of its chosen leader, Mr. Greeley steps forward on an errand of mercy and forgiveness. The principle of liberty has triumphed, and in the day of its power and glory, he would have it dispense pardon to the fallen and humiliated representative of a bygone era.

As for Jeff. Davis, he has ceased to be of any importance. His imprisonment, though merely nominal, and rather a luxurious entertainment by the Government, has served to keep him before the public eye. He will now vanish. There will be a momentary recognition and welcome by old comrades, and then we shall hear no more of him. While he lives he will be an example of the elemency of a great people. But he belongs to a past era, and the nation is too full of activity and progress, too much absorbed in the grand destiny which opens before it, under the inspiring influences of universal freedom and equality, to pay further attention to him. Let the dead | 120 men, mostly foreigners, with 20 officers, past bury its dead. Horace Greely's signing | chiefly of the South; that in her two years' Jeff. Davis' bail bond closes the old record. It is the writing of the epitaph on the tombstone of the slave power.

The Presidential Candidates.

WE notice that the various journals are already putting forth their favorites for the Presidential nomination, and each State is in fact being impressed with the idea that she must have at least one candidate for the honor. The Boston Traveller of Saturday contains a pleasant article on the subject of the general scramble, which sums up the present prospects in a pretty reliable manner. It

"Not a month passes without bringing up a "Not a month passes without bringing up a new candidate for the Presidency. The last gentieman named for the Republican nomination is General Howard, who has a good military record, and who is at the head of the Freedmen's Bureau; and Mr. Colfax is named for the second Bureau; and Mr. Collax is named for the second place on the same ticket, it being well known that he is after the first place on the regular Republican ticket. As Maine has no aspirant in the field, while Massachusetts is supposed to have six at least, with leave to increase to ten, and then 'carry one' into the White House, it she can, it is only fair that Maine should have one of her most distinguished citizens named for the Presidency, and who may prove the winfor the Presidency, and who may prove the winning man. There are not much above a nundred of our folk after the nomination, and it is within the limits of possibility that some of 'em will not get it. Indeed, we do not see how it could be possible to satisfy them all, even if the Presidency were to be cut up into monthly parts, as was done with the Roman Consulship after it ceased to be worth having. The Democrats keep very quiet on the subject of their Presidential nomination, although they must be making it in little more than a year. One wonders who their man will be. Mr. Johnson is expended, and they will not put themselves to the expense of trying to carve a candidate out of so rotten a plece of timber as he is; and his partner in a losing business, old Mr. Seward, though he expects their nomination, will not get a respectable vote in their Convention. Mr. Vallandigham is not available, and will not be before 1872, at the very earliest. Horatio Sey mour brokedown

Gen, Lee it would not answer for them to nominate—so soon; and the objections that exist to him apply also to that otherwise perfect Democratic chief, Mr. Jefferson Davis. It is scarcely necessary to say that It is scarcely necessary to say that we place no reliance on the report that the Democrats mean to nominate ex-Governor Andrew and Senator Saulsbury, though such a ticket would be a very 'strong' one."

San Francisco Safe.

THE Supreme Court decided, yesterday, adversely to the De Haro claim to the city o San Francisco. The magnitude of this case is not properly appreciated by us in the East, and we can only form an adequate idea of the interest it excited in California, by imagining a similar case in which we of Philadelphia were interested. Suppose that a claim to all that part of Philadelphia east of Broad street were to be made by one family, who were to produce a title direct from William Penn, and we had no statute of limitation running in Pennsylvania; that this claim was at least possible, if not plausible, and was being prosecuted before the Supreme Court of the United States. Should it be decided in favor of the claimants, all the land and houses which we had learned to consider our own would be suddenly taken from us, and we be liable to suits for trespass and the like. While such a suit was pending, it is natural that we should all feel the deepest interest in the result. Such was the case of the De Haros' claim in California. Under a grant from the Mexican Government, the De Haros had the use of the land now occupied by the richest part of San Francisco. They claimed it in fee. The Supreme Court has decided, however, that they were merely tenants at will, and that their tenantcy could not be inherited by their descendants by deed to the original De Haros. On this decision Californians can sleep in peace, and not dread the discovery that all their lands and houses belong to some unknown heirs of a wandering

THE INJUNCTION CASES .- As was anticipated, the Supreme Court yesterday dismissed the application of the States of Georgia and Mississippi, in regard to an injunction restraining the military officers from executing the Reconstruction bill. The ground for the dismissal was a want of jurisdiction. We think that this termination of the case will materially aid reconstruction. The last hope of the South has now been thrown down. They have all along vaguely stated that the Supreme Court would interfere. They have no such pleasing delusion in the future. They must rely on themselves and the justice of the North. The decision given yesterday will act as a powerful stimulus to self-exertion.

THE SEIZURE OF UNITED STATES

POSTAGE STAMPS. Our readers may recollect a telegram from our Washington correspondent, some days ago, mentioning the institution of a suit in the Court of Chancery in Canada by the United States, to recover from the holders a quantity of postage stamps, of the value of $10,500, which, it is alleged, were taken from the Electric Spark-a steamer sailing from New York to New Orleans-at the time of her capture by the Rebel steamer Florida, on the 10th of July, 1864. The booty was sent to England, and after passing through the hands of several persons, was transmitted to John Boyd and George Arthurs, of Toronto, Canada, for sale. Our Government became aware of these facts, and despatched an agent to Toronto, who, after the investigation, laimed the stamps as United States property. On the refusal of the parties to give up the stamps, an injunction was obtained from the Court of Chancery to prevent their disposing of the property, and a commission was issued to John W. Holcomb, of this city, to take evidence in the case. The testimony for the plaintiffs, represented by Mr. George Morphy, of Toronto, Canada, assisted by Mr. Ware, Solicitor of the Post-Office Department, has detailed the means and steps prudential for the interests of the Government, by which the value of every postage stamp in the making is secured to it, and by which in bulk it passes from the vault of the National Bank-note Company to the hands of the user for postal purposes; and in this case it has been directed to show the putting of the stamps in question on the Electric Spark, and the transfer of the bags containing the stamps to the Florida, at the time of the capture.

The testimony of former officers of the Florida gives her sailing from Mobile Bay in the year 1862, having subsequently a crew of cruise she captured thirty-five United States vessels, all of which, with the exception of two or three which were bonded and one sunk, were burned. Great care being taken, however, to ascertain the value of the ships and cargoes destroyed before the work of destruction was commenced, with the view of obtaining their value as prize money; that early in July, 1864, she randown off the Jersey coast where, on the 10th of that month, the Electric Spark, heavily laden with stores and delicacies for the Army of the Southwest, with many passengers and an unusually large mail, came in sight; the Rebel hoisted the English flag, and soon the vessel was under his guns, the mails are transferred to the capter, the passengers put on board an English steamer, and conscious of the danger of permitting his men to riot among the tempting stores, Captain Maffitt scuttled the ship. A few months after-wards, meeting the United States sloop-of-war Wachusetts in the harbor Bahia San Salvador, Brazil, the pirate was captured in defiance of a fair truce stipulation, as is stated incidentally by the gentlemen above referred to.

The alleged release of the officers and men of the Florida from Fort Warren is cited as confirming the statement of the existence of such a truce. Much other testimony has been taken upon incidental points, and it concludes with the offering of the stamps now claimed to a Toronto banking-house in November, 1865, through whose branch and correspondence here information comes to the Government, and these proceedings finally result. The cross-examination, conducted by Mr. W. B. McMurrich, of Toronto, has closely followed every link of the testimony, from which, with other testimony, the defendants expect to sustain their general denial of the allegations of the bill of complaint .- New
