Great Chicago Breach of Promise Case. BAHANTRA PROCTOR VS. IRA Y. MUNN-THE ROMANTIC FLAINTIFF DISPLAYS HER COLORS-IS HER AGONY OF MIND SHE ASES FOR $100,000 BAMAGES-HER DECLARATION — SHE IS STILL WILLING TO MARRY THE MAN BILL LOVES.

From the Republican, 21st.
Readers of the Republican will remember that a short time ago a fair specimen of the strongminded female penera, known among other aliases by the romantic name of Samantha Proctor, commenced suit in the Superior court of this city against Ira Y. Munn, Esq., a well-known Chicago merchant, to recover damages hald at $60,000. mid at $50,000.

hid at $50,000.

At the lime of the institution of the cause, the plaintiff's declaration was not filed. No particulars of the nature of her grievances were given, though it was soon noised abroad that the fair one was suing to recover a pecuniary compensation for the agony of mind sustained by an alleged breach of promise of marriage. This fact, combined with the known wealth and respectability of at least one of the parties, invested the suit with a goodly share of popuand respectability of at least one of the parties, invested the suit with a goodly share of popular interest, said interest being materially enhanced by the further fact that the fair complainant had thrown lawyers to the dogs, and was conducting her case in propria persona.

Yesterday the lady advanced another step in the proceeding. She filed her declaration, and fally exposed judicially, if not judiciously, the sad story of her woe. The document in question we append below. It does not present any features to distinguish it from ordinary declarations in breach of promise suits, with the single exception that Samantha does not allege seduction. Her wrongs are all mental ones, She does not charge the defendant with an onslaught made upon her maiden purity; she still claims to be "pure and a virgin."

Not knowing Samantha's tactics in the premises, we are not prepared to offer her advice. We would, however, mildly suggest that seduction, being the usual accompaniment of a breach of promise suit, would not be out of place here; and that if it served no further end, it would tend to excite sympathy in the minds of a jury. Jurymen are practical animals in general, though there are chords in their nearts which can be advantageously touched. A simple breach of promise does not generally excite them to pity. They simply regard the defendant as a man who is honestly struggling to repair an act of folly.

With this brief introduction, intended for

DECLARATION.

Samantha's sole benefit, we present her

State of Illinois, Coek county, s. s. In the Superior Court of Chicago.—In this action, Samantha Proctor, the plaintiff, by herself, complaints of Ira Y. Munn, the defendant, of a piea of trespass upon the case on promises, for that whereas, heretofore, to wit, on the 9th day of August, A. D. 1862, at the county of Cook aforesaid, in consideration that the said plaintiff, being then and there unmarried, at the like special instance and request of the said defendant, had then and there promised the defendant to marry him, he, the defendant, undertook and promised the plaintiff to marry her in a reasonable time, then next following, and plaintiff avers that, confiding in last said mentioned promise of said defendant, she, the plaintiff, has always hitherto remained, and continued, and still is sole and unmarried, and hath been and for and during all the time last aforesaid, and still continues, and is ready and willing to marry the said defendant, to wit, at the county aforesaid, whereof the said defendant hath always had notice, and although a reasonable time for the said defendant to marry her, the said plaintiff, after the lapse of such rea omble time, to wit, on the 2d day of July, A. CRIME.

Another Attempted Wife Murder.

From the N. Y. Daily News, August 23.

John L. Taylor, who gives his occupation as a speculator, was arrested in Brooklyn at a late hour last night by Officer Whitney, of the Forty-first Precinct, on a charge of attempting to shoot his wife. The accused, although a resident of Brooklyn, is said to have held an important position in the Rebellion, that of Commissary-General, during the war, and after its close returned again to the City of Churches, where his wife had been residing during his absence. He found her living with Mr. S. Broadwell, in Bridge street, near Johnson, as housekeeper, but for some unexplained cause she refused to return again to the domestic hearthstone of her liege lord.

Finding all persuasion useless, he resolved, it is said, to take her life, and went to Mr. Broadwell's house on Wednesday night to consummate his deadly purpose. Thinking a favorable opportunity presented itself, he blazed away, and the ball went whizzing through the window, frightening his wife and Mr. Broadwell's family almost out of their senses, but doing no further damage. The affair caused a prompt appearance of the police, but in the excitement no complaint was made, and the would-be murderer made off.

Last night Mr. Broadwell spied Taylor in the yicinity of his house again, and fearing that he would-be murderer made off.

Last night Mr. Broadwell spied Taylor in the vicinity of his house again, and fearing that he intended to repeat his act of the previous night, hastened to the Forty-first Precinct Station House to secure the services of an officer. In the meantime Officer Whitney happening to pass Mr. Broadwell's residence, noticed Taylor acting in a strange and suspicious manner, and thereupon arrested him and took him to the station house. He was then searched, and a four-barrelled pistol and a large carving knife were found in his possession. He was taken before Justice Cornwall this morning, but the examination was postponed.

Murder of Judge Horne, of Georgia, by a Negro.

Even the Americus (Ga.) Citizen, August 14.

Early yesterday morning our town was excited to a great degree by the rumor that our respected fellow-citizen, Judge J. W. C. Horne, of the eastern section of the county, near Danwille, had been the evening before shot by some of his negroes, and mortally wounded. We have just learned that he died this morning. The facts of the case are as fellows:—During the afternoon of Monday a stripling son of Judge Horne had some difficulty with a colored girl in the field, who challenged him to fight or tussle, in the course of which young Horne knocked the girl down. At night this son was sitting on the porch, when Judge Horne stepped out of his house into his yard, when he saw one of his negroes with a double-barrelled gun in his hand, whom he asked what he was doing with a gun, with an order to put it up. On the instant the gun was fired twice, the negro throwing down his gun and running off. One ball entered the abdomen and another the side and passed into the bowels. After the Judge was shot he staggered and fell, sending a discharge or two of his pistol after the retreating negroes, but he fell into a pit in the yard, and they escaped. On his return he found his father lying on the ground, shot as above stated, and his face and head dreadfully bruised and cut, as if mangled with the butt end of a gun or pistol. He was removed into the house, and all the attention possible was given to his case.

Word was sent to our efficient Military Commander, Captain J. M. Robinson, who with a file of men immediately repaired to the scene of the difficulty for the purpose of arresting the perpetrators of the outrage and murder. He met one man on his way to town, and took him back, while five others who had made their way here, were subsequently arrested, and are now in jail under strong guard, awaiting the necessary legal steps of amidavit and warrant, before they are turned over to the civil anthorities.

THE CAMPAIGN IN OHIO.

Speech of ex-Governor Dennison. Ex-Governor Dennison addressed a very large meeting at New Lexington, Ohio, on the 2lst. First reading the President's order for the removal of Sheridan, Mr. Dannison complimented that officer for his ability and patriotism, and denounced his removal as done to please the Rebels of the South and the Democrats of the North. He said;—
Two inquiries are suggested by this order, especiism, and denounced his removal as done to please the Rebels of the South and the Democrats of the North. He said:—

Two inquiries are suggested by this order, especially so here, at the home of the noble soldier was in ally so here, at the home of the noble soldier was in the subject of time order. While the fame of General the subject of time order. While the fame of General she subject of the order. While the fame of General she subject of the order. While the discharge of duty, to you as neighbors of that gailant officer whose services to the nation reflect the highest monor to his country and State. It is peculiarly fitting to inquire why this action of the President? Why this sitempt to degrade one of the foremost captains of the age, to whom them ation is so largely indebted for crushing the Rebellion that sought to central the Government? Has he not moded reputation to the American arms by his masterly soldiership? Will any one deny to him the crowning glory of the soldier—bravery, ideity, and great success? And has he not been equally brave and falliful is the command from which he has just been removed? Has ne not there defended, with sublime courage, the lovality of the nation against disloy-liy and treason? has he net, in a word, in the millitary administration of his department, displayed the same sterling qualities of patriotic manhood that so emischily distinguished him at the head of his victorious battalions in the field? Why, then, is he removed? Let me say, in deep humiliation for my country, to gratify Rebels and traitors, and in obedience to the demands of the Democratic leaders. I see 50 other meaning in this than the surrender of the President to political intriguers, North and South, who exact control of the military and civil patronage of the Executive, preparatory to the coming Presidential election, as a condition of their longer support of his administration. The history of our country furnishes no precedent for such ingratitude to deserving soldiers, but antiquity does. The greatest

Letter from the Hon. J. M. Ashley. The Hon. J. M. Ashley, of Ohio, has written a letter in reply to the charge that he favored the disfranchisement of foreign-born citizens, in which he gives at length his reasons for introducing the amendment to the Constitution, making, after 1877, reading and writing in the English language a qualification for the franchise. Mr. Ashley says:—

I did not propose to disfranchise any person now entitled by law to vote, whether white or black, native or naturalized, and I would not vote for such a proposition except as a punishment for treason or felony. I would, however, hold out some inducement more than is now held out, to encourage both the American and fereign-born to read and write the language of their native and adopted country, to the end that our population might become, as it ought to be, for our safety and stability, more intelligent, loyal, and homogeneous. No one properly appreciating the responsibility of the American elector, would object if the United States were to require all foreign-born subjects of nations recognized as civilized and Christian, hereaster naturalized as American citizens, to read and write, at least in their own language, as a qualification to vote. I am opposed to clothing the Chinaman, the Indian, while in asavage state, or the subjects of any uncivilized nation, without conditions, with the privilege of the ballot. It would seem to be the part of prudence to require all American born citizens, white or black, who become of age after a given date, say, after 1576, to read and write our own language as a qualification to vote. I put the time nine years from this date, so as to give ample notice, and to provide that those only shall be affected by it who are under twelve years of age. chise. Mr. Ashley says:affected by it who are under twelve years of age

Has the President Power to Remove General Grant?

We notice that some of our exchanges have assumed that President Johnson has the power to suspend or remove General Grant, and are assigning this as a justification of the course of assigning this as a justification of the course of the latter in obeying the order to relieve Secre-tary Stanton. But that he possesses no such power can be shown beyond question. Section second of "an act making appropriations for the support of the army for the year ending June 38, 1865, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1867, declares:— "That the headquarters of the General of the Arm

To the damage of the plaintiff to one hundred thousand dollars, therefore she sues.

SAMANTHA PROCTOR, per se, copy of Notice.

State of Illinois, Cook County ss.—Superior Court of Chicago. Samantha Proctor vs. Ira Y. Muno, relating to military operations issued contrary to the requirements of this section shalf be null and void; and any officer who shall issue orders or instructions contrary to the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeator in office; and any officer of the army who shall transmit, convey, or obey any orders or instructions so issued contrary to the provisions of this section. Knowing that such orders were so issued, shall be liable to imprisonment for not less than two nor more than twenty years, upon conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction."

From the above it will be seen that General Grant, so far from being removable by the President, cannot even be relieved from command or assigned to duty elsewhere than at his head-quarters, except at his own request, without the previous approval of the Senate. Indeed, it may even be questioned whether the President has not violated the spirit of this law, if not its letter, in assigning General Grant to duty elsewhere than at his headquarters in the city of Washington—for evidently it was not contemplated in the passage of the law that there should exist any power to transfer him to other duties, except at his own request, without the approval of the Senate. Did General Grant, then, request to be assigned to duty in the War Department? We presume not. It is certain that if he had declined to obey the order to enter upon the duties of Secretary of War, the President would have had no authority whatever to suspend him or relieve him from duty as a punishment for such disobedience.

The object of this law is evident. It was to retain the General of the Army on duty in his own proper department at Washington, by stripping the President of the power to send him elsewhere. We believe the President violated the law in thus attempting to transfer him to other duties. Is General Grant a party to that violation? That the law was intended to be enforced to the letter is shown by the passaties which have been incorporated in it.—Chicago Republican. From the above it will be seen that General

Making Glass Eyes.

It is asserted that there are in this city at least seven thousand people who wear false eyes. There are two or three places here where false eyes are made and inserted. One house informs the sublic that "persons deprived of an eye can have this deformity removed by the insertion of an artificial one, which moves and looks like the natural organ. No pain when inserted. Patients at a distance, having a broken eye, can have another one made without calling personally."

The manufacture of these eyes is done entirely by hand. A man sets down behind a jet of gas flame, which is pointed and directed as he wishes by a blow-pipe.

The pupil of the eye is made with a drop of black glass imbedded in the centre of the iris. The blood-vessels seen in the white of the eye are easily put in with red glass, while the optic is glowing with heat like a ball of gold. The whole eye can be made inside of an hour, and is at once ready to put in. The reader should know that it is simuly a thin glass shell, which From the American Artisan.

whole eye can be made inside of an hour, and is at once ready to put in. The reader should know that it is simply a thin glass sheil, which is intended to cover the stump of the blind eye. After being dipped in water the shell is slipped in place, being held by the eyelids. The secret of imparting motion to it depends upon working the glass eye so that it shall fit the stump; if it is too large, it will not move; if it fits nicely, it moves in every particular like the natural eye, and it is quite impossible, in many cases, to tell one from the other. The operation is not in the least painful, and those who have worn them a number of years feel better with them in than when they are out. A glass eye should be taken out every night and put in in the morning. In three or four years the false eye becomes so worn that a new one has to be obtained. Some ladies, who live at a distance from the manufactory, keep abox of glass eyes on hand in case of accident, for, besides wearing out, they will break under certain circumstances, as when
