CITY INTELLIGENCE.

[FOR ADDITIONAL LOCAL ITEMS SEE OUTSIDE PAGES]

SPECIAL SESSION .- Common Council met in special session yester is atternoon, to consider Select Council bits, the principal item which led to the meeting being the resolutions passed by the latter body tendering to the President the hospitality of the city. The attendance was as good as on any regular session.

The resolutions tendering the city hospitality to President Johnson were called up first in order

Mr. Harper queried whether the President would stay in Philadelphia long enough to ren-der the appointment of a Committee necessary. Mr. Harcock said that if this was known, and the President would remain here over night, he the President would remain here over hight, he was in favor of the resolutions. The President was conrecus to the Council Committee on Lesgue Island, and the city should recognize that affability; but if Mr. Johnson simply de-stred to go to New York, Mr. Hancock would not incite him. The Counceling Bailroad was not invite him. The Connecting Bailroad was built to shorten the route from Washington to New York. If the President desired to go to New York, let him have the full benefit of the short route. (Laughter.) Mr. Evans moved to table the resolutions.

This fell, the yeas being 6-Eager, Earnest, Evans, Mactague, Shoemaker, and Wagner-all Republicans. The pays were 26. Mr. Littleton said that it made no difference whether the President intended to come here of not. The resolutions were intended to invit him, and it is perfectly proper to do so. The Committee on League Island were received by the President in the most polite and gentlemanly manner possible. It is the exhibition of a very poor spirit in the Councils of Philadelphia to refuse him the courtesy which in all honor and willingness he extended to the official representatives of this city, when charged with so important and grave a subject as the procuring at eague island the site of a naval depot for the United States.

Mr. Wagner moved to postpone the subject. Upon it there would, he said, necessarily be de-bate. Other Select Council bills weeded no dis-cussion, and should, therefore, be considered.

Mr. Harper thought Councils should first know that the President was coming. Find that out, and the resolutions would then be in order. In the absence of such information he favored postponement.

Mr. Hetzell said that the special meeting had been called to consider these resolutions. Why, then, postpone them? The President would pass through the city. That is all Councils should know. Every Federal Executive who has ever passed through the city has received the barren, formal ceremony of an official welcome, and to Andrew Johnson, the present President of the United States, such a reception should be given. Mr. Hetzell, therefore, would oppose the motion to postpone, Mr. Evans said that he would welcome to Philadelphia any man who would be an honor and credit to it. Such a man is not Andrew Johnson. He won his position by knavery. He has pardoned those who murdered the best fiesh and blood of the land. He has taken by the hand the men who heid Northern soldiers lan-Northern pap. He has trampled in the dust the flag he should have defended and supported. He has demoralized and degenerated the whole community, and if to-day Andrew Johnson had his deserts he would be in the place of John Surratt. Every place of position or trust he has etrayed for the purposes of personal aggran-lizement, and if it was the last act of his life betrayed for the Mr. Evans would scorn to offer hospitality to the man who pardoned the murderers who starved Union men in Rebel prisons.

Mr. Dillon said that the question which had been by the Republicans resolved into a political question, had been called up in no political light. It was to the President of the United States that the reception was proposed to be given, and no political grounds should have en introduced. The assaults made upon Mr. Johnson were unprovoked, uncalled for, and untrue. The starvation of Union prisoners had place in the debate on the simple resolutions invitation. That our men were starved in Southern prisons we know, and these men would not have been there had Edwin M. Stanton and Abraham Lincoln consented to the exchange of the Rebel prisoners in our hands. It was to this refusal to so exchange the Rebel prisoners for the Union men that the results of Andersonville and Libby are due. Mr. Wagner bitterly denied this, and said that the reason why a cartel of exchange was not effected was because the Rebel Government refused to acknowledge our colored soldiers, whom the Union Government was bound to protect. There the blame rests, and there it should be placed. Mr. Wagner said that the President was not coming to Philadelphia. To assist in certain ceremonies he is going to Boston, and Councils are only disagreeably pushing themselves before their constituents in this invitation. We never had such a President before, and he hoped in God we never would have such an one again. We never had a President who made it his business to travel all through the country for the purpose of being entertained, and to make little speeches; and Mr. Wagner hoped no such unnecessary and Mr. wagner nobed no such unnecessary flunkeyism would be perpetrated as to invite Andrew Johnson to this city. Mr. Mershon opposed the resolution. To-day, he said, if Andrew Johnson had not been Vice President of the United States, the martyred Abraham Lincoln would be living. Andrew Johnson has the bloodstains of the murdered Lincoln upon his forehead. Why should the hospitalities of a Union-loving city be given to a traitor President? If Councils invite Andrew Johnson to Philadelphia, the whole community will hiss upon the members who vote for such resolution. If Andrew Johnson goes to Boston, he may go through without stopping. "It he does," said Mr. Mershon, "thank God, and I will give him a kick to help him along. That's my respect for the man." Mr. Harper recalled the Chamber to its sense of propriety, by reminding them that their simple duty was to consider a resolution of invitation to the President. That he was responsible for the murder of Mr. Lincoln was a statement Mr. Harper was grieved and pained to hear. He hoped that the debate would now take its regular course, and that, as there was no necessity for passing the resolutions immediately, the question would be postponed until Thursday, and in the interim the fact be ascertained whether the President would come to Philadelphia or not. Mr. Evans did not wonder that the Demo cratic members indorsed President Johnson. At last he knew where to find these members. Birds of a feather flock together, and they were well fit to be the friends of the man who should be in the cell of Surratt, and who was ready to be bought by English gold. Fortunately for the Government, the noble band of Union men in the nation's capital, and the liberated blacks of the South, will sustain the Government; when the memory of Andrew Johnson and his supporters passes into mcrited oblivion, the names of the Union heroes will live in history and in the hearts of the children who will arise to call them blessed. Mr. Hetzell replied with considerable spirit. when Mr. Wagner said that, to stay further hot blood, he would call the previous question. The call was not sustained, and the debate Tan on Mr. Heizell advocated the adoption of the re-solutions from a simple sense of duty to a great office. The question had no personal it was a mere question of receiving the Presi-dent of the United States, and politically, municipally, and commercially the city should wel-come to its doors the officer, without reference to the man who fills the station.

bate, and throwing aside the personalities which were actuating members, they should act as representatives of a great city. Mr. Simpson deprecated the speech of Mr. Evans, but said that as the President of the United States is not coming to Division the States.

United States is not coming to Philadelphia, but Andrew Johnson is going to Boston to dedicate a Masonic temple, he would not vote for the resolutions.

Mr. Hancock said that they were politicians. They came to Councils as politicians, and they lived by politics. When he came to the Chamber it was to vote for the resolutions, but since the Democrais had made it a party question he would meet it as a party man, and vote to refuse the hospitality. If we receive Andrew Johnson we may as well, a few days after, receive Jefferson Davis, and show him around. The Repub-lican party is opposed to Andrew Johnson, and the Republicans, the citizens of Philadelphia, who send Councilmen to regulate the interests of the city, do not desire hospitality shown to Andrew Johnson.

Mr. Cameron said that he did not live by politics, and signed the call because he believed that he should honor the President, and would so vote. As to politics entering the Chamber, he said that while he regretted the introduction, it came not from the Democrats, but from the Republicans.

Mr. Ray said that he came to the Chamber to vote for the invitation to the President of the United States, not to Andrew Johnson.

The motion to postpone fell. Yeas-Messus, Eager, Earnest, Evans, Han-cock, Harper, Mactague, Martin, J. C. Ogden, Oram, Shane, Shoemaker, Simpson, Smith, Wasner and Marcer, 15.

Nays-Messrs, Armstrong, Barnes, Calhoun, Cameron, Dillon, Dresbach, Gill, Harrison, Hctzeil, Kennedy, Little, Littletoo, F. Martin, W. D. Martin, Mershon, Mitton, Ray, Thomson and Tyron, 20.

Mr. Wagner moved to adjourn. Lost-nays Mr. Byans moved to indefinitely postpone.

This was also voted down-yeas, 11; nays, 25. Mr. Wagner said that to welcome the Presi-dent would be only to welcome a man the people despise and loathe. What sophistry to welcome a man we have no respect for ! Members should pause long and well before voting on such a question.

Mr. Hetzell finally called the previous question. The call was sustained, but on putting the question, "Shall the main question be now put?" no quorum answered, the Republicans

A call of the house produced no quorum, and while Mr. Hetzell was calling the names of members standing without the bar, Mr. Marcer adjourned the Chamber.

A Row 'on a STEAMBOAT.—On Friday morn-ing last the steamer Jersey Blue started from Ches-nut street wharf, having on board a number of ladles and gentten en, who were to speed the day at Penns-grove. Everything passed off pleasantly until the return. When opposite Timber Creek a young man named Charles Hoy approached a gentieman and hdy, and asked the latter if abe would indulge in the mazes of the dance. She refused, owing to being tired. The gentieman took offense at some-thing which it is alleged Hoy said, and knocked him down with a cane. Hoy then went below to the bar, took a drink, and told a friend that he had been knocked down on the upper deck. INCREASED APPROPRIATIONS DESIRED .- Last evening, a convention of firemen held a meet-ing in the Hibernia Engine House, to petition Councils for an increase of appropriation from $2000 to $3000 per annum to steam fire-engine companies. Some thirty companies were represented. A committee of five was appointed to prepare a memorial, and to ascertain the expense of running a steam fire-engine, to be submitted to Councils. After a free expression of views, the Convention adjourned to reassemble on next Monday evening.

CHURCH DEDICATION .- This afternoon, at 5] o'clock, the chapel and school-house of the Episcopal Church of St. John the Baptist, Ger-mantown (Hev. William N. To morrow night the Bishop will officiate in the Church of the Evangelist (Rev. Samuel Durborow, rector), Catharine street, near Seventh.

THE OLD BANK BUILDING .- An attempt was made at the last session of Congress to provide means to put the Pennsylvania Bank building in a condition to be used for a bonded warehouse, but the effort was not successful. The structure remains in the partially dilapidated condition in which it was left when the project to convert it into a post office was abandoned. Property of such value, and in such a location, should be made tenantable, that the Government might derive a revenue from it.
