SAYINGS OF DR. BUSHWHACKER. Origin of Familiar Phrases-Clipped English, Etc.

The author of "The Sparrowgrass Papers" dedicates his new book-"The Sayings of Dr. Bushwhacker and Other Learned Men"to Mr. Verplanck. He also indicates, in a genial preface, that while the original "Sparrowgrass" reprints fugitive pieces or writes new ones, half-a-dozen other funny men are the authors or the translators of some of the good things in the volume—such as the "Daily Hints to Epicurean Smokers," "Was Champagne known to the Ancients 917 "A French Breakfast," and an imitation of Macaulay's "History of England." But Mr. Cozzens' own contributions are spicy, instructive, and altogether acceptable.

In "Phrases and Filberts," he remarks that "it sometimes happens at the end of a dinner, when jokes and walnuts are cracked together, that the paternity of some trite quotation is put in question, and at once the wit of the whole company is set wool-gathering," and

"If every printing office had a case filled with popular phrases arranged in the manner of types, it would save much manual labor, and the compositor would be surprised to find how often he had occasion to use them. For so inextricably are the 'short sentences drawn from long experience' entangled in the meshes of languages, that to eliminate them would be like drawing out of a carpet the threads that form the pattern. A few of these phrases, usually found floating in the currents of ordinary conversation, will be sufficient to consider in a paper like this: if we were to include those embraced in literature and oratory, it would require foolscap enough to cover the sands of Egypt, and an inkstand as large as one of the pyramids. Not being disposed to make such an investment in stationery at present, we shall only play the literary chiffonier. and hook a few scraps from the heaps of talk we meet with every day." Here are some specimens:-

ORIGIN OF QUOTATIONS.

"Mr. John Timmins, the broker, says of that stock, 'there is a wheel within a wheel,' without giving 'Paradise Lost,' Young's 'Night Thoughts,' and the Prophet Ezekiel credit for a phrase which may have saved him some thousands; and when he tells his boon companions at the club, that as for his wife, who is rather inclined to be extravagant, 'he would deny her nothing,' he does not say how much he owes to Samson Agonistes for the words he makes use of. When he reaches his house, Mrs. Timmins takes him to task for coming home at such an hour of the night, in such a state;' to which he replies, in a gay and festive manner:—'My dear, "To err is human—to for-give, divine,"; from Pope's essay on criticism: to which Mrs. Timmins answers in a snappish way, 'Timmins, 'there is a medium in all things''' (from Horace). Mr. T., disliking the tone in which this quotation is de-livered, 'snatches a fearful joy' (from the 'Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College'), by saying he does not intend, in his house, to have 'the grey mare prove the better horse' (from Prior's epilogue). This only 'adds fuel to the flame' (from Milton's 'Sansom'), and Mrs. T. observes that if 'we would only see ourselves as others see us' (from Burns), it would be better for some people; that ever since he had joined that club 'a change had come o'er the spirit of her dream' (from Byron); that when she trusted her happiness to him she had 'leaned upon a broken reed' (from Young's 'Night Thoughts,' III, and Isaiah xxxvi, 6), and winds up a long lecture with the reflection that 'evil communications corrupt good manners' (from 1st Corinthians 33). This last expression exasperates Mr. Timmins, and he asks Mrs. T., as he takes off his suspenders, 'to whom she alludes ?'

"If we turn from the frescoed bedchamber of Mrs. Timmins to the whitewashed kitchen of Jim Skiver, the shoemaker, we find language not less elevated. Jim throws a leg of mutton upon the table and says: 'There, Mary, I had "to take Hobsen's choice," although Jim had neither read the 509th Spectator, nor knew that Hobson's epitaph had been written by Milton. Jim, not 'having the fear of' Beau-mont and Fletcher 'before his eyes' (Romans 3: 18), says, if he can 'catch that man wot gave Bill Baxter a black eye the day afore his weddin' he'll 'lamm him' (King and No King, act V, scene 3). To which Mary replies: 'I thought somethin' would happin': "the course of true love never did run smooth'" (Midsummer Night's Dream, act I, scene 1), and Jim responds, That's so; and they've put off the weddin' so often that it seems kind o' "hopin' agin' hope"' (Romans 4:18). Jim thinks after they've had a 'snack' (Pope and Dryden), they had better go see the Siamese Twins 'twins tied by nature; if they part they die (Young's 'Night Thoughts'); puts on 'a hat not much the worse for wear' ('John Gilpin'), 'dashes through thick and thin' (same authority and 'Hudibras'), and after he has seen the Siamese, requests to see the 'Lilliputian King' (from 'Gulliver's Travels')

How much language would be left us it these estrays were returned to their lawful owners, is a question. How could we console the dying if we had to give up to Gay's twenty-seventh Fable the phrase, 'while there is life there's hope?' and what could we say to the good in misfortune if we had to restore to Prior's ede, 'Virtue is her own reward?' The shopkeeper who ends his long list of fancy articles with 'and other articles too tedious to mention,' make use of a sentence as old as the Latin language, and we would take the point from Byron's hit at Coleridge if we were to replace in 'Garrick's Epilogue on Leaving the Stage, 'A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind.' So, too, must Goldsmith's Hermit lose 'man wants but little here below,' if Young's 'Night Thoughts,' IV, had its own property; and 'all the jargon of the schools,' from Burns' first epistle to J. Lapraik must be rendered up to Prior's 'Ode on Exodus, which has a prior claim to it.

"We have to go back to Thomas a Kempis for 'man proposes but God disposes;' but 'what if thou withdraw and no friend takes note of thy departure?' was written by a young man only eighteen years of age nearly fifty years ago. If we want to look up 'the solemn brood of care,' we can find that, 'and each one as before will chase his favorite phantom,' in 'Thanatopsis.' There, too, we will see the hills 'rock-ribbed and ancient as the sea;' but 'old as the hills' is older than the 'oldest inhabitant,' and like him, has lost its parents. If we need 'to point a moral and adorn a tale,' we must get Dr. Johnson's 'Vanity of Human Wishes,' and 'he that runs may read,' in Cowper's 'Tirocinium,' and 'he may run that readeth it,' in Habakuk 2: 2. If any person wish to consume the midnight oil, let him read Gay's 'Shepherd and Philosopher, and in Congreve's 'Mourning Bride' he will find 'music hath charms to soothe a savage "To be in the wrong box,' will occur to him who has dipped into the sixth book of 'Fox's Martyrs,' and Napoleon found 'that from the sublime to the ridiculous there is but one step, in Tom Paine's works, translated and published in France in 1791." Criticisms upon the Queen's English being in order among the purists of the day, Mr. Coxxens tries his hand. FINANCIAL.

"Nothing is more striking to an American when he first visits London than the constant misuse of the French 'A' pronounced aw by the high school of cockneys. The lower classes of her Majesty's subjects use the plain old-fashioned English 'A' as an expletive, as well as an offset to the other (a fashion, by the-way, derived from the Greeks, for their language is full of expletives), in this manner:— I was 'a-going,' or I was 'a-thinking,' or I was 'a-'oping,' or I was 'a-hironing,' and so on through the whole family of verbs. Now this misuse of the vowel is so common to the common people, that to hear it from the lips of any person is sufficient to suggest that his education has been quite imperfect. This being so, it is quite fair that we should acquit Lord Brobdignag of a similar charge, when we hear him read from a master of style, thus:— 'They saw aw that it was aw-Liston's firm belief, that he-aw was aw-great and neglected tragic actaw. They say-aw that ev-aw-ry one of us believes, in his heart, or would like-aw to have others believe, that he-aw is something which he is aw-not!'

CLIPPED ENGLISH.

* "It is well known that in the glorious old English tongue every word carries a meaning with it; a little history in its womb, such as 'belly-timber,' as applied to food, and 'bread-basket,' as applied to its receptacle. So the lord of thousands of broad acres in Merrie England-

"'Lovely in England's fadeless green'-Halleckwas called the Earl of Beau-champs, from the Norman French, as in Scotland the name of Campbell is derived from an Italian origin meaning the same thing as Beau-champs, Campo-bello. Just as the constellation in the Southern hemisphere called Charles' Oak recalls the history of that royal and ragged refugee, in Boscobell, so a vast number of words in English once represented ideas. They were words with poetry and history locked up within them, like flies, in perpetual amber. The river 'Alne,' in Cumberland, the stream celebrated in many a border foray, has upon its banks the ancient town of Alnecester, and the 'home of the Percy's high-born race,' Alnwick Castle. Should you inquire for either place, there is not a man in England who would understand you. But just ask for Anster and Annick, and there is not a redcoated, boot-brushing boy in the neighborhood of Temple Bar that cannot tell you where to find the train that will carry you to the residence of the Lords of Northumberland. "I remember once that I hired a post and pair to go down to Stratford-upon-Avon. A jaunty postilion in spotless white dimity kneebreeches, white top-boots, silver-rim hatband, and a whole carillon of bell-buttons on his jacket, touched his hat as I stepped into the 'shay.' 'Drive me round,' said I, 'by the way of Charlecote Hall;' for I wished to see the place where Shakespeare was tried for deerstealing. That was a puzzler. The friendly landlord of the 'Warwick Arms,' the aged pensioner of the Bear and Ragged Staff; the obsequious waiter; the radical tailor, who made red riding coats for fox-hunting squires and - them in the bitterness of his sartorial soul; the small boy that always followed a stranger as the mite-fly follows a cheese; the parochial beadle with his bell; the blue eyes of the chambermaid, from an upper story of the Warwick Arms; all, in dire suspense, in that dewy morning, waited to hear the reply of the post-boy. There was no reply. Presently an under-holstler, who had been hovering around the horses like a spiritual gad-fly, whose wings were horse-brush and curry-comb, spoke out in a foggy voice:—'P'raps the gemman means Chawcut?' Shade of Shakespeare! And Chawcut it was, as everybody understood it there. So it is that in this puckered-up English—Warwick, itself a splendidly significant name, becomes Waric. The Beauchamp Chapel is Beecham. Charlesbury has lost its ancient significance in Chawbree. Cholmondeley is Chumlee. Berwick of old renown, 'royal Berwick beach of sand,' is now Berric; Candlewick street in London is Cannick; Gloucester is Gloster, Smithfield is Smiffld, and Worcester-Wooster! So, too, the word dear to every domestic tie, 'housewife,' is 'huseif,' subtle is 'suttle,' and High Holburn, I-oburn.

"Can anybody doubt that the corruption of these good old expressive English words into bastard French is not undermining the Queen's
