THE OVERLAND ROUTE. FROM NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO. BY NORTHWEST. GLENN HAMILTON. Nye county, Nevada, August 31, 1997.)

From New York to San Francisco by water is (in round numbers) five thousand five hundred miles. The trip by steamer via Aspinwall and Panama occupies twenty-two days. Over-land it is but three thousand three hundred miles, and with the present mode of conveyance occupies about sixteen days. Though at the present moment the cheapest and least fatiguing route is by steamer via the Isthmus, yet they who prefer the rolling prairie and the Rocky Mountains to the "dark blue sea," may find as much excitement and amusement as will recompense them for their extra expenditure of money and muscle. The vast and unprecedented growth of the Western States, and the marked advance of civilization even west of the Mississippl, must strike the mind of the most ordinary traveller, while the skill exhibited by the settler in developing the re. sources of nature will divide his attention with the beauties of the landscape. In no journey will you find a larger stretch of well-cultivated lands, or find the arts of agriculture more pleasingly diversified with the charms of nature. The first part of the route, from New York to Pittsburg, alterwards to Chicago, is familiar to every American. Nor is there anything beyond this grapary and Omaha that calls for special attention. The journey occupies sixty hours, the distance being 1400 miles. Here we leave the Missouri river, and at once find ourselves on the Plains. To the dwellers in cities the mode of transit across this apparently boundless level is not the most distinctive reature of the Overland Route. Long trains of wagons, seldom less than six, and often amounting to ten or twenty, each drawn by twelve oxen, or as many mules, give an animated aspect to a somewhat monotonous landscape. But the wagon-train of to-day will soon be superseded the cars of the Pacific Bailroad, for if continued with the present energy, the whole will probably be open for traffic in three years from this date.

The prairies are of three kinds; the heathy or bushy, the allevial or wet, and the dry or rolling prairie. On the first are found shrubs of various descriptions, the grapevine, and innumerable flowers, and the botanist finds full scope for his specialty. On the second, especially in connection with certain streams, the ponds are full of fish, and, when left high and dry by the heats of summer, are a source of endless quarrel and gluttony to a host of buzzards, as well as rank poison to the pure air, while in a state of decomposition. But it is with the third that the tra-veller becomes most familiar; the favorite light of the buffalo, and in autumn the love-liest flower garden of the American continent. At this season of the year nothing can surpass the charming mixture-heath and harebell and cactus, for this last thrives here as well as in Sicily, though the flowers are invariably scarlet and even the gastronome, the most pitiable of all Sybarites in this home of nature, must cease to dream of ale and lager as he revels in the glorious coloring of this floral paradise.

From Omaha to the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains the distance is five hundred and twenty miles, and this portion of the Pacific Railroad will be completed at an early day. Here commenced in former days the real diffi culty and danger of the California emigrant, and a premature and miserable death has often been the only reward of the enterprising traveller who committed himself to this inhospitable All, however, is not sterility. The summits of the mountains are barren to a degree, but sheltered valleys abound with the nuest and most fertile soil, studied with pine and sprace and other terebinthines, while the wild sage assumes the height of a small tree. The dry air throughout this portion of the route has a singularly exhilarating effect; the heat, even at midday, is seidom oppressive, while the nights are unsurpassed in loveliness. Not even in Australia is camping-out a more enjoyable necessity. Besides the pine groves, the natural-ist finds numerous animals to note and study, the woodchuck, said to be good eating, and "the dog without a tail." Deer abound of every description, and the wild turkey may occasion-ally be brought to bay. No traveller should cross the Plains without a gun, and his rod would also afford him excellent amusement, as the streams are filled with delicious trout. From the Missouri to the mountains there are numerous routes, on each of which the Indians are a continual bugbear. The wagons toll along at the rate of from twelve to twenty miles a day, and continued vigilance is requisite throughout. The Overland stage coach, generally drawn by six horses, rattles along at the rate of seven or eight miles an hour. The passengers are allowed three meals a day, and for these the stoppage is usually thirty minutes. Sleep must be taken in a sitting posture, but after the first night or two no inconvenience is experixneed from the novelty of the position. All this will ere long be superseded by the luxa-rious sleeping car, and a trip to San Francisco from Boston or New York be completed with as little fatigue as a voyage across the Atlantic. In the heart of the Bocky Mountains are the Colorado gold mines, and they who doubt the paying character of this branch of industry have but to visit Denver or Central City to dispel the delusion. The estimated population of this dis-trict is upwards of fifteen thousand; five years ago it did not number two thousand, and was in fact a mere collection of log huts, mingled with the lodges of the Indians. From the castern base of the Rocky Mountains to Salt Lake City is 500 miles. The Salt Lake valley is charming in all its natural features. The Ameri-can is only filled with shame that the Government has permitted the apostate Young to dwell here so long in peace, with his thousand wives, to the utter disgrace of the nation. From Salt Lake City to Austin, Nevada, is three hundred and fifty miles. This city contains a population of about ten thousand, and is the point from which radiates nearly all the business of the State, as it is near the centre, and will eventu-ally become the capital. Nevads, last year, added to the treasure of the world over $30,000,000, nearly $3,000,000 a month. It is by this enormous production of bullion she has gained for herself the enviable title of Silver State. California is the golden and Nevada the silver State of the world. Fifty miles south of Austin is the famous Mammoth dis-trict, in which the mines of the Hamilton Company, of Philadelphia, are situated, and which bid fair to rival any on the coast. The developments of the mines in Central Ne-vada establish the fact beyond controversy that companies organized on good ledges, with prompt and competent superintendents, can be made to yield larger returns on the use the nade to yield larger returns on the investment of capital than almost any other branch of industry where large amounts are required to carry it forward. True, silver mining enter-prises have failed. So have banking enterprises and mercantile houses. Success is the certain inheritance of some in every profession or calling, while failure is just as certainly the inherit-ance of others. This is not the fault of the ance of others. This is not the fuult of the business in which the parties are engaged, but, on the contrary, the fault is in the manner in which the business is conducted. The same rule which guides the successful merchant and the banker to fortune will, if sedulously fol-lowed, prove equally triendly to those engaged in other occupations. From Mammouth to Virginia is one hundred and thirty miles. This is the point where silver mining was first inaugurated on the Pacific coast. Here is situated the celebrated Comstock lode, and it is in fact the groundwork on which is based all the business of the city, with its population of 12,000 or 15,000 industrious Americans and foreigners. Ten miles distant is Carson, the present capital of the State. Here, as in Vir-ginia, all depend on the yield of the mines. On the Atlantic coast agriculture is the basis, or tonchestone of all commercial and other basi.

general activity prevails; if bad, distrust and depression tollow. The mining interests are to the Facille States precisely what agricul-ture is to the Atlantic. These are the two great elements of wealth, prosperity, and happiness to the world; they are therefore justly entitled to the paramount attention of all classes. With a bountful barvest, and a rich re-ward for the miners' toil, every branch of in-dustry must prosper, but without the harvest and the precious metals (silver and gold), all enterprise must dwindle away, and finally stand still. Lei them, then, be fortered, From Car-90 enterprise must dwindle away, and finally stand still. Let them, there, be fortered. From Car-son City to Pincerville, California, much of the country is wild, even grand in its wildness; the balance is cozy little valleys, homes of happy bustanda.co. From Pincerville to the Bay City, the whole region is fall of interest, as well from its old rich placer mining as the therough development of its agricultural re-sources. Once in San Francisco, we are in the metropolis of the Pacific States, as much as we are of the Atlantic States when in New York.

OBITUARY. Dr. Charles King, LL. D.

Dr. Charles King, I.C. D. A private telegram by the cable announces the death of this gentleman near Rome, at Francetti. Dr. King was born in New York city, in March, 1789, and was the second son of the late Hon, Rufus King. He want to Harrow as Minister to the Court of St. James, and direr-wards took a preparatory course in Paris, with his brother. was of late years strongly Republican in his ylews. He leaves a large family. Judge William H. Hartlett of New Hampshire. This gentleman, who died a few days ago, at the age of forty, was born in Salisbury, and connected with a family that had furnished quite a list of prominent men. His father was samuel C. Bartlett, a merchant of Salisbury, who died last spring at a ripe old age. Among his relatives were the late eminent Hon. Icha-bod Bartlett, of Portsmouth, and the Hon, James Bartlett, of Portsmouth, and the Hon, James Bartlett, of Dover. He leaves four bro-thers-the Rev. Samuel C. Bartlett, D.D., of Chicago, the Rev. Joseph Bartlett of Huxton, Me., one a merchant at the West, and the youngest at Lome on the old place at Salisbury. Judge Bartlett fitted for college in his native town, and graduated at Darimouth in 1857. On leaving Hanover he stande to Concord, read law with the now Chief Justice Perley, and was admitted to the Merri-mack county bar in 1851. While a student he exhibited a remarkab e aptitude for the legal profession, and soon iffer commencing practice he secured a large basiness. For several years he was Solicitor for the city of Concord. In February, 1861, he was appointed to the bench, a position which he honored in an eminent de-ground has death. As a lawyer he took a high rank, and as a judge he exhibited taients which left him few equals of his age in New England.
