THE DAILY EVENING TELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1867.

AUCTION SALES.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S DAY. The 26th of May, which falls on to-morrow, is set apart in the calendar as sacred to the memory of St. Augustine, the celebrated Apostle of England, who is said to have died on that day, about the year A. D. 605. In the latter part of the sixth century, when Gregory the Great was Pope of Rome, the old Convent of St. Andrew, which stands on the Collian Mount, just in the rear of the Collseum, was presided over by a pious man named Augustine. Pope Gregory selected him and forty other monks belonging to this convent, to carry the gospel into the island of Britain. About this time, Ethelbert, the heathen King of Kent, had married a Christian princess named Bertha, the daughter of Caribert, King of Paris. She took with her to Britain a French bishop as her chaplain, and was permitted the free exercise of her religion in a small chapel outside of Canterbury.

Augustine and his fellow-missionaries landed on the island of Thanet, but the date of this important event has not been preserved, although the old monkish historians assert that it was on the very day that Mahomet first saw the light. The island of Thanet was at that time separated from the mainland by an arm of the sea, and there Augustine remained for some time, at the request of the king, who feared the good monk might seduce him into a profession of Christianity through the agency of the black art. An interview between the monk and the king was soon arranged, and resulted in the former being permitted to commence his missionary labors on the mainland. Augustine with his followers then marched in solemn procession to Canterbury, where they took up their residence. As they went on their way, they carried before them a large silver cross and a banner containing a representation of the Saviour, singing also one of the still famous Gregorian chants.

Augustine commenced his labors at once. and with such success that he baptised King Ethelbert on the following Whit Sunday, June 2, A. D. 597. The example of the king was soon followed by the lesser chieftains and the common people, and on the succeeding Christmas it is said that ten thousand of the Saxons were baptised near Sheerness.

The great work of evangelizing England was thus fairly inaugurated. Subsequently, Augustine is said to have visited Wales and Yorkshire, and after some years passed in zealous preaching to the Pagan islanders, he is reported to have died on the 26th of May, but in what particular year is now a matter of doubt. It was eminently proper that after his death he should have been elevated to the dignity of sainthood.

THE LUXEMBOURG QUESTION. OBFICIAL STATEMENT BY LODD STANLEY IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. In the House of Commons, on the 9th instant, the question of the Conference was brought up by Mr. Labouchere, who asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether, in the event of her Majesty's Government considering it ad-visable to join in any European guarantee with regard to the neutrality or the future political position of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, before the country was committed to any such guarantee the nature of the obligations in which it might involve as would be expialned,
