Match for the Championship of the Hudson River.

POUGHEEPSIE, N. Y., August 12.—The question as to who are the champions of the Hudson river in a double scull working boat is to be brought to the surface at Hudson on Thursday, August 22 On that day there is to be a contest there between Frank Bradley and Edward Heermance, on the one side, and Frank Price and William Cooney on the other, in fifteen foot working boats, over a five mile course, for a purse of $200 and the championship of the Hud son river. Forfeit money has been deposited, and the men are now in active training for the event. Other matches will spring from it, as many crack carsmen are anxiously waiting for the match to come off, so that they can challenge the winner.

Another Match Between Brown and Hamill for $4000.

Yesterday afternoon Hamill, of Pittsburg, and Brown, the champion oarsman, made a match to row on the 6th of September next, for $4000 The race is to come off on the Hudson river. distance five miles, and to take place between this city and Poughkeepsie. A deposit of $200 was made, and most of the balance is to be put up before the first of September. This race will be the most exciting that has ever taken place in the vicinity of New York. Hamill has held the championship for nearly five years—until last spring, when Brown, it is alleged, won it by a "foul."

Exciting Boat Race-A Close Run. Boston, Mass., August 12.-The McClellan and What Cheer crews of the Sheridan Boat Club had an exciting four-oared race on Cuarles river this morning, distance three miles, for $200 and the championship of the Club. The race was very close, both being nearly abreast the whole distance, and the What Cheer losing by only ten seconds. The time of the McClel-lan was twenty-one minutes. There was a large crowd present, and considerable money changed and is Drowned. A number of men were bathing in the East river, in the vicinity of J. R. Robins' dock, South Brooklyn, about half-past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, when an argument arose between two of the party as to which of them could jump from the highest point. To decide the question under debate a man named John Wade and another person, whose name was, not ascertained, went aloft on the schooner C. S. Johnson, which was lying alongside the dock. Both the men were stripped at the time, and getting out on the cross-trees of the mainmast, they looked down and inquired how many feet of water there was. Mr. Seth Robins, who was standing down and inquired how many feet of water there was. Mr. Seth Robins, who was standing on the deck of the yessel, replied that there was not more than twelve feet, and told them not to jump, that there was not sufficient water to attempt such a feat. The height of the crosstrees of the yessel was between sixty-five and seventy feet. Another individual, on the dock, cried out that there was only ten feet of water, and urged the men aloft to desist from so foolhardy an undertaking. But not heeding the warning voices below, Wade made the fatal spring, and descended with great velocity, feet foremost through the air, while all present held their breath in terror of the result. Striking the water on his belly, with great force, the modern Sam Patch disappeared. A minute elapsed, and yet there was no sign of his coming to the surface. Mr. Robins directed two of his men to push off in a boat and grapple for the man, who had evidently stuck fast in the muddy bottom of the river. They succeeded once or twice in partially moving the body with the hook, but they could not get a sufficient hold to bring it to the surface. Nearly fifteen minutes elapsed in these unsuccessful exertions to recover the body, when a boy named Simmons came forward and lowering himself to the bottom. rein these unsuccessful exertions to recover the body, when a boy named Simmons came forward, and, lowering himself to the bottom, retaining hold of the grappling pole held by the men in the boat, he managed to grasp the arm of the man, and thus they were both hauled into the boat. On being taken ashore every means possible was made to resuscitate Mr. Wade, but all to no purpose, he had ceased to exist. The deceased was a watchman in the employ of the Revenue Department, about twenty-five years of age, and resided in Verandah place, near Henry street. He leaves a wife and two or three children. His remains were conveyed to his late residence, and the Coroner notified. The man who went up the rigging with him asserts that he advised him not to undertake the jump, the height being too great. It is said there is evidence of his having been drinking, which, if so, goes to account for the rash act.

Chase and His Calumniators.

Chase and His Calumniators.

A few days since a brief paragraph found its way among our personal items to the effect that Mr. Chase went into the Treasury possessed of very little private means, and came out of it, and is now, very rich. We are assured by a gentleman of this city, who is not a political friend of the late Secretary of the Treasury, nor ever an advocate of his financial policy, that the story is utterly without foundation. He assures us, and on authority that cannot be questioned, that the limited private means of the Chief Justice are now about the same as they were when he was appointed to the Treasury, and that those means, although the same in nominal amount, are in fact of much less value for the purpose of living than then, which is a condition of things we can all understand in these days of high prices. We regret that, in a compliation of brief personal items, this misstatement got into our columns, and it is but instice to give it this prominent contradiction.—The World.

This bandsome paragraph induces us to say nent contradiction.—The World.

This handsome paragraph induces us to say something in reference to the calumny recently put in circulation about Mr. Chase, to the effect that, having entered the Treasury a poor man, he now possesses an income of $700,000 a year.

Mr. Thurlow Weed seems to be the author of this story. As the libels of this representative scamp are tolerably good evidences of the integrity of the person libelled, we have passed it by. It is very hard that a man with the stainless record of Mr. Chase, with a life of purity, courage, earnestness, and fidelity, should find himself charged with stealing the public moneys.

We happen to know that this is the one sin from which Mr. Chase is free, and, without attempting to drag a gentleman's private business before the world, we also believe that the statements of our Washington correspondent are substantially true. Mr. Chase is to-day a much poorer man, by reason of his public life, than when he entered the Treasury, and a great deal poorer than if he had remained at the bar.

This we say in justice to a cruelly wronged man. It is not the first time that we have noticed infamous assaults upon him and his msn. It is not the first time that we have noticed infamous assaults upon him and his family. Even his high station is no safeguard from these pestilent creatures, who, unable to do or appreciate anything great, gain notoriety by assalling the greatness of others. These cowardly attempts to lejure Mr. Chase in the confidence of the nation, however, will have the effect attending like assaults heretofore made. They will serve to arouse the determination of the people to vindicate one whose life has been devoted to their cause.—N. Y. Tribune this morning.

THE WALNUT-OPENING LAST NIGHT .-Ferbaps the Walnut Street Theatre, in all its glorious history, never had a larger or more fashionable audience crowded within its walls than that mass of humanity filling it to its utmost capacity last evening. It was estimated that about twenty-five hundred people witnessed Shakespeare's fairy spectacle, of whom nearly two thousand were seated, A Midsummer Night's Dream was never so magnificently presented here before.

The management seem to have exceeded their promises of stage splendor and scenic effects, and this will be an acknowledged merit. We have no time to go into details, but can only say that the scenes painted by Telbin are all wonders of art, both as to the coup and the strength of coloring. The execution in detail is also very fine, and the effects are really supe-

The play was well cast, and all the artistes succeeded admirably. The acting of Chapman, Fawcett, Gomersal, Bailey, Johnson, and Marble as the six fools was exceedingly droll. Mrs. Gomersal, as "Oberon," was very pretty, and acted with grace and vivacity. Miss Fisher, Miss Denin, Mrs. Witham, and others were all well received by the audience, and gave general satisfaction. The ballet in the piece is better than usual and was managed in good The dresses, jewelry, and armor were taste. more brilliant and appropriate than any we have ever seen. The home of "Oberon," the panorama illustrating his voyage, and the triple transformation scene in the fifth act, may be noted as the gems of the play, and are certainly surpassingly beautiful. The music, selected from Dr. Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy's opera of A Midsummer Night's Dream, has been admirably adapted to the play by Mr. Simon Hassler, the chef d'orchestre of the Walnut, and was executed in good style.

WINNEMORE-A GLANCE AT A SKETCH OF HIS Winnemore—A Glance at a Sketch of His Life by Himself—What He Says of the Murder and Trial.—It will be remembered by the readers of The Evening Telegraph, that in an article detailing the religious views and sentiments of George W. Winnemore, pub-lished lately, it was stated that he was preparing a sketch of his life for his counsel, Damon Y. Kilgore, Esq. That sketch has been completed, and by the kindness of Mr. Kilgore we were permitted to make such extracts from it as would be likely to interest our readers. In speaking of the murder he says:—

would be likely to interest our readers. In speaking of the murder he says:—
"On the afternoon of April 25, 1867, I left Fairmount Fark about half-past 2 o'clock, and proceeded to the house of Mrs. Magilton, arriving there about 3 o'clock. After knocking at the door and receiving no response. I ventured in as I had been told by Mrs. Magilton to do so in case she did not hear me. I went back to the kitchen, and there I saw her lying upon the floor dead. I went back to the front door, and fastened it, and proceeded to the parior in the hope of finding Mr. Magilton, and upon entering the parlor I heard Mr. Magilton at the door. I went immediately and opened it, and told ing the parior I heard Mr. Magliton at the door. I went immediately and opened it, and told him his wife was murdered. After leaving him in the house, I went for an officer, and brought one into the house with me: I then, by Mr. Magliton's request, started for his daugnter, but was arrested before I got a square from the house. The reason of my going to the house that afternoon was to fill an engagement made with Mrs. Magliton in the morning. After remaining in my cell for the first night after my remaining in my cell for the first night after my arrest, I was taken to the photograph gallery of Mr. Cohill, on the corner of Fifth and Chesnut street, and had a negative taken. I was then taken to the Central Station House, and was placed in the company of three experts of the Detective force, where I had to relate all that transpired during that day, was treated very well, was handed a cigar of very small dimensions, and pumped dry in the small space of one hour, although they were not half satisfied with what I had related; but then, they could not get water out of a well when there was none in it. I was then taken to my cell, and from there was placed before a Grand Jury, giving me no chance in the world to defend myself until the last witness was done giving her testimony, and I was then soon told to stop. It almost drove me mad to hear the wit-nesses giving their testimony against me, and none for me. I was then told that I stood very well under it. No wonder, when I was the magnet, drawing the magnetism of 800,000 persons about me, and was the central point for all these currents. It is a wonder it did not take me up from their presence, and take me away. I should think this would uphoid me or anybody else, even if they were weak. But it was not altogether the magnetism of these people, the way may now and imposent conscience. It was my own pure and innocent conscience that upheld me there, and has upheld me ever since, and will until I leave this world. During my trial I was at times unconscious. Sometime I would hear all the testimony by one or two witnesses—although the rial seemed to me a dream, or some burlesque I did not feel the condition I was placed in as anywise disagreeable. All the interest I took in the trial was when Mr. Dwight, Assistant District Attorney, spoke in closing the case. The meaning of his words seemed to me sublime. They did not come from his lips, but from the very centre of his heart. It seemed so to me, at least; for around him were many friends, who passed away long ago—both male and female. He seemed to me as if he (in the other world) were surrounded by friends and conditions of spiritual life. But as soon as he stopped, I felt cost down again in darkness or in a

I felt cast down again in darkness, or in a dreamy state."

It will be remembered that in his summary of the arguments and facts for the prosecution, District Attorney Mann (pointing to Winnemore) said:—"See him laugh and bow his head. He knows that we are groping in the dark."
Of Mr. Mann's saying this, and of his own feelings and actions at that time, Winnemore writes as follows:-I saw Mr. Mann, District Attorney of this Commonwealth, standing with one foot on the floor, and the other foot on the breast of a man His face resembled that of a hideous monster his eyes flashed fire, and in his hands was the heart of his victim. There he stood in a frenzy grasping the heart in his teeth, while the blood flowed down his beard and breast until he was flowed down his beard and breast until he was covered from his mouth to his feet with the blood of his victim. It was an awful signt to look upon. It made my blood run cold through my veins to look upon it. I turned my head, and it faded from my sight. This is only one of a thousand of visions that I have seen. It seemed as if Providence stopped me from going West, and took me as a victim for this murder. I believe it was for some good, or it would not have been. Some great work was to be performed, and I was placed as a foundation for this to be built upon. I am perfectly willing to leave this earth if it will be beneficial to mankind, for I know that happiness awaits me on the other side which I hardly ever feit or saw while on this earth. By my death, living things will spring up for the good of mankind. Thus the very ones prosecuting me in this case will be benefited by these living principles. Gladly do I give up this life, when I know it will be of use to the world. As the Saviour died for a principle, so do I. He passed away long ago, but His principles live after Him. And when I am gone, I feel confident these principles will live after my exit from this world. All the satisfaction I crave from this world. All the satisfaction I crave from this world is to hear of my name being proven innocent of this horrible deed. All that I can say is, "I am innocent of this crime." I cannot prove it myself, but I feel confident it will be proven before long to the covered from his mouth to his feet with the deed. All that I can say is, "I am innocent of this crime." I cannot prove it myself, but I leel confident it will be proven before long to the satisfaction of my relations and friends, and especially to the people of this Commonwealth. It then will show how far an innocent man's life can be leopardized. If I had been guilty there could not have been any stronger evidence agretication. I was astonished at smell a challenger trae. I was astonished at smell a challenger. there could not have been any stronger evidence against me. I was astomished at such a chain of evidence. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord, I will repay." Surely this is coming fast upon those who undertook to sell my life here. I forgive them, and I hope that God of His infinite goodness will also forgive them.

West Arch Street Presertation Church.

-One of the most interesting sights ever with pessed in a church edifice in this city we beheld in the West Arch on Sunday evening. Notwith, tanding the heat of midsummer, and the absence of so many families from that vicinity surround, by the church, that immense building was so completely packed that hundreds of persons were compelled to leave for other churches or their nomes. The audience was a brilliant one, and every listener to the Gospel appeared intent on all that fell from the distinguished clergyman's lips. The sermon by Rev. Dr. Willitts was one of the most powerful of that great preacher's efforts, and its good effects were felt throughout the entire congregation. The interest this well-known and popular divine interest this well-known and popular divine has awakened since his return to Philadelphia is not surprising at all, for there is always a simplicity, a naturalness, an earnestness, and sincerity in his manner, independent of the instructive and excellent matter of his dis-Steinway, par le Jury de l'Exposition Internationale courses, which win their way to the heart as surely as pomposity, affectation, and stapidity shut up all the avenues to the feelings. On a former occasion we spoke rather dispara-gingly of the singing at the West Arch, and we are glad to know that the gallant Governor who presides over the Board of Trustees, and his colleagues, have taken our hint and remedied this matter entirely. They have wisely secured those excellent members of Rev. Mr. Conklin's choir, at Tenth and Arch streets:—

Mrs. Simmons (late Miss De Negre), as soprano; Professor Briscee, as tenor; and A. W. Miller, as basso. In addition to these fine singers, the contraito, Mrs. Simpson, and the organist, Mr.
Knipe, are superior musicians, The music on Sunday evening was exquisite, far surpassing any before heard in this church, and fully equal to if not superior to any in the city. Bonar's beautiful hymn, "Beyond the smiling and the beautiful hymn, "Beyond the smiling and the weeping," was sung by the new choir in grand style, and with the utmost effect.

We congratulate the people, not only of West Arch, but of the city, on Rev. Dr. Willitts' determination to "stick to his post" during the eatire summer, and preach every Sabbath morning and evening. Like a good soldier, he declines to be absent from the field of duty, notwithstanding his people accorded him a vacation during the whole of August.

A BEAST IN HUMAN FORM .- Before Recorder Encu, at 10 o'clock this morning, Henry W. Wendt, a reputed member of the Lutheran Church, Superintendent of the Orphan Asylum of that church, situated at Germantown, was arraigned upon the charge of taking improper liberties with the children under his care. There are many boys and girls ranging from infancy up to thirteen or fourteen in the insti-tution. Wendt has been to all outward appearances a careful and conscientious officer.

has been regular in his religious duties, and strict in their enforcement on his charge. A short time ago THE EVENING TELEGRAPH contained an account of the arrest of a young man employed in the institution for puriolning some clothing. His arrest appears to have generated all the trouble. About six weeks ago the Board of Directors assembled, and the resignation of Wendt was presented. This was a surprise, as no reasons had been assigned. On making inquiry Wendt was found to have fied. Rumors then reached the ears of the Board of his conduct, and upon making an investigation the rumors were substantiated.

It being ascertained that he was in Rochester, a young man was despatched to that city with a letter for Wendt, stating that the Board desired him to come to Philadelphia and make some explanation. The bait took, for it was only a trap set to get him to this city. He arrived at Walnut street wharf about six 'clock vesterday afternoon. Detectives R. R. Smith and Stevens were in waiting for him. As soon as he left the boat he was arrested, and after a preliminary hearing before the Recorder, was locked up in the Central Station for a hearing this morning, when he was taken to the magistrate's office, where a large number of people had assembled to hear the etalls of the case.

Two little girls, named Willemina Lochardt Two little girls, named Willemina Lochardt and Mary Behl, both aged fourteen, and very preity, testified in substance that Wendt had taken improper liberties with them. We refrain from going into details, as they are too disgusting, and would bring the hot blush to the very temples of our readers. The Recorder committed Wendt to prison in default of $5000 hall to answer at Court. ball to answer at Court.

A SCULLING MATCH ON THE DELAWARE-A PHILADELPHIAN PITTED AGAINST HAMILL -We learn that the initiatory step-the depositing of part of the stakes-have been taken to have a sculling match for the champtonship of Pennsylvania come off upon the Delaware, near this city, on the 3d of September. The con-testants are William Myers, a Philadelphian, residing at Richmond and Vienna streets, and the chief of rowers, so said. James Hamill, E-q. Myers has come into considerable repute by his dexterous management of the oars, and those who have seen him row are confident that Hamill will meet his equal. The stake-purse is $1000. The skeletons are to have no out-riggers, and are to be fifteen feet long. Myers has already commenced training for the contest, takes his daily walks, and eats his tough beef, with a view to reducing his weight thirty pounds. Full particulars of the match will soon come to light.

Boy Drowner -- Coroner Daniels held an inquest on the body of John McIntyre, a white boy, who was drowned at pier No. 6, Richmond. From the evidence it appears that he carried his father's dinner (who was watchman upon a dredging machine), and while playing upon the boat was struck by a crank on the head and thrown overboard. His father made every effort to save him, but could not reach him. The body was soon after recovered, and taken to the home of the bereaved parents, at No. 1053 Houston street.

AN UNBROTHERLY ASSAULT .- Jacob and Andrew Viegel were arrested for belaboring each other on the Germantown road. The former threatened to cut short the existence of the latter, when a fight ensued. The threatener was held in $1200 bail to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill, and the latter was bound over in $1000 bail for retailating unduly, by Alderman Heins. EVIL DEPORTMENT. - Sergeant Murray ar-

The Prize Ring in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 10.—A prize fight came off this afternoon between Johnny Dy-lai d and David Morris, both of Boston, at Horse Shoe Bend, Marine county. Ninety-three rounds were fought in two hours and twenty minutes, when a draw was declared. Both men were badly punished, and the fight is said to be the best contested that has ever taken place in this vicinity.

Important Decision on the Rights of Mortgagors.

The following interesting opinion concerning the extent of a mortgagor's right to dispose of mortgaged property, was read this morning by Judge Brewster:

James Watts vs. the Hestonville, Manua and Fairmount Passenger Railroad Company. Brewster, J.—This is a motion for a special injunction to restrain the defendants "from taking up their rails and stringers, or otherwise rendering the road useless."

The bill is filed by the complainant for himself. The bill is filed by the complainant for himself, "and for such other bondholders as may, by contributing to the expense of this suit, become parties thereto." He avers that he is the hader of certain bonds of this company to the amount of $550; that his bonds and others, amounting to $55,25; issued December 23, 1859, are secured by a mortgage executed by the Company to certain Trostees on the rallway's rails, bridges, fences, depots, stations, easements, incidents, rights, and all real property of every description belonging to said Company."

The bill further "avers that the said railroad begins at Front street in this city, extends along Callowhill street to the river Schnyfkill, and thence to Hestonville that it has been laid with rails, cit.; has been lased until recently as a road for the conveyance of passengers."

passengers."
The complainant then charges that the defendants have "recently taken up the rails and stringers of said road along Callowhill street, between Front and Eighth streets, and that they threaten to take up the balance of said road and to dispuse of the materials thereot."
The defendants have filed affidavits, in which it is

The defendants have filed affidavits, in which it is a averred, in opposition to this motion, that the security of the plaintiff will now be materially impaired by the proposed action of the defendants, that the portion of the road which they are taking up is not self-sustainable, but an expense to other roads of the Company; that it would be an injury and loss to the Company; that it would be an injury and loss to the Company to permit the rails to remain on the street and be destroyed; that the plaintiff should have made this motion when the work was commenced two weeks since; that the plaintiff has ample security left for the bonds he claims, and that the defendants are willing to give "security for the moneys received from the saile of the materials of that part of the road being taken up." in addition to these matters of defense, it was sug-

in addition to these matters of defense, it was suggested upon the argument that the portion of road which the defendants are removing is not covered by the mortgage under which the paintiff claims.

The defendants were incorporated by act of Assembly, April 5, 1859 (P. L., 389), with powers to lay rails upon certain streets in West Philadelphia, and 'with the right to intersect and run their carsover any passenger railway now constructed, or which may neresite be constructed, so as to give the said Company a complete route from Hestonvile to the eastern limits of the city."

By a supplement of March 8, 1860 (P. L. 123) the Company were empowered "to lay out and construct their railway tracks from their present terminus across the scaultkill the Callowhill street, and along Catlowhill street to Delaware avenue.

The mortgage referred to in the bill was executed December 23, 1853, before the passage of the supplement, and, of course, before any railways were laid on Callowhill street; but it covers "all and singular the railways, rails, bridges, fences, deputs, stations, easements, in idents, rights, and all real property of every description belonging to said Company, and which shall be hereafter sequired or owned by them.

I regard this language as sufficiently blood to cover the Callowhill street branch, and the defendants must therefore rety upon the allegations of the plaintiff delay, the cost of maintaining this portion of the road, and the ample security afforded by the other property. The delay of two weeks in making this application is bardly conclusive against the plaintiff, He might have "willingly stood oy until the work was salf done," in the hope that his remonstrances or objections would secure a settlement, and at the worst has permission to destroy one-half of his security tions would secure a settlement, and at the worst would not bar bis right to retain the remainder.

That the maintenance of this portion of the road critain a grievous expense upon the Company would justify them in an attempt to soil it, satisfact to the them of the company would justify them in an attempt to soil it, satisfact to the theory of the company would justify them in an attempt to soil it, satisfact to the final post of the process of the mortgages if they could not find a purchast to the mortgages if they could not find a purchast to the mortgages if they could not find a purchast to the mortgages of the enterprise is no justification for the destruction of the transfers on the grant of the country having a vested interest in its maintenance.
