WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1867.

The Latest Phase of Executive Usurpation.

Whatever may be the result of the new agitation which is being sprung upon the country in connection with the subject of reconstruction, it will be justly chargeable to President Johnson. If we are to have a session of Congress in July, he is the cause of it. If new legislation shall be found necessary, he is at the bottom of it. If distrust and anxiety shall displace confidence and hope in the publie mind, he is responsible for it. If business shall thereby be stagnated, he must be charged with it. If the great work of reconstruction shall itself be delayed and put back, so that the late Rebel States shall take no part in the Presidential election of 1868, he must bear the odium of it.

The Reconstruction law passed by Congress was a fair settlement of the whole question. The people were satisfied with it. The country looked upon it as a finality. The South was disposed to accept it. The work of restoration was proceeding apace under it. No complaint, except from the merest handful of factionists, was made against it. Quiet, confidence, and hope for the future were taking possession of the public mind. At this juncture President Johnson steps in and nullifies the law. He puts a construction upon it which deprives it of all power and vitality. It is an insult to the intelligence of the country to pretend that this is anything else but a mere dodge to nullify the law. He flatly coutradicts his own recorded interpretation of the law. He contradicts what everybody knows was the purpose of the law. There is no chance to dodge on this question. The object of the law was notorious, and acknowledged by all parties. The pretense of putting a new construction on it is a mere pretense, and the people so regard it.

The true state of the case is that Mr. Johnson has made up his mind to nullify the law. He means that the work of reconstruction according to the popular will, as expressed by Congress, shall cease. He refuses to execute the law. That is the long and short of the

What is the remedy for this state of things? Shall new laws be passed? What law could be more explicit than the present one? Read the President's veto messages, and see how clearly he saw and understood its provisions then. Can any law be passed which a tricky lawyer like Stanbery could not construe to suit his chief? The fault lies not with the present law, but with the President's disposition to enforce it. Congress may pass laws, but it cannot execute them. That is the work of the President, and if he refuses to do it, no heaping of legislation upon the statute-books will help the matter in the least. We come, then, to a dead-lock, which must be removed, or the Government cannot go on. This is the aspect of the affair which now looms up before us. It is useless to pass laws, to be construed away by the Attorney-General.

The country may as well look this matter fully in the face. It has been trifled with by an arrogant Executive, who desires to make his own will law, long enough. It is high time that this functionary was taught that he is the servant and not the master of the people. Under a guise of mock humility and hypocritical devotion to the Constitution, he is constantly venturing upon exhibitions of contempt for the fundamental principles of the Government, and upon usurpations of power, such as have never been witnessed in this country. He has tried to usurp legislative functions ever since he came into the Presidential office, and he now proposes to deliberately nullify a solemn act of Congress, which by his oath he is bound to execute. We grant that this is audacious, but it is an execrable audacity, which should arouse the indignation of every man who values a free government, or would see it perpetuated.

That Attempt to Choke Inquiry. FREDERICK A. VAN CLEVE still holds the position of Assistant City Solicitor, a position to which he is not in law entitled, and to which he was elected by a shameful subterfuge. The Common Council sent the case to the Committee on Law, a species of legislative cemetery in which uncomfortable motions are hastily interred. But in the present case we intend to have a resurrection of the motion, and let the public know the reason why. At a meeting held of that Committee, a report was agreed upon stating that Van Cleve was not legally entitled to his post. For this they deserve no credit. Any student, with the simplest knowledge of the principles of law, as laid down by Blackstone, could give such a decision. But although they agreed on a report, yet before it can be presented it must be signed by a majority of the members of the Committee. The Committee on Law consists of eleven members. Six signatures, therefore, are necessary. The responsibility rests with those who do not sign; and as we cannot tell who have not given their signatures, we publish the Hat of the Committee:-

ally, Have you signed the report; and if not, have you any reason, excuse, or desire to shield a member of a clique which prevents your doing so? Have you signed, Mr. Wagner? Have you, Mr. Hodgson? And you, Mr. Cattell? What is your reason, if any, for refusing, Mr. Harper, or Mr. Stokes, or Mr. Hetzell, or Mr. Evans? We want to let the public know where the responsibility rests, and each gentleman who is not seeking to shield the guilty owes it to himself to let that fact be known.

This matter has been in the hands of the Committee for nearly three weeks. It is time that either they report or else be discharged. It is idle to let it rest with them any longer. If they desired to report they could have done so before, and if they don't want to, why let it rest buried? We hope some member will at the meeting to-morrow call for the report, and, if it is not forthcoming, that a motion to discharge the Committee will be made, and on that motion the yeas and nays will be called. We want to see each member make a record, so far as this question is concerned; and when the record is made, the readers of THE EVENING TELEGRAPH will be familiar with it.

How Philadelphia Appears Abroad. YESTERDAY we commented freely on the action of Common Council in defeating the resolution extending the hospitalities of our city to the President of the United States. We frankly expressed our deliberate opinion as to how all right-thinking citizens would view such conduct, and felt shame for our city because of the appearance conveyed to strangers that all the ancient courtesies of Philadelphia had fied when she was incorporated. It appears that our fears were well grounded, and the papers in various parts of the country are already commenting on the vulgar rudeness of our Common Council. We see in several of the New York papers this morning frank expressions of opinion on the subject, and without distinction of party, all condemn it as a wanton and uncalled-for exhibition of boorishness, which is calculated to hurt no one but those who aided the success of the manouvre.

In all our exchanges we find but one opinion, and that is unqualified condemnation. There is one mistake, however, which they all make, and which it would be unjust not to rectify. They all say that the Common Council passed the resolution, and that the Select Branch defeated it. All of our readers know that the reverse is the case. It was passed by the Upper Chamber with but three votes in oppoposition, while it was defeated in the Lower Branch by a number of members refusing to answer to their names. The New York Tribune, whose strong hostility to the President is well known, states editorially:-

"A resolution to extend a welcome to the President, when he passes through Philadelphia on his way to Boston, was defeated in the Select Council of the former city on Monday. This is a senseless act of discourtesy to the Chief Magistrate of the nation, and can only do mischief. Philadelphia owes it to herself to reconsider this hasty action."

In that opinion we most heartily join, and feel confident that at the regular meeting to-morrow the disgraceful action of Monday will be reconsidered. The New York Times also expresses the views of all gentlemen who have given the subject a thought. It deals without gloves with the conduct of the absentees, and exposes their folly and rudeness in an article on "Philadelphia Manners:"-

"When the Common Council of Philadelphia passed a resolution the other day tendering the civilities of the city to the President, there were some persons, here as well as elsewhere, rash enough to conclude that the municipal authorities were gradually outgrowing their village habits. The boorish way in which they had formerly treated the President made them, one might have thought, sufficiently ridiculous for at least a twelvementh to come. And so, apparently, thought a majority of the Common Council. There is, however, a second municipal chamber in Philadelphia. And on Monday the Selectmen of that body, as they are called, were convened in order to take action on the resolution of Common Council, A warm debate ensued; and the resolution was practically rejected, by the opposition retiring and leaving the chamber without a quorum.

"It is one of the advantages of free institutions that no one in Pennsylvania, or any other Commonwealth, from a Governor down to a Selectman, can be prevented from making an ass of himself if he chooses to do so. It is an inalienable right. The Masonic Fraternity of Boston asked the President as a brother of the craft to join them in a public ceremonial. The President accepted the invitation, probably without thinking and without caring whether his journey should take him within the bailiwick of the Philadelphia Selectmen or We dare say, after his experience of not. their boorish incivility on a former occasion, he would have been content to have it so arranged that he should avoid the City of Brotherly Love altogether. Its attractions are not so overpowering in hot, foggy weather like the present, that either a President or any other non-resident need include it, at all hazards, in a midsummer tour. There are very many who would, any day, prafer a trip by sea direct from the Potomac river to Boston harbor, even to being made the recipient of a string of resolutions from every Common Council between the two points.

"Boston holds political opinions quite as advanced as those of Philadelphia. But in the capital of Massachusetts it is not deemed necessary by the majority, in the maintenance of their constituency, to insult the Cnief Magistrate of the United States, and along with him. on this occasion at least, the influential society whose guest he is. Boston, therefore, extends its hospitalities to the President, and has thus shown how much nearer to the stature of a metropolitan city it has grown than the more pretentions provincial town whose eccentricities make it so ridiculous." While we are strongly inclined to feel indignant at the manner in which our city is spoken of, yet after a minute's thought we cannot deem the remarks of the Times unjustifiable. We see how we appear to ourselves by our actions, and to a stranger the conduct of Councils appears in a worse aspect. Cemmon Connoll is supposed to represent the We ask each one of these gentlemen person- people of Philadelphia, and hence, we cannot be indignant at our being held accountable for its actions. The mistake is in supposing that the members of that body do in any sense whatever really represent the citizens. In reality, they do directly the reverse. They misrepresent them on every pocasion. Yet we cannot be indignant at strangers who judge us by our legal powers. The fault rests with us in allowing such men to attain such posi-

It is nor improbable that Maximilian has been two weeks in his grave. The advices from Mexico relative to his trial are conflicting. From one quarter we learn that the trial had been postponed till the 4th Instant, while from others we have information that it was concluded on the night of the 3d instant, and the Emperor sentenced to be executed the following morning. It is to be hoped, for the sake of humanity, and in the interests of republicanism in Mexico and elsewhere, that the first report is the correct one, and that moderate counsels may prevail and the Emperor's life be spared.

THE city of Tampico, in Mexico, is said to have pronounced in favor of Santa Anna as Provisional President of the Republic. That Santa Anna has all the time been plotting for the instigation of a new rebellion admits of no doubt, but as the above pronunciamento has only reached this city by private hands, the news needs confirmation. Should it be true, we hope that the movement will be promptly and energetically suppressed.

Tun Cabinet yesterday again considered the method of restraining the action of the Military Commanders, A general definition of their powers, or want of power, will probably be issued, with general instructions, and, we presume, special revocations of certain military
