The Convention then proceeded to ballot for Sheriff.— FIRST BALLOT.

A GENTLEMANLY SWINDLER, one of those kind who seek first, as a basis whereon to carry out completely their plans, to impress one with an exalted sense of their individual greatness, and a corresponding condescension in speaking to others, and under this garb to swindle, steel and carry out their nefarious schemes, yester-day, rung the bell, and soon was usnered into the Chegary Institute for Young Ladies, pre-sided over by Mesdames Hervilly. After con-siderable introductory conversation, in which he intimated that he had been in high offices he intimated that he had been in high offices under the Confederate Government, and returning North for pleasure, desired that his only sister should have the benefits of that institution.

After all the preliminary arrangements being made, matters of finance came up. He was informed that the tuition would be $850. He seemed pleased at this, and presented for payment a $400 check, drawn on Benton, Sherman & Co., of New York. In return, M'me Hervilly gave him a check for $50. He soon left, and proceeding to a friend of the lady from whom he had received the check, had it cashed. Since then he has not been beard from. The sequel to all this is that the draft was sent on to New to all this is that the draft was sent on to New York, and was speedily returned endorsed "no account." These swindling schemes are of lmost dally occurrence.

THE NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION-THE NOMINATIONS.—The delegates to this Convention assembled, pursuant to call, at the Hali of the National Constitutional Association, presterday. Dr. William S. Swann, brother to Governor Swann of Maryland, presided. William H. Brown, Esq., and James W. Laws, Esq., acted as Secretaries.

FEARFUL RECORD OF CRIME.

Full Confession of Bridget Durgan.

Her Motive for Committing the Deed.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.,

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO EVENING TELEGRAPH.] NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., August 30-P. M. THE CONFESSION.

After the execution, Mr. Adrain read to the representatives of the press the confession dictated to him by Bridget, as follows:—I am nearly twenty-three years of age. My real name is Bridget Dagnan.

My father is dead, but my mother is still living in Duncilffe county, Silgo, Ireland, where I was born. Have two brothers living there,

I was born. Have two brothers living there, and two sisters, one younger living with mother, and the other is older, married, and living in England. Came to this country two years last Christmas; I lived first in Brooklyn, then at Poulis' Ferry, and in Piscataway, and in Plaindeid, New Jersey, and finally with Dr. Coriell, at New Market. Mrs. Coriell was very kind and pleasant to me, and I never had any quarrel with ner.

About half-past 10 o'clock on the night of February 25th last Mrs. Coriell was lying on the lounge, in the sitting-room Before lying down she complained of not jeeling very well, and said she would not go to bed, and wished me to sit up and waten inthe Mamie, who was sleeping in the cradie in the next bed room. As Mrs. Coriell was lying on the lounge apparently asleep, I came out of the kitchen with the bread kulle in my hand that kitchen with the bread kulle in my hand tha was exhibited on the trial, and picked up the kerosene lamp which was stand-ing on the table not lighted, and ing on the table not lighted, and approaching her struck her with the lating on the head. She started up newlidered and went into the bed-room, and I followed after her. She stood by the side of the bed, and as I came near her she grasped the knife out of my hand. I turned and picked up another knife from the table in the bed-room, which was concealed by a cloth which I had thrown over it. I had found it in a bureau drawer and placed it there. I then turned apon Mrs. Coriell, pushed he back on the bed, and struck her repeatedly with this knife. The other knife had failed on the floor and was not used by either, and I do not know and was not used by either, and I do not know and was not used by either, and I no not know how it become bent. She resisted all she could, defending herself with pillows, and after striking her very often, as she lay upon the bed, and, supposing she was dead, I picked up the little Mamie out of the cadie and went into the sitting room and sat on the lounge for a few minu es. I then went into the kitchen with Mannie, and washed my hands in a pot of water on the stove. I then returned to the sitting-room and bed room, and lound Mrs. Corieli had gone out of the house. I found her going towards the gate, I told her to go back again. She said nothing, but went back, and as she was reserved through the stilling room. passing through the sitting room, stopped and gissed little Mamie, and then sat down on the floor between the sitting-room and bed-room. While she was sitting there I took the child's small chair and struck her two or three times.

I never hit her on the neck, as was supposed.

I then drew her into the bed-room, and laid her down on the floor. I then came back to the sitting-room, and afterwards lighted Mamie's dresses and some paper, and threw it burning on the bed. I carried the chillout of the house on the bed. I carried the chillout of the house in the same clothes as when she was put into the cradle. I went down to the gate, and while standing there, thought I heard a man coming. I went back into the house and sat on the lounge five minutes, and then left the house and aroused the neighbors, repre-senting that robbers were in the house. The confession then recites several facts of no great importance, most of them being contra-dictory of previous statements. She states that Mary Gilroy was not there on the night of the murder and knew nothing about it, being entirely innocent.

The confession then concludes as follows:-The concession then concludes as follows:— There was no truth in my story about two men coming to the house on the night of the murder; and Annie Given, whom I unjustly charged, had nothing to do with it. There was charged, had nothing to do with it. There was no design or attempt to rob. The murder was for another purpose. I killed Mrs. Coriell thinking that I might take her place. This alone led me to commit the horrid crime. The idea of murdering her did not come upon me suddenly that night; I had thought of it a long time baser. had thought of it a long time before. I have told a true story. I am sorry for having com-mitted so great a crime, and hope God will for-

OBITUARY. Mr. N. T. Davenport.

The death of Mr. N. T. Davenport was mentioned the other day, in a telegraph despatch from Boston. He had attained real distinction as an actor, and his death is a positive loss to the stage. The greater part of his life was spent in Boston. He chose the theatrical vocation at an early age and was a member of the first Boston Theatre company, when that house was opened by Mr. Thomas Barry. The Rivals was played on the opening night, and Mr. Davenport, as "Fag," spoke the first lines of the first play ever presented on that stage. He was a careful and conscientious actor, and, wherever engaged, he maintained a good position, and was respected for his talents and in territy. He possessed other than dramatic ability, too, having been a good draughtsman and a clever sketch-writer. His age was thirty-six years. He leaves a wife and daughter. James Jackson, M. D.

Dr. James Jackson, M. D.

Dr. James Jackson, an eminent American physician, died at Boston, Mass., on the evening of the 27th inst., in the minetieth year of his age. Dr. Jackson was born at Newburyport, October 3, 1777, and was educated at Harvard College, where he graduated in 1796. His first appointment was as English Master at Leicester Academy. In December, 1797, he became a medical pupil of Dr. Edward Angustus Holyoke, at Salem, under whom he studied for two years. He then went to London, and was attached to St. Thomas' Hospital. During his residence in the British metropolis he attended the lectures of some of the most distinguished physicians of the day—Fordyce, Cline, Astley Cooper, William Saunders, etc. On his return to Boston he commenced practice there, and continued till within a short period of his death in the unremitting discharge of the duties of his profession. In 1810, in connection with the late Dr. John C. Warren, he brought before his fellow-citizens a proposition for establishing a hospital in Boston, of which he was the first physician, and Dr. Warren the first surgeon, In 1810 he was chosen Professor of Clinical physician, and Dr. Warren the first surgeon, in 1810 he was chosen Professor of Clinical Medicine in Harvard College, and in 1812 Pro-fessor of Theoretical and Practical Medicine in the same institution. In the course of his long and busy life Dr. Jackson published various scientific works, and was a frequent con-tributor to the leading medical journals of New England.

Colonel William Stretch Abert, U. S. A. A telegram published yesterday announced the death of this officer at Galveston, Texas, where he was stationed on duty as Adjutant-General to Brevet Major-General Griffin. The deceased was a son of the late Colonel J. J. Abert, of the United States Topographical Engineers, and was born in the District of Columbia, about the year 1834. He graduated at West Point in 1855, and entered the service as second lieutenant in the 4th Artillery, his commission bearing date of June 18. At the outbreak of the Rebellion Lieutenant Abert remained loyal to his colors, and on the 18th of May, 1861, was promoted to the rank of captain and transferred to the 8th Regiment of Cavalry. Subsequently he was appointed a colonel of where he was stationed on duty as Adjutant-Subsequently be was appointed a colonel of volunteers, which rank he held at the time of his death. Colonel Abert was a gallant and able officer, and his loss to the service will be deeply regretted by his fellow officers and sol-

Cyrus Hamlin.

Among the victims of the yellow fever, now prevalent in New Orleans, is Cyrus Hamiin, son of ex-Vice-President Hamiin, who died in that city on Wednesday morning last. The deceased was a native of Maine, and in 1862 was commissioned a captain in the United States army, and assigned to duty as one of the additional aides decamp provided for by law. On December 3, 1864, he was promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General of Volunteers, which position he held until the close of the war, when he was mustered out of the ser-

Cardinal Louis Altieri.

Our advices from Europe announce the death from cholera on the 11th instant, at Albano, near Rome, of this distinguished Roman Catho-lic Prelate. The deceased was descended from an ancient and princely house, and was the brother of the present Prince Clement Altieri, He was born in Rome on the 17th of July, 1805, and was created a Cardinal Priest in 1845, by his Holiness Pope Gregory XVI, with the title of Santa Maria del Portico. Cardinal Altieri was also Bishop of Albano, First Chamberlain of the Fope, President of the Council of Finances, and Grand Chancellor of the University of Rome. He was a most learned and pious divine

Reconstruction of the Cabinet

GENERAL STEEDMAN IN TOWN

IMPORTANT CHANGES NEXT WEEK.

Jeremiah S. Black for Secretary of State.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO EVENING TELEGRAPH. Washington, August, 30P. M.

Curious Rumors. A report prevails this morning that Seward will leave the Cabinet on the 21 of September, and be succeeded by Jerry Black, and that General Steedman will relieve Grant of the charge of the War Department on the same day. This report is strengthened by the arrival day. This report is strengthened by the arrival of Steedman this morning, and his having had a lengthy interview with the President before the Cabinet meeting.

The Blair Family. Old Frank Blair has also been with the President this morning, and everything indicates that some important change is about to transpire. General Grant's Friends.

General Grant's friends daily expect his successor will be appointed to take charge of the War Department, and he would not be surprised to receive at any moment an order to turn the books of the Department over to Steed-man, as the latter is understood to be the man, as the interior choice of the President for that position, although he says he does not want the appointalthough be says he does not want the appoint-ment; but this is doubted very strongly, as he is on too intimate terms with the President to refuse if the latter really desires him to accept it. Rebel Bonds Wanted.

An order has been received from England by the First National Bank, of Washington City, for a considerable amount of eight per cent. Confederate bonds, and the bank offers to buy up all that are presented at two dollars and nity cents in greenbacks for one thousand dollars in Rebel rags. This is the first time since the war that these worthless securities have bad any fixed commercial value, and it is sur-mised that they are to be offered in payment of the Alabama claims, or other claims our Gov-ernment may have against England. Personal.

Commissioner Rollins left last night for New York, to be gone two weeks.
Collector Keilogg, of New Orleans, arrived this morning.

The New Cabinet. The Cabinet makers are talking over the following slate, and believe it is nearly our rect:-

Secretary of State, J. S. Black.
Secretary of War, J. B. Steedman.
Secretary of Navy, Fernando Wood.
Attorney-General, Reverdy Johnson.
Secretary of Interior, M. Blair.
Secretary of Treasury, H. McCulloch.
Postmaster-General, A. W. Randall. The Italian Minister. Mr. Cerruii was to-day introduced by the Secretary of State to the President, who received him in his capacity of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of his Majesty the King of Italy. Mr. Bertinatti, his Immediate predecessor, has been promoted by appointment as Minister to Constantinople. Internal Revenue. The receipts from distilled spirits and tobacco are stated at the Bureau of Internal Revenue to be largely in excess, for the fiscal year ending with June, over those for any preceding like
