told where they got it, or anything about it. They thrust it forward. What is the history of hat cuff? It too is brought forward to malead you. You hear nothing of its history. And when that cuff is had away among the rel cs of the past, I trust they will hang up ferger's boot alongside of it. This cuff (exhibiting the original cuif) remains, gentlemen. The blood upon is, without doubt, haman blood. The prisoner says it is human blood. We say it is the blood of Mrs. Miller, and if that be the blood of Mrs. Miller on that cuff the case for the Commonwealth is made out.

Now, gentlemen, I believe I have gone over this case. It has been a protracted one; wearying you, I presume-certainly, wearying me-and I have no disposition to trouble you further. But I could not but feel that I was required to But I could not but feel that I was required to argue this case as it has been argued. In the performance of a duty, whilst it is being performed, the consciousness that you are discharging a duty lightens a man's toil, buoys him up, inspires his thoughts, and sustains him; but when that is ended a recling of warrings. but when that is ended a feeling of weariness begins to come over him, and, as he looks back upon the path he has travelled, then it is, gentlemen, that the excitement, to a certain extent, will die away, and then it is that the emotions of human pity and sympathy will come in upon him. Now, after I have performed my duty, gentlemen—as I believe, tonscientiously—I cannot but sey to you that this poor creature is to be pitted; and aithough gentlemen. that the excitement, to a certain do not profess to feel very great sympathy for him alone, there are surroundings that indeed excite my sympathy. I have been restrained, restrained in a great measure, gentlemen, from talking of this crime as perhaps I should have done, as I otherwise would have done—I say I have been restrained by the presence of this brother, who has been present aiding, assisting, watching, and being just exactly where a bro-ther ought to be, standing by bis own blood and kin, and by the being who was the companion of his childhood. And he would be no brother if he were not here, doing all that he possibly could do for a brother in his last fearful ex-tremity; and for this I honor and respect him, and I say that his very presence here has restrained me from being as severe and as harsh as I would otherwise have been. I must say also, gentlemen, that it has been my desire throughout this investigation to have no possible altereation, as far as I could avoid it, with the counsel for the prisoner. I am sure I didi not wish to disturb their minds, and I know that I did not wish to disturb my own by the slightest altercation; and if there was any seeming wrong on my part I was ready to acknowledge it, to give away anything that I could in order to greater that it could in order to give a way anything that I choice. They have performed their duty faithfully, maniully, and (if I felt disposed to com-plain about it) I might say, with a little severity at times. But I am accustomed to that sort of thing, and when it comes in such small doses as it has on this occasion, I think I can take it without much complaint. There was one thing, however, gentlemen, that struck me at the time, that I could not exactly comprehend. I refer to a remark petu-lantly made, perhaps, and not intended to be of any earthly moment, by the junior counsel for the prisoner, that this was a "blood-and-thunder So far as concerns the application of the first of those two words, you will readily see, gentlemen, there is not the slightest difficulty. It has, indeed, proved a bloody case, and all the circumstances connected with the damning deed could in order to exercise that government and that full command of all cur intellectual faculties that are requisite in a trial like this. And, gentlemen. I must say that all that could have been done for this man has been done—all, I repeat, all has been done by the counsel of his

have been most bloody and pitialbe. The hands of the prisoner, his garments, all his surroundings, even the cane that he made use of in waiking, all these are smeared with blood, and, in a word, there seems to have been drawn over the whole case one hideous veil of blood, which may never be removed. That peaceful home will be pointed out in all future time as the scene of a terrible and bloody tragedy, and never again will its former happy inmates enjoy the comfort and tranquillity of its time-honored walls. The husband is left alone in the world, bereft of the companion of his manhood, and the sister has been deprived of almost her only solace and comfort in the world, for the victim of this deed was a woman of strong mind, who bore up under ordinary misfortune; who, when death had visited her family circle, took upon herself the sorrows of the rest, and, with tortitude and resignation, imparted comfort all around her. But the latter portion of the remark-the "thunder" part of it-was what struck me more forcibly I could not then see its applicability, but I fear, gentlemen, that I begin now to comprehend that. The bright sup shone in these windows, illuminating the courthouse and lighting up your faces, and the faces of the Court and the sel, as we succeeded in obtaining all the light and intelligence that it was vouchsafed to us to obtain in this case. But, to-day, what a con-trast! This day comes upon us cloudy, gloomy, heavily; for about that doomed man the clouds are gathering thick and dark. Already, as they cover the horizon, you can see, and I can see, the vivid lightning flash from the black and ominous-looking mass. It is not for me to attempt to embody in the public prosecutor the wrath of an offended Heaven, and to call upon the lightning to smite the head of that unfortunate man. It is not for me to invoke the thunders of the Omnipotent to execute man's decrees, which, though the work of the Infinite, is done through man's agency. But, gentlemen, I fancy I bear the stern conclusion of this case; yes, I feel and see the storm of retribution that is to overwhelm the murderer. Let him hide himself if he can find a shelter. To but one Rock can he fly for safety either in this world or the next. The storm has broken upon his devoted head, and its thunder is the voice of an angry Deity, the God of Justice, who will speak in thunder tones through your verdict as you are asked to stand up and pronounce the prisoner guilty of murder in the first degree.

BREVET LIEUTENANT-COLONEL WILLIAM RID-DLE .- Upon the remains of this gallant young soldier an inquest was held yesterday afternoon. But one witness was examined, and then the inquest was adjourned until Taursday next. The stimony was this:-John S. Riddle sworn-On Tuesday evening, ay 7th, my brother, now deceased, and my-lf went to the office of Mr. Ovens to see about assessment made out in my brother's name, should have been drawn in the name of mother; when we entered Ovens' place we and it to be a tavern; there was a man behind bar, and in front of it another one taking him; Colonel Riddle asked, "Is this the lice of the Revenue Assessor?" The reply was Yes, sir." He asked if Mr. Ovens was in; the was "Yes; in that room," pointing to an apartment; the witness, with his brother, entered; two men were there, one sitting, the other standing, and each had tumblers of liquor; to one of them my brother said, "You are Mr. Ovens?" The reply was "Yes, sir;" Colonel Ed-dle then stated the object of his visit, which was that the assessment upon his mother's property should be made in her name; the only property includes in the list owned by Colonel

Riddle was a silver watch. Ovens said, "Won't you stand up for your mother?" My brother answered, "Most certainly I stand up for my mother where it is necessary, and on all occasions where it is legal. In this case she is the owner of a house and fur-niture, and wishes the as essment in her own name." Ovens repeated, "You don't want to go back on your mother?" My brother said, "No, Mr. Ovens, I came here to transact a simple matter of business, not to be insulted. I desire to know specifically whether I can fill out this blank form in my mother's name, to which you have put mine." Ovens returned, "Oh, I see; you want to get out of paying your mother's taxes. I believe you to be a loafer." My brother said, "Come, Jack: we can't make Mr. Ovens understand what I wish, and he seems not to desire to understand us." We then went to the front door, and Ovens went behind the bar, and put in a drawer the blank form we had left. My brother turned back, and said, "Mr. Ovens, please let me again see that paper?"

Ovens said, "No; I'll attend to you-I'll fix you." He came round from behind the bar when he said this; he advanced to us, laid his hand on my brother's shoulder, and squaring off, said, "I broiher's shoulder, and squaring off, said. 'I think you are a — leater;' in the meantime the man in the back room, with whom he had been drinking, followed to the door; he laid his hand on Ovens' arm and attempted expostulation;

on Ovens' arm and attempted expostulation;
"What are you taking about, in that way?"
asked he; Ovens raised his fist, saying, "— — you, go away from me; I know what I sm doing:" Ovens then repeated to my brother, "You are a — loafer;" I had not spoken before; I now said to Ovens, "My brother came here on business, not to quarrel; he is no loafer, he is a gentleman;" Ovens insisted, "He is a — loafer, and you are another one, — you;" he at the you are another one, — — you;" he at the same time struck at me with his fist; I warded off the blow and knocked him down; the other men then fell upon us; Ovens got up and came at me again; I knocked him down a second time, but whether with fist or cane I do not know; at that instant my brother seized a plicher and struck at a man named Robert Gamble, who was fighting with Ovens, and feeling about his vest as if for a concealed weapon. About this time the door was opened from the ontside, and two other men ran in; (witness described them;) a general fight ensued; up to this time my brother was uninjured, except by a blow from an umbrella; a man then came behind him with a weapon that I suppose to have been a billy; he struck my brother on the head with it; I fear that I could not identify him; the pitcher fell from my brother's hand, and he sank upon the floor; I knocked the man's head against the door, and then knocked him out of It into the street; some one got the pitcher, and dashed it at me twice; it hit me upon the arm both times; my brother was going out, when the same pitcher was thrown at him; then I saw blood for the first time streaming down his neck; I then received two more blows, one from a pitcher, the other from a billy; I also received whack from a woman, inflicted with a cane. The remains of the deceased will be taken to Pittsburg for interment to-day. The Coroner adjourned the inquest until Thursday afternoon, the presence of the witness whose testimony is above given being indispensable in the formaion of a proper view of the case by the jury of the Coroner.

RECEPTION OF BISHOP STEVENS .- Yesterday afternoon the reverend clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church of this Liocese convened, with the students of the Divinity School, in St. Andrew's Church, to welcome the Right Rev. Bishop

The exercises commenced with the reading of the ante-communion service, participated in by Rev. Dr. Morris, of Germanlown; Rev. Dr. Newton, Rev. Dr. Morton, and Rev. J. W. Claxton. A psalm was then well sung, by a choir composed of students from the Divinity School, when Rev. Dr. Morton arose and delivered the following address of welcome:—

Right Rev. Father in God—It is my pleasant privilege, on behalf of those present and many unable to attend this meeting, to welcome you to your diocese and your home.

We have all missed you much, for, though during your absence we have enjoyed efficient and acceptable Episcopal services, still, no Bishop is as our own Bishop, and we rejoice that you are now among us. Our eyes followed you anxiously in your various wanderings abroad, and we were glad to see you turn your back upon the smoke, fog, and foment of London, and recognize you in the sunny south of France, and on the border of the Mediterrabut happiest of all to find you are now in our midst.

We listened anxiously to the various reports regarding your health, but we want no more information on that subject, satisfied by your presence that your long absence from home has been productive of radical improvement, and that there is every reason to believe that you will be equal to all demands that can fairly be made on your time and attention.

Once more, Right Rev. Father in God, I bid you, in behalf of my brethren, a cordial welcome to your home.

The Bishop then replied at much length, and was listened to with profound attention. He thanked the reverend brethren for this cordial welcome, and would have been home again long since, only from the express order of his attending pysicians. His stay, however, had not proved unprofitable, as, in Italy and other places, he had seen sufficient of other teachings to convince him more armly than ever that the tenets and teachings of the Protestant Episcopa Church were the proper ones to preach and advance among the people, and he had come home with a firm purpose of applying him-elf to the holy work with renewed vigor and zeal, and he hoped the entire clerical body would unite with him. Again he thanked them most heartily for their expressions of kindness and good will

Rev. Dr. Morton then proceeded to the Com-munion Service proper. The Bishop consecrated the elements, and the Holy Communion was administered by the same four reverend gentlemen who read the service of the Ante-

The congregation was then dismissed, and inited to reassemble in the vestry of the church, where a pleasant time was passed in conversational religious matters, and the thorough rejoicing among the clergy made manifest at the safe return of their beloved Bishop.

THE PENNSYLVANIA MEDICAL SOCIETY .- This association will hold its eighteenth annual session in Pittsburg, on June 12, at 4 P. M. The delegates are allowed the usual commuta-tion of railroad fare by application to the permanent Secretary. Ample arrangements have been made for a cordial reception by the Pittsburg doctors.

The ex officio delegates are Doctors William B.
Atkinson, W. Maybury, and Wintbrop Sargent,
The delegates to the Philadelphia County
Medical Society are Drs. D. Hayes Agnew,
James Ash, Charles S. Boker, John Bell, William H. Bunn, Robert Burns, James M. Corse, James Cummiskey, Levi Curtis, Richard J.
Durglison, H. Y. Evans, Albert Fricke, A. H.
Fish, Lewis P. Gephard, Amos W. Griffiths, H.
St. C. Asb, J. H. Smally, J. Huckel, Nath. L.
Hatfield, A. G. B. Hinkle, Thomas Hay, William N. Johnson, John F. Lamb, Richard Lee, William L. Knight, Andrew Nebinger, Ed. Schofield, E. B. Shanleigh, Losenh, Leidy, Samuel, D. E. B. Shapleigh, Joseph Leidy, Samuel D. Gross, and J. G. Stetler.

AN ATTEMPT TO KILL .- Last evening, Mr. John Quige, residing at No. 1202 Chesnut street, made an assault upon his wife, and a girl living in the family, with a batchet. His wife re-ceived a severe blow on the back of the head but escaped further injury by locking herself in the second-story front room. Reserve Officer Parker was called in, and when he got inside of the house he found Quigg up stairs chopping the stairway baluster, he having commenced this work at the foot of the stairway and con-tinued to the third story.

Quigg, seeing the officer, entered a back room and locked the door, which he refused to open. Parker broke it open, and, dodging a blow simed at him with the hatchet, arrested Quigg and took him to the Central Station. Quigg had nearly chopped the door down where his wife was before the officer got to the house. Mrs. Quigg is not dangerously hurt.

HOMOSOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY .- At the afternoon session the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, W. Williamson, M. D., Philadelphia; Vice-Presidents—J. H. Warsden, M. D., Adams county, W. J. Blakely, M. D., Elk county; Recording Secretary, Bushrod W. James, M. D., Philadel-

Secretary, Bushrod W. James, M. D., Philadelphia: Corresponding Secretary, Robert J. McClatchey, M. D., Philadelphia: Treasurer, H. H. Hoffman, M. D., Allegheny county; Censors—R. Ross Roberts, M. D., Dauphin county; Coates Preston, M. D., Chester county, J. C. Burgher, M. D. Allegheny county.

In the evening, at 8 o'clock, the annual address was delivered by James B. Wood, M. D., the retiring President, and was listened to with deep attention by a large and interested auditory. The Society then went into active session, after which the members and invited guests repaired to the Continental, and partook of a bountiful supply of refreshments.

The American Institute of Homesopathy meets in New York on Wednesday next, and after the adjournment of the State Society most of its members will proceed to New York to attend the sessions of the National Institute.

GRAND LODGE OF THE AMERICAN PROTESTANT Association .- The annual session of this body for the State of Pennsylvania is now being held at their hall, in Locust, above Broad. The Order is well represented by delegates from all portions of the State. Yesterday re-ports were read and considered, and new members admitted. The election of officers on Monday resulted in the selection of Frederick Scheidt as Grand Master; James Hutchinson, Vice-Grand Master; T. S. Block, Secretary; and Jairret Craig, Treasurer. The session will occupy the greater portion of the week.

RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION .- Last evening the greeers and provision dealers of the city met at Diligent Hall, in order to perfect an organization under the charter procured last winter from the Legislature. The society is intended for the mutual profit and protection of the members, the articles of incorporation allowing the establishment of a wholesale pur-chasing agency for the benefit of the shareholders. By-laws were adopted, fully covering the objects of the Association, and considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings of the meeting, which was fully attended.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW CHESNUT STREET THEATRE. - This establishment was closed last evening, in order to have another dress rehearsal of the great new spectacle called Cendrillon, which will be ready for public representation to-night positively.

The new scenic sensation has been gotten up at a cost of nearly ten thousand dollars, under the direction of Mr. Lewis Baker, who has determined to be present and direct each performance. Mr. Baker produced [Cendrilion at his own New York Theatre last season, and it had an immense run, and was quite as popular as the Black Orook for some weeks. The Cendriton to be produced at the Chesnut far exceeds In elegance of scenery and cast of characters the New York representation. Miss Josie Orton, Miss Antie Wood, Miss Julia Daly, Mrs. E. N. Thayer, Messrs. Sol. Smith, Walter Lennox, and Mr. J. W. Jennings, and others, will render the dramatic portions of the new fairy play, Mad'lle Theresa Wood, Lena Windell, and Annie longer, assisted by an immense corps de battet, will execute the terpsichorean scenas of the new piece. Seats can be secured at any time. Cendrillon will no doubt be more beautiful than any show piece ever presented to the Philadelphia public. The scenery, as far as we bave seen it, certainly exceeds in marvellous effects and singular beauty anything ever exhibited in this country. The ballet, under Pro-fessor A. Boldy, is in admirable condition, thoroughly disciplined, and containing a number of favorite artistes as monitors. ARCH STREET THEATRE. - Young and old people will be pleased to learn that Mr. G. L. Fox presents his new pantomime, called Little Boy Blue, to-night. Mr. Fox assumes the clown's ise and makes fun out of everything. His little brother "Charley" assists as "Pantaloon," and helps "Jack, D. D.," out of his many disturbing discomfitures. Miss Louisa Browne enacts the part of "Columbine," and Master T. Caligue is the gallant "Harlequin." The final scene of Mr. Fox's new pantomime exceeds in brilliancy the last scene of Jack and Gul, which was so much admired last winter. Little Boy Baue is full of the most surprising tricks, which will both astonish and delight all beholders. Our young readers will be gratified to learn that Mr. Fox's new pantomime will be performed on Saturday afternoon.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE. -Mr. Joseph Jefferson made his rentree here last evening in his wonderful assumption of "Rip Van Winkle," in Boucicault's dramatization of Washington Irving's famous legend. We are pleased to note that Miss Susan Denin has been engaged expressly for the role of "Gretchen," poor "Rip's" wife. Among our comedians, Mr. Jefferson stands second to none; and his acting in Rip Van Winkle has been pronounced all over the world as superior to anything presented on the mimic stage. No one should fail to see Jeff, in his great part.

AMERICAN THEATRE.—The great "Demon Dance" from the Black Crook will be repeated every evening this week, together with many burlesques, songs, and dances by the Variety Troupe.

THE MENDELSSOHN SOCIETS'S CONCERT .- The concert to be given at the Academy of Music on Society, in aid of the Southern Rehef Fund, will be a great musical event. A splendid pro-gramme has been prepared, and will be ad-mirably rendered. The following well-known artists will appear, in connection with the Mendelssohn Society: - Mr. Carl Gaertner, violinist; Mr. H. G. Thunder, planist; Theodore Habeiman, the popular tenor; Mrs. Behrens, Miss Orlina Cunnington, Miss Blackburne, Miss Forbes, Mr. George Bishop, and a grand orchestra; leader, Dr. Cunnington; conductor, Jean Louis.

THE RENTZ CONCERT this evening, at Musical Fund Hall, promises to be a most choice and brilliant affair, the programme being composed of morecaux from the best composers, including Mozari. Meyerbeer, Balfe, Perring, Vieuxtemps, and others, and the performers of decided attility. Besides Mr. Rentz himself, Wenzell Kopta, the young violin virtuoso, who created such a favorable impression at the recent Wolfsohn testimonial, will assist, and with the Misses Rentz, Thomas, Madame Da Costa Jones, and Messrs. Escouboue and Koenig, a fine entertainment may be expected, HARTZ, THE ILLUSIONIST, will appear in a very attractive programme this evening. In addition to his usual list of wonders, he will tonight introduce his Living Human Head, which is said to be far superior to the Sphynx trick of Robert Houdin, as performed by Helier and others. To-morrow (Wednesday) evening Mr. Hartz will take a benefit, and make his farewell appearance.

THE BENEFIT of Mr. Owen Marlowe occurs at the Academy of Music to-morrow (Wednesday) The bill arranged for the occasion an unusually attractive one. Mr. and Miss Richings will appear, as will the Wheatley Dramatic Association, Mr. F. Mordaunt, and other favorite performers.

Assembly Buildings,-Messrs, Edward and Jerome Lubin still draw good houses at the Assembly Buildings. Their performances of magic are excellent, HORTICULTURAL HALL.-This magnificent Hall, on Broad street, the largest music hall in the United States, is now open, and the Horticultural Fair is quite attractive.

AN AGRICULTURAL FAIR will be held at the Agricultural Fair grounds at Norristown, on Wed-nesday and Thursday of this week. The proceeds will be devoted to the Soldiers' Monument Asso-

AT CARNCROSS & DIXEY's this evening, in addition to the usual varied programme, the bur-lesque opera of the Bohemian Giri will be pre-sented, and all the vocal gems will be sung. A COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT will be tendered to Colonel John K. Murphy, at the Academy of Music, next Saturday evening. MR. FRANK MORDAUNT will be the recipient of a complimentary benefit next Thursday week, at the Academy of Music,
